PROSPERITY FOR TRUSTS.

Purchasing Power of the People Almost Exhausted—Combines Waxing Fat.

"Prosperity, prosperity, prosperity"—we hear and read of it all the time, whether we listen to after dinner speeches or read the metropolitan newspapers. Where there is so much smoke there must be some fire—and there is. The earnings and profits of the railroads, trusts and monopolies are simply marvelous. The net profits of the steel trust in 1902 were $132,000,000; of the Standard Oil trust, $45,000,000; of the beef trust, probably $100,000,000; of the anthracite coal trust, perhaps $100,000,000, in spite of the six months' strike. The profits of the thousands of other trusts, including the natural monopoly trusts, were enormous.

But trusts and monopolies cannot thrive except by obtaining high prices for their products. Unfortunately somebody must pay these high prices. They are, in fact, paid by the whole of our 77,000,000 people. Upon all of them, except a comparatively few, rests the heavy burden of trust prosperity. The farmers of the west have been able to carry their share of this heavy burden because they have been blessed with excellent crops for five or six years, and, because of poor crops in the rest of the world, have sold their products for high prices. But for these facts the trusts would have been compelled to be more moderate in their charges, and the cost of living would not have increased so greatly—over 40 per cent. in five years.

Wage earners have been trying to get advances in wages which would enable them to live through these trying prosperity times, but as usual, wages do not rise as quickly or as much as prices, and at least half of our population are struggling along and waiting and hoping for "hard times" and lower prices. Do you doubt this statement? Consider a few facts.

Organized charity never had greater difficulty than during the past winter in meeting the demands upon it. Rev. Father Tewes, of New York, is quoted as saying that "There never was such general suffering and extreme poverty as this winter."

The Wool and Cotton Reporter has for weeks been complaining of the poor demand for woolen goods and of the comparatively low price of wool when other prices are very high and when the scarcity of wool the world over is greater than the present generation ever saw, and the "statistical position" of wool would warrant much higher prices. This great trade journal accounts for this lack of demand for woolens by saying (January 28), that the "diminished purchasing power of the masses will not admit of their paying more." It says the people cannot afford to pay for good woolens, and adds, significantly:

"In this connection, it is worth noting that the shoddy dealers are talking very bullishly, and are looking forward to an unusually profitable season. Rags are also very firm, and a large business in them is looked forward to. Facts of this nature cannot be overlooked in estimating the future of the wool market. . . . The wool manufacturer must necessarily be tempted under such conditions as exist at present . . . to make a liberal use of substitutes."

Again, in its issue of February 19, this journal explains the lower prices for wool by saying:

"It should be borne in mind, despite the alleged general prosperity of the country, the average person is feeling rather poor, by reason of his having to pay a great deal more for everything he buys than he has paid for a great many years. The average person today is under the sternest necessity to economize. The purchasing power of the average income is low rather than high."

These are the explanations, not of theorists, but of experts familiar with the facts. In plain language, we have to pony up so much to the trusts that we cannot afford to wear woolen clothes and are, instead, wearing more and more clothes made from cotton and old rags ground up. From this we see that trust prosperity means shoddy prosperity, and that trust prosperity is, in fact, shoddy prosperity for the masses. It means untold wealth and luxury for the few monopolists and hard work for the masses at wages that leave them "under the sternest necessity to economize" that they may continue to exist and to pay trust prices. Great splendor and great squalor. But those in the squalor class can at least enjoy the privilege of reading about the great prosperity of those in the splendor class. To enjoy this privilege, a majority of the people are willing to vote to tax themselves and to pay trust prices to increase the profits and luxury of the monopolists. Great country this.

BYRON W. HOLT.

——President Roosevelt's opposition to removal of tariff protection from the trusts, as stated by him during the recent campaign, was on the ground that small industries competing with the trusts might suffer. But the present democratic proposition entirely meets and obviates that objection because it places the power to determine public necessity and the discretion to act entirely in the president's hands, whereby danger to small industries or to any other interests could be avoided.—St. Paul Globe.

——If Morgan and Rockefeller can and do dictate the anti-trust legislation of this country, there is going to be more doing in this country next year than at any other time since Lincoln came through a winner in 1860. It is up to the party in power to decide whether it will beat the trusts or itself.—Detroit Free Press.

PROSECUTIONS OF TRUSTS.

Neither as a Destroyer Nor a Preventer Has the Sherman Law Been Effective.

Judge Grosscup's decision that the beef trust as it exists is an unlawful combination, violating the Sherman law, even if it shall finally be upheld by the supreme court, will not necessarily destroy the monopoly in meat, says the New York World.

Since the Sherman antitrust law was passed, in July, 1890, the federal government has instituted 26 suits under it. Eleven of the 26 have been lost outright; two are still pending—the Northern Securities and the beef trust suits; and in only ten of them has the government got a square decision in its favor. Of these ten successful suits brought by the federal government in 13 years four were against combinations of laboring men, leaving six as the total number of decisions scored by the government against trusts strictly so-called.

Moreover, these six successes of the government, when examined, were court successes only. Two of them were the decisions against the Trans-Missouri Freight association and the Joint Traffic association, and forbade the making of traffic or pooling arrangements between parallel or competing lines of railroad. The net result of those decisions was that the particular forms of association prohibited were abandoned, and in their place much larger consolidations of railroads were created, such as the Great Southern and Great Northern mergers.

The Standard Oil company has been decreed out of existence in many states, but it does business in all of them just as if nothing had happened. The sugar trust was long ago declared illegal in this state and put into the hands of a receiver, yet it still lives and thrives. It simply went over to New Jersey and reorganized under a new charter, which in no way affected its actual monopoly of the market or the price of sugar to consumers.

Judge Grosscup himself pointed out in a recent address at the University of Nebraska that all the trusts existing in the United States to-day have been created since the passage of the Sherman act, with but 13 exceptions. It is evident that neither as a destroyer of trusts nor as a preventer of their creation has the Sherman act had any considerable effect. In the case of the beef trust it is notorious that plans have been already matured to reincarnate it if it is dissolved, in a new form which lawyers believe will make it secure against legal assault.

JUBILANCE OF THE TRUSTS.

The great trust magnate, Rockefeller, has played a flim-flam game on the president and it is remarkable how easily the latter was imposed upon by Mr. John D. Rockefeller and his pals in the senate. At least, if President Roosevelt was not imposed on, he must have been in league with the flim-flamers to fool the people.

The inside history of the telegrams sent by Rockefeller to some nine United States senators, peremptorily ordering them to stop all anti-trust legislation, shows a queer condition of affairs in the higher councils of the republican party. When the republican leaders found that the democrats looked with such disdain upon the so-called anti-trust legislation that the republican leaders and the trust magnates had concocted, and would say not a word against it, they feared the result of this silence on the minds of the voters. Something had to be done to make it appear that the trusts were being curbed and the job was put up that Rockefeller should telegraph orders to stop all anti-trust legislation, and two of the telegrams were exhibited to the president. He made public the fact of the telegrams having been received and immediately it was announced by the administration press that here was evidence of the trust-busting mania of the legislation.

The trust magnates in Wall street are now jubilant; they know that the legislation enacted is not only worthless, as far as their business is concerned, but that it in fact aids them by making the present interstate commerce law more to their liking by repealing the criminal clause. Such a disparity between promise and performance will not fool the voters many moons. Before the meeting of the Fifty-eighth congress, next December, the fact that the trusts and combines are still looting the people, with no law to restrain the robbers, will show that the Standard Oil trust and the beef combine are still the pets of the republican party.

OPINIONS AND POINTERS.

——The ship-subsidy bill has, so to speak, foundered.—Chicago Inter Ocean (Rep.).

——It is thought that with powerful restoratives, the trusts may survive Mr. Roosevelt's terrible knock-out blow.—Albany Argus.

——The people are especially disgusted with coal trusts and corners. They have been plundered and oppressed beyond the line of endurance and demand to be protected by effective government and legislative measures.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat (Rep.).

——It is startling indeed to hear Congressman Cannon, who has so long been known as a vigilant "watch-dog of the treasury," declaring that there is money enough in the treasury to warrant certain large expenditures. Is he cause a sudden liberalizing of mind or impending senility?—Providence Journal (Ind. Rep.).

A FARMER'S DEEDS.

Shot His Daughter and Mrs. Culver, Then Committed Suicide.

Henderson, Ky., March 6.—Allen Melton, a well to do farmer who fatally wounded his daughter and shot Mrs. John Culver, committed suicide Thursday in a barn when he found the building surrounded by bloodhounds which had been sent in pursuit of him. Melton entered and seeing his daughter drew a revolver and fired two shots.

Mrs. Culver ran into the room and Melton fired, the ball passing through her lungs. Melton went to the home of Dock Latta, two miles away, where he remained all night. Early Thursday morning he went home and Morganfield bloodhounds trailed him to a barn. When he heard them coming he swallowed a large amount of paris green and then shot himself through the head, falling dead. It is said he tried to hang his divorced wife and it is believed he returned to Union to kill his wife and this is thought the reason he did not suicide when he shot the girl.

The shooting was a most unusual one. The lads were the victims, it is claimed, of John Collins, known as "Goose" Collins, a river-front character, who, it is said, shot at the crowds of pedestrians crossing the bridge on their way home because he thought some one was throwing pebbles at him.

Other persons passing on the bridge had narrow escapes from being injured by the shots.

SEVERE ATTACK OF GRIP

"When I had an attack of the grip last winter (the second one) I actually cured myself with one bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says Frank W. Perry, Editor of the Enterprise, Shortsville, N. Y. "This is the honest truth. I at times kept from coughing myself to pieces by taking a teaspoonful of this remedy, and when the coughing spell would come on at night I would take a dose and it seemed that in the briefest interval the cough would pass off and I would go to sleep perfectly free from cough and its accompanying pains. To say the remedy acted as a most agreeable surprise is putting it very mildly. I had no idea that it could or would knock out the grip, simply because I had never tried it for such a purpose, but it did, and it seemed with the second attack of coughing the remedy caused it to not only be of less duration, but the pains were far less severe, and I had not a [illegible] contents of one bottle before Mr. Grip had bid me adieu." Mrs. Fred Unrath,
President Country Club, Benton Harbor, Mich.

"After my first baby was born I did not seem to regain my strength although the doctor gave me a tonic which he considered very superior, but instead of getting better I grew weaker every day. My husband insisted that I take Wine of Cardui for a week and see what it would do for me. I did take the medicine and was very grateful to find my strength and health slowly returning. In two weeks I was out of bed and in a month I was able to take up my usual duties. I am very enthusiastic in its praise."

Wine of Cardui reinforces the organs of generation for the ordeal of pregnancy and childbirth. It prevents miscarriage. No woman who takes Wine of Cardui need fear the coming of her child. If Mrs. Unrath had taken Wine of Cardui before her baby came she would not have been weakened as she was. Her rapid recovery should commend this great remedy to every expectant mother. Wine of Cardui regulates the menstrual flow.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXVIII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 18, 1903. NO. 22.

County Correspondence.

CRESCENT

March 14.—Chas. Groger, of Covington, was visiting relatives here, Sunday.

Mrs. Louisa Williams, of near Independence, is seriously ill.

On account of the wet weather, no tobacco beds have been sown.

Will Ficke bought and shipped a car load of bran to this place, last week.

Oliver Schadler, who has been sick for several weeks, is some better.

Miss Katie Butler, of Banklick, spent Friday with Miss Blanche Northcutt.

Miss Mabel Huron was the guest of Miss Blanche Tanner, of Erlanger, last week.

Miss Blanche Hogan, of Wood Lawn, Ohio, is the pleasant guest of relatives at this place.

Effie Hogrifle had a tobacco stripping Wednesday, and succeeded in finishing this crop.

Louis Safleider, of Cincinnati, was calling on friends at this place, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Thos. Rice and Walter Grubbs had a woodsawing, Thursday. They have a nice lot of wood out for summer use.

Mrs. Laura Williams spent Wednesday and Thursday visiting her daughter, Mrs. Robt. Franks, of Graut county.

BUFFALO.

Glad to report the sick in this vicinity all able to be out again.

Mr. Edward Hubbard is very poorly again, not expected to live.

Miss Nellie Rouse entertained Miss Jessie Utz, Thursday afternoon.

Jas. McAtee and J. Q. Elstun dined with James Stephens, of Bellevue, Sunday.

Mrs. Mary Aylor, of Big Bone, was calling on Miss Bertha Shinkle, Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Eita Clements entertained Mrs. Susie Utz, Mrs. Emma Marshall and Miss Jessie Utz, last Wednesday.

Mrs. A. J. Utz and little granddaughter, Jessie, spent the day with Alonzo Utz and family, one day the past week.

Word came here of the marriage of Miss Mae Orr, one of Kentucky's pretty girl's. Miss Mae moved from this place to Indiana, where she met Mr. Elmer Gurley, who is now her husband. Her many friends here extend to her their congratulations, and wish them both health and happiness as they float down the stream of life.

FLICKERTOWN

March 14—Fruit men say the peach crop is killed.

Work will begin on the bridge as soon as the weather will permit.

Mrs. Dick Hensley has been considerably indisposed the past two weeks.

Mrs. Bert Smith and children spent Saturday night and Sunday in Aurora, Ind.

Mrs. L. Nichols, who was taken suddenly ill last Thursday, is still quite poorly.

Chas. Hensley has an ewe that gave birth to four lambs, one day last week—all strong healthy lambs.

Botts & Setters will bring up a barge and float their lumber out, if the back-water gets to the mouth of Ashby Fork.

Wm. Smith and wife, of Addyston, Ohio, are visiting relatives here. Mr. Smith has been under the care of a doctor for several weeks.

Chas. Hensley says he will give a road through his place from the Woolper pike near Lucien Ryle's house, to the creek road opposite the old school house, if the people will put a bridge across Woolper at that point.

Our young friend from the Aurora ferry, and a says friend, attended a dance in this neighborhood last Thursday night. The last accounts we had from the ferry, he had not returned to his post of duty. We hope Al has not been kidnapped by his fair companion.

WALTON.

Legrand Sanders and Eugene and Mrs. Demoisey were visitors here on Sunday the 15th inst.

W. H. Metcalfe and family including Dr. C. C. and lady, moved on Monday, to the Metcalfe farm in Kenton.

Mrs. Fannie Hampton and Mrs. Ezra Wilhoit, of the Florence precinct, were guests of Mrs. James Cross, last Saturday.

Mrs. E. P. Holder, who makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. N. W. Northcutt, of Covington, is paying a short visit to her relatives and old friends in and around Walton.

Miss Esther Underhill left her home near here, one day last week, and as she did not say how long she intended to be absent, lest the folks should be uneasy about her, the Recorder man assures them that she was only having a good time with her cousin Mrs. W. S. Underhill, of the Phoenix hotel, this place.

Dr. B. K. and Mrs. Menifee moved into the residence of W. H. Metcalfe, and are delighted with the reception given them by our people. The following clip from the Messenger, of Oakland Ill., shows that the Dr. maintained his reputation where ever he has been: "Dr. Menifee and his family this week departed for their future home in the state of Ky. These people have been in the city for a little over a year. They are fine people of the old Blue Grass kind and of sterling quality. They have made many friends here who regret to have them leave the community. The doctor had a good practice and he had the confidence of his patrons. We wish for them in their new home an abundance of success."

COMMISSARY.

Mar. 13.—Rocky branch and Middle creek have not been so full and badly torn up for years, as they were Saturday week.

Jesse Louden and wife were guests of his parents, Richard Louden and wife, Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Flave Louden went to Aurora, Saturday to visit her mother, Mrs. Lonlker. She will return today.

Jesse Louden's woodsawing, which was set for last Tuesday, was postponed until next day, on account of the rain.

Bernard Rogers and wife, of Bellevue. Spent Saturday night and Sunday with Mrs. Rogers' parents, W. T. Ryle and wife, near here.

Miss Grace Slayback and Miss Stella Garland, of Erlanger, after visiting friends and relatives here for several days returned home, last Saturday.

Hugh French from near French, Indiana, visited his uncle and aunt, Ben Cason and wife, and uncle Tommie Roberts, on Middle creek, last Wednesday.

It is rumored that Frank Cantwell will move to Indiana in the near future, at least he will leave Albert Kelly's farm, and a Mr. Edington will take his place.

Bert Parsons has written his wife that he has succeeded in renting a house convenient to his business, and she will go today to prepare for housekeeping.

Andrew Acra, one of Middle creek's old bachelors, came up last Tuesday to get some work done. He is something of a smith himself, but gets stuck occasionally, and comes to the Commissary for help. Owing to the rain he spent the forenoon in vain.

Some think that where a person is fined and also given a jail sentence that he can satisfy the jail sentence by the payment of money which is a mistake, and one under which the jury that tried a breach of the peace in Burlington, last week, labored. When a person is given a jail sentence the only way to keep out of jail is to give a bond and take an appeal and secure a reversal of the judgment, or secure a suspension of the sentence and get the Governor to pardon him.

Wm. Slayback and Wm. Suelling sold their tobacco, last week, to Berkshire, of Petersburg, and delivered it at Bellevue. Slayback had 9,771 pounds, for which he got 6 cents around. Suelling had 9,524 pounds. He sold 2,597 pounds at 6 cents, and the remainder at 4 cents. Dan McCarty, who sold earlier in the season had 4,540 pounds for which he got 7 cents around. This makes a total of 28,835 pounds raised on T. J. Walton's farm in 1902, which brought him and his tenants $1,420 96. Mr. Slayback's crop was grown on five acres of ground.

I have been requested to call for the reports of the Justices of the Peace on their inspection of the public roads for 1902. As I understand it the Justices were required to inspect the working of roads in their respective precincts, between the 1st and 10th of December, and, among other things, report auy neglect of duty on the part of road overseers, which report was to be made in ten days thereafter, for which service they were to receive $8 per day for not exceeding two days. If such reports have been made, the people of the neighborhood would like to see them.

Your humble scribe attended a woodsawing at Elbert Kelly's, Thursday, and had a jolly good time. In the afternoon the force was sufficient to run six saws, which were kept humming most of the time, except when Henry Phipps was dilating on the fox chase of the night before—the best and most exciting of the season, or when the Commissary was telling some of his many World's Fair premium jokes, two of which Ben Kelly had never heard, otherwise he would not have bitten at the bait. A nice lot of wood was sawed, and all enjoyed themselves, especially at the table. Before adjournment a sawing was announced for the next afternoon at Charley Kelly's, and Henry Phipps will have one this afternoon.

HEBRON.

Hubert Gaines, of Burlington, spent Saturday and Sunday visiting J. W. and C. E. Clore.

Miss Elizabeth Clore and Misses Ola and Flora Dye were guests of Miss Eva Aylor, Sunday.

Miss Pearl Crisler, of Petersburg, spent several days, last week, with relatives at this place.

Wilfred Bullock had charge of the funeral of Jacob Reitman's child Sunday. They took it to Price Hill for interment.

The youngsters had such a good time Friday evening, at the ball given here that they danced until 4 o'clock. Several neighborhoods were well represented.

The greatest danger from colds and grip is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for this disease we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous disease. It will cure a cold or an attack of the grip in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

On Sunday the 8th inst., Bro. Darnell, of the Lexington Bible College, preached for the Christian church here in place of the regular pastor. It was his first sermon, although he is in his 23d year. All were well pleased with the sermon, and will be glad to hear him again.

I extend my thanks to the brothers and sisters, captains, teachers and pupils for their aid and earnest efforts in behalf of the Christian church Sunday school, and may the progress our school has made help all Sunday schools and communities in Sunday school worship. The Hebron and Taylorsport Gun Clubs met on the latter's grounds, last Saturday, and shot their second event for the championship. The result was a tie, each club breaking 10 birds. The weather was unfavorable, being a dark gloomy day, and the fog eminating from the sale of Bishop's beer sold at Delhi, settling on the ground made it difficult to see the birds in their flight—however, there were some fine scores made. Price, Ed and Henry Quick were high men, each breaking 17 out of 25. The tie will be shot off next Saturday on the Hebron grounds. It is hard to tell which will lose its scalp.

EXTRAORDINARY SESSION.

Senate Convened to Finish Up Much Needed Legislation.

Washington, March 10.—The legislative session of the senate Monday lasted six minutes. The oath of office was administered to Gallinger (N. D.), Clark (Ark.) and Stone (Mo.). At 12:06 the senate went into executive session to consider the Panama canal treaty.

Washington, March 11.—Senator Morgan Tuesday secured the first material concession that has been made to him by the senate in connection with the Panama canal treaty with Colombia. This consisted of an agreement to attach the Spooner canal act bodily to the treaty. This change was made in compliance with a request presented by Senator Lodge during the day's executive session of the senate Tuesday for the necessity of it had been discussed by Mr. Morgan and other members of the senate committee. Mr. Daniel expressed the opinion that as the preamble to the treaty calls for the attachment of a copy of the act that attachment was necessary to preserve the terms of the domument intact.

Washington, March 12.—Decided progress was made Wednesday toward reaching an agreement for a vote on the Colombian canal treaty, and when the senate adjourned there was a general understanding that Thursday, in all probability, some hour next Tuesday would be definitely agreed on as the time when a vote should be taken on the treaty and amendments. All statements to this effect, however, were accompanied by the announcement that there were yet some details to be arranged leaving it impossible absolutely to conclude the agreement before Thursday. There is, however, no doubt in the minds of leading senators that the vote will be taken on Tuesday. The Guatemalan and Mexican extradition treaties were ratified. The understanding among the members of the committee on foreign relations is that none of the reciprocity treaties before the committee shall be reported for consideration this session and that the Cuban treaty will be the last to receive the attention of the committee for the present.

Washington, March 13.—There were important developments Thursday regarding the treaties pending in the senate. It was decided to vote on the Panama canal treaty on Tuesday next and the Cuban reciprocity treaty was reported to the senate by the committee on foreign relations. The end of the work for which the extra session was called therefore is in sight. The agreement to vote on the canal treaty was arrived at soon after the senate assembled at noon and without discussion of moment. The Cuban treaty with the various amendments agreed on by the committee on foreign relations then was reported by Mr. Cullom and at his request it was read for the information of the senate. The progress made Thursday leads many senators to predict an adjournment by the close of next week.

Washington, March 14.—The republican steering committee of the senate Friday considered the general condition of business in the senate. The opinion was expressed that it would be possible to fix the day for the final close of the session not later than next Friday or Saturday. No resolutions to that effect, however, will be introduced until an effort shall have been made to name a day for voting on the Cuban reciprocity treaty. It has been arranged that Senator Spooner shall make the last speech in the Panama canal debate, which under the general agreement fixing the time for a vote is to be made public. The democratic senators will caucus to decide on a course to be pursued in the senate with reference to amendments to the pending treaties.

Washington, March 16.—The condition of Justice Day of the United States supreme court, who is ill here with pneumonia, continues encouraging. Dr. B. L. "Justice Day's condition is good. There has been no extension of the pneumonia. All symptoms favorable."

After his last visit at 11 o'clock Sunday night Dr. Harden issued the following bulletin:

"Justice Day's condition continues good and he is comfortable to-night."

The justice is still a very sick man and still is in a very serious condition, but his family are hopeful that he will recover.

PATRONAGE OF REPUBLICANS.

Of the large army of appointments that are to be made under the new department of commerce and labor, the average pay of each will be nearly $2,000. This shows what a large number of good-paying places are at the disposal of republican senators and congressmen. Those who want a position at the national capital, where the work is comparatively easy, and the hours short—from nine to four—should at once apply and urge their friends to write to the senators and representatives from their states, to have them appointed. There are a large number, probably 75, examiners and special examiners, $2,000 and expenses, also a number of such places as storekeepers, $1,200; telegraph operators, $1,600; telephone operators, $1,200, and others, too numerous to mention, all outside of the civil service.

Local politicians have a fine chance to press their political claims for such places as chiefs of divisions, with a salary of $2,000 or $3,000, of which there are a large number to be appointed. As the trusts are principally interested in these latter-named offices, only those should apply who have not openly expressed an opinion adverse to the trusts, for the antecedents of applicants will be closely investigated.

"ON TO THE WAR."—The Commoner.

The most influential senators, who will have most to say in the distribution of this patronage are Aldrich, Alger, Allison, Beveridge, Cullom, Depew, Elkins, Fairbanks, Foraker, Frye, Gallinger, Hale, Hanna, Kean, Lodge, Platt (Conn.), Platt (N. Y.), Quay, Scott, Spooner and Wetmore. Among the representatives: Grosvenor, Payne, Dalzell, Steele, Tawney, Long, Babcock, Metcalf, Wadsworth, Hemenway, Fowler, Hopkins (new senator), Graff, Southard, Corliss, Taylor, Olmsted, Weeks, Wachter, Gillet, Overstreet, Curtis, Stewart, Wagner, Cousins, Hitt, Cooper, Hepburn, Sullowy, Gardner, Bartholt, Hull, Dick, Lacey, Davidson, Gillett, Warner and Burton. These senators and representantives are known to be looked to by the trusts to conserve their interests and have great influence with the administration, though any republican senator will doubtless have at least one good place for one of his constituents. Now is the time to strike for a good position. Democrats, it is needless to say, need not apply.

OPINIONS AND POINTERS.

——The ship subsidy bill evidently doesn't know when it is dead.—Indianapolis News (Ind.)

——The trust administration is satisfied with the trust legislation enacted by congress. So, on the whole, are the trusts.—Portland Argus (Dem.)

——It will be worth while to preserve the list of 800 trusts compiled by Mr. Littlefield and see at the end of the year, say, how many of them have succumbed to the drastic and vigorous antitrust legislation enacted by Mr. Roosevelt's congress.—Chicago Chronicle.

——Republican organs sound the praises of the present congress because it has not passed the Payne-Frye-Hanna subsidy bill, "which would have enriched the already rich corporations at the expense of the people." Next they swell the paean because the same congress has refused to meddle with the Dingley tariff, which has long been enriching already rich corporations at the expense of the people. What is an organ good for unless it can blow hot and blow cold out of the same pipes?—Chicago Chronicle.

——Senators who are trying to checkmate the sovereign will of the people in respect of control of the "trusts" will not succeed. They will succeed in convicting the system by which such instruments of the "trusts" are made possible. Such witness are they hearing against the present method of election to the United States senate that there will be nothing left for the American people to do, while they are establishing control of the "trusts," but to establish at the same time control of their United States senate.—N. Y. Press (Rep.).

DEFEAT OF STATEHOOD.

Platform Promises of Republicans Broken—Hanna's Extraordinary Doctrine.

The defeat of the statehood bill at this session of congress will prevent for some time and perhaps forever the admission of New Mexico and Arizona as separate states. The republicans are promising to introduce a bill in the next congress to bring in both territories as one state, but as the people of both New Mexico and Arizona object to being merged, even if such a measure was passed, it might not be ratified by the people. One great objection raised to a merger of the two territories is the enormous distance from the eastern to the western boundaries, which is over 700 miles, as the crow flies, but the greatest objection is that the people of the two territories object to being joined together.

The promise made in the republican platforms of 1896 and 1900 that New Mexico, Arizona and Oklahoma should be admitted to statehood has, like many other republicnn promises, gone for naught. This record for making promises in national platforms, with the evident intention of not keeping them, will throw a doubt upon any future planks of that nature and indeed upon all declarations of the policy to be declared by the republicans.

Senator Hanna explains this shortcoming of his party and incidentally apologizes for his own opposition to statehood, by expounding the doctrine that, when both parties adopt the same planks and make the same promises there is no issue, and they are therefore meaningless.

It will be well for voters to remember this when they justify their adhesion to the republican party in 1904, by promises made in the platform, for there is no doubt that both parties will make strong declarations against the trusts. Thus, according to Hanna, there will be no issue between the parties on that important subject, as the republicans are only bound by promises when the democrats disagree with them.

If Senator Hanna was not chairman of the republican national committee and looked to as the leader of the party, such an audacious doctrine, that virtually modifies the promises made to the people on most important subjects, would not be worthy of notice, but as the great majority of the republican senators acquiesced in the doctrine, it must stand as their opinion also.

The position of the democrats has been consistent, their platform declared for statehood for the territories and the vote and effort of the representatives of the party have been a unit to carry out the pledge made. Their position cannot be gainsaid, neither can it be objected to, except upon partisan bigotry, for the treaty that ceded the territories to the United States promised full political rights. Now that the territories have a larger population than other states had when admitted, it is a matter of fairness they should be given statehood, according to the political division they have so long enjoyed.

Trusts Not to Be Curbed.

The depth and sincerity of the republican oligarchy's desire to "curb the trusts" was exhibited when the United States senate by an almost straight party vote refused to take up the Littlefield anti-trust bill. This was the one measure of the session which most certainly promised to make clear the doings of the "bad trusts," at least those to be formed in the future. Its passage would have shown that the majority "mean business;" its shelving shows they do not.

——Mr. Hanna is responsible for the latest at "Boy Orator" Beveridge's expense. Having left Mr. Beveridge speaking, in the senate chamber, Mr. Hanna remarked that he had been absent a long time, and would look in to see what was going on. He soon came back and said: "It's all right. The Wabash is still overflowing its banks."—Albany Argus.

——Mr. Hanna has done enough towards delivering the goods to justify his asking the shipping trust for another contribution to the campaign fund.—Detroit Free Press.

A ROUGH ESTIMATE.

Novel Method of Ascertaining What a Loss of Twenty Pounds Looked Like.

A well-known judge, who is as famous for his wit as his corpulency, was much disturbed in mind by his tendency to ever-increasing stoutness. He tried many remedies. At length a friend suggested that he should take a course of treatment at certain hot springs. He immediately set out for the place, sojourned for a few weeks at it, managed to get rid of a good deal of superfluous flesh, and returned home in a most happy and jocular frame of mind, relates an exchange.

On the first morning after his return, when he was wending his way to the courthouse, he came to the butcher shop where his family were supplied with meat. Marching inside, he said:

"Cut me off 20 pounds of pork."

The butcher sharpened his knife and at once complied. The judge looked at the meat for a minute or two and then walked off.

"Shall I send the pork to your house, my lord?" inquired the butcher, who felt that the judge had overlooked instructions.

"Oh, no," was the reply, given with a smile. "I don't want it. I have fallen off just 20 pounds, and I only wanted to have an idea of how much it was!"

HOW HE GOT IT.

Jones' Easy Way of Laying Up Money While He Was in the Legislature.

Some recent developments at Jefferson City have recalled a story that used to be told about a former Buchanan county representative in the legislature. Before his election to the legislature he was chronically "broke." When he returned from Jefferson City he exhibited $500 in good crisp greenbacks. Some of his friends "jollied" him about his prosperity, relates the Kansas City Journal.

"You didn't have a cent when you went to the legislature, did you, Jones?" said one of them.

"Not a blamed cent," said Jones.

"As a matter of fact, I lent you half your railroad fare, didn't I?"

"I believe you did."

"Well, you were down in Jefferson City about 40 days. You got five dollars a day. Now what we want to know is how you managed to save $500 out of a total income of $200."

"Come closer," whispered Jones, "and I'll tell you how I did it. I had my washing done at home."

During the interval which has elapsed I have had occasion to resort to Doan's Kidney Pills when I noticed warnings of an attack. On each and every occasion the results obtained were just as satisfactory as when the pills were first brought to my notice. "AND AT MIDNIGHT."

TEXT—"And at midnight there was a cry made."—Matt. 25:6.

SOME of the most tragic and most momentous events in profane and sacred history have transpired during the quiet hush of the midnight hour. Man has frequently chosen that period to plot and to plan, to work and to execute, and God has often found it a convenient season in which to move among men and carry out His eternal purposes. The words of our text are taken from the parable of the ten virgins, and mark the advent of the Bridegroom as He comes to claim His bride and go into the marriage supper. But it must not be supposed that they fix definitely the hour of the second coming of Christ, for Christ Himself declared that "of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels which are in Heaven, neither the Son, but the Father," and so

"It may be at morn, when the day is awaking,
When sunlight thro' darkness and shadow is breaking,
That Jesus will come in the fullness of glory,
To receive from the world 'His own.'

"It may be at midday, it may be at twilight,
It may be, perchance, that the blackness of midnight
When Jesus receives 'His own.'"

The waiting church, Christ's bride, represented by the ten virgins, hears the cry and trims the lamps in readiness to receive its coming Lord. The five wise virgins, with the oil of the Holy Spirit filling their hearts and keeping the flame of their faith burning brightly, pass quickly on to meet their coming Lord and go with Him into the marriage supper. The five foolish virgins, whose heads have received the truth in regard to the Christ, but whose hearts have not opened up to receive the Holy Spirit, find that the lack quenches the flame of their faith in the crucial time of the coming, and while they go in eagerness, apparently, to supply that deficiency, the door is shut and the wail of disappointment and anguish bursts from their lips.

"BUT," declares Rev. G. Campbell Morgan, the eminent Bible scholar and exponent of the Scriptures, "we have no warrant for speaking of the foolish virgins as lost. The punishment to them is that they will have to pass through the tribulation from which the wise have escaped. This is no exception to the general rule of Scripture, by which oil is symbolic of the Holy Spirit. Those who will be ready to go in with the King to the marriage feast will be such as have a full 'supply of the Spirit of Jesus Christ.'"

The tribulation to which Mr. Morgan refers is the period which elapses between the time of translation of the church and the return of the church with its Lord to rule over the world during the millennial age. The foolish virgins who were watching, but not ready, will be left behind in the world to endure the trials and distress of the tribulation period. But, to pass on to the thoughts which we wish to draw from our text, for it is not our purpose to develop the plain lessons of the parable, which are the necessity of preparedness for the coming of Christ, and the absolute inability of one saint giving a part of his supply of the Holy Spirit to fill up the lack of the careless one who has failed to obtain the precious oil.

THE Midnight Hour.—It was at midnight that the Bridegroom came. Darkness, grim darkness, set on her throne, the conqueror of the day. Strange hour for the Bridegroom to come! It is not so with man. The king of day is at the zenith of his glory when the bridegroom of the fashionable church wedding comes to claim his bride at the altar. But Christ, the Bridegroom, is coming at the black hour of midnight to take to Himself His bride, the church. It is significant. It is declared of Jesus upon His first advent into the world that He came as Light into darkness, but, "the darkness comprehended it not," and we sing:

"The whole world was lost in the darkness of sin."

It was dark at Jesus' first coming. It will be the blackness of midnight which will wrap the world in its folds when He comes again. The morning light may be just breaking in the east, awaking the world to another day, but if it marks the advent of the returning Lord, it will be the midnight of the world's sin. The sun may have sailed majestically up the blue of the heavens and be riding gloriously in its midday splendor, but if the Lord, coming in the chariot of the clouds and heralded by the "voice of the archangel and the trump of God," shall then come, it will be the midnight of Satan's greatest triumphs over men. The birds may have caroled their last good-night to the mighty king of the day as gorgeously robed in scarlet and gold he withdraws into his palace behind the western hills, but if the hand on the dial of God's eternal purposes has moved to the hour set by God for the return of Christ, the Christ will come winging upon the fullness of God's time to earth, and His advent will find the world wrapt in the midnight of its own thoughts and plans and purposes.

"At midnight there was a cry made: Behold, the bridegroom cometh."

WE CANNOT know the day on the calendar of time which will echo with the heavenly shout and mark the flight of the triumphant church from the earth to meet its Lord in the upper air. We may not discover the wonderful secret by searching ever so long and diligently in God's Word, for it is not there, but is locked in the innermost recesses of the heart of God. We may not even dare to guess the hour, for when God says no man knoweth the day nor the HOUR, neither the angels, and not even the Son, but the Father only, it places the question absolutely outside the pale of human reason or the right to deal with it in an effort to unfold its mystery. It is worse than folly to attempt to figure out a problem that the mighty angels of Heaven are not able to solve, and of which even the Son on the throne is kept in ignorance, and which He has no desire to know. He abides in the will of the Father, and it is enough to know that God knows, and that in the fullness of His time the joy and hope of the Christian heart will be realized. It is enough to know that this same Jesus is coming again, and that when He comes the dead in Christ Jesus will rise from their graves, and with the living saints will be caught up into the air to meet their Lord. It is enough for us so know this and to "comfort one another with these words." But let us heed Christ's warning word: "WATCH," and in faithful service be patient unto His coming. For, James goes on to say, "behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and the latter rain. Be ye also patient; stablish your hearts; for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh."

BUT although we may not know the day nor the hour, God in His Word has set certain sign posts which will indicate to the believing heart that the day is approaching. But, Paul declares, "that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition; who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshiped; so that he, as God, sitteth in the temple of God, shewing himself that he is God." The disciples desired to know the sign of the coming of the Lord, and Jesus in the twenty-fourth chapter of Matthew outlined to them some of the conditions which would prevail in the world previous to His second coming, and closing with the declaration that "this Gospel of the Kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come."

And these words of Jesus open up to us two certainties in connection with the second coming of Christ which help us to more clearly understand the significance of the midnight hour as marking the advent of the Bridegroom, in the parable before us. First, the unbelief of the world will be full, and second, the church, the body of Christ, will be complete. The preaching of the Gospel of Jesus Christ always does one of two things: It either brings salvation to the soul, or it hardens the soul to the point of at last finally rejecting the Christ.

THE same sun which melts the wax so that it may be molded into new form bakes the clay into the hardness of adamant. The miracles which were wrought by the hand of Moses in the land of Egypt softened the hearts of the Hebrew children so that they recognized God's claim upon them and were willing to be led out of their bondage, while at the same time they hardened the heart of Pharaoh to the point of final and absolute rejection of God's claims upon him, so that, notwithstanding every home in Egypt was a house of death and the land shook under the awful judgment of God, he dared to rush out with his great army to fight against God, and God's people. It was the hour of midnight which marked the close of Pharaoh's probation and sounded the terrible note of God's judgment. It was the midnight hour which revealed the power of the blood of the paschal lamb to the watching and expectant Hebrew children and brought the light and joy of God's presence as He delivered them from their bondage. The point of Egypt's final rejection of God's appeal and the point of the Hebrews' full obedience to the will of God touched at the midnight hour. The midnight hour of the coming of the Bridegroom will be the point where the world as a whole has finally rejected the Christ and where the church of Christ has been made complete by the last possible soul in the uttermost parts of the earth being brought to a saving faith in Christ. It is for this that the Bridegroom tarries, and it is only God who knows when the world's unbelief will come to full fruitage, and when the church, the body of Christ, will be made complete.

THE World's Midnight.—It will be marked by two great circumstances or conditions, as follows: The withdrawal of the Spirit of God, in fulfillment of the early declaration of God in Genesis 6:3, "My Spirit shall not always strive with man." And the unrestrained power of Satan which will lead him to "sit in the temple of God, and shew himself that he is God." What this will mean is hinted at in the Scriptures, and is referred to as the time of the tribulation. The expression "hell or earth" will then certainly have its full realization. Human wisdom human virtue, humanitarianism, sociology, fraternalism, philanthropy and all the other lauded bulwarks of civilization will have their boastec strength tested. The deceitfulness of the human heart will be laid bare in the presence of the unrestrained power of the arch deceiver, for there will be nothing then to hold him in check. The human arm will be shown to be too short and too weak to wrestle with the arts and devices and skill of the devil. Man is not yet ready to give up the task of overcoming and controling the evil in the world. He still thinks he can succeed and will ultimately triumph, but if one will be honest with himself and read the newspapers he will have to admit that there are no present indications that success is any nearer than when the Babelites set out to build to Heaven and link the two in lasting union. But in the time of the tribulation the power of Satan will be manifested and realized, and man will see the utter folly of hoping to forge the chains which will bind him. Christ forged the chains during His forty days in the wilderness which alone are strong enough to bind Satan, and when He returns at the end of the tribulation period to rule with His saints over the world the chains will be put into full use and Satan will be bound. John in prophetic vision saw this when he wrote: "And I saw an angel come down from Heaven, having the key of the bottomless pit and a great chain in his hand. And he laid hold on the dragon, that old serpent, which is the devil, and Satan, and bound him a thousand years, and cast him into the bottomless pit, and shut him up, and set a seal upon him, that he should deceive the nations no more, till the thousand years should be fulfilled." That will mark the dawning of a new day for the world. But the midnight must yet come bringing in the woes of tribulation before the millennial age can come.

THE Christian's Midnight.—It is bright with hope. It is filled with joy, for its stillness will be broken by the shout of triumph of the descending Lord; it will ring with the heavenly voice of the archangel, it will thrill with the awakening trump of God. The bride longs for the return of the bridegroom and rejoices exceedingly when she hears his hurried tread and feels his love clasp about her. The church, made up of the true believers, by whatever name or denomination called, is the bride of Jesus Christ. She is expectant of her coming Lord. Her joy will be complete when He does come and takes her to be forever with Him. Resting upon the promises of God, as the midnight darkness draws near, her heart can swell with music and she can sing:

"Thou art coming, O my Saviour!
Thou art coming, O my King!
In Thy beauty all resplendent,
In Thy glory all transcendent;
Well may we rejoice and sing!
Coming! In the opening east,
Herald brightness slowly swells;
Coming! O my glorious Priest,
Hear we not Thy golden bells?

"Thou art coming! Thou art coming!
We shall meet Thee on Thy way,
We shall see Thee, we shall know Thee,
We shall bless Thee, we shall show Thee
All our hearts could ever say!
What an anthem that will be,
Ringing out our love to Thee,
Pouring out our rapture sweet
At Thine own all-glorious feet!

"Thou art coming! We are waiting
With a hope that cannot fail;
Asking not the day or hour,
Resting on Thy word of power
Anchored safe within the veil.
Time appointed may be long,
But the vision must be sure:
Certainty shall make us strong,
Joyful patience can endure!

"O the joy to see Thee reigning,
Thee, my own beloved Lord!
Every tongue Thy name confessing,
Worship, honor, glory, blessing,
Brought to Thee with glad accord!
Thee, my Master and my Friend,
Vindicated and enthroned!
Unto earth's remotest end

THE Shout, the Voice, the Trump.—"And at midnight there was a cry made." The ten virgins heard that cry, but there is no evidence that five of them heard the cry or knew it the bridegroom had come except as the five wise virgins who went in to the marriage supper were missed from their accustomed places. The waiting, expectant church will hear the shout of its Lord, and the voice of the archangel and the trump of God, but there is nothing in the Scriptures to lead one to believe that the world will be conscious of the music and the voices in the upper air. It will only know that those it had known are missing.

The delicately adjusted receiving instrument of the wireless telegraph will readily respond to the vibrations of the sending instrument across the ocean which is tuned to the same pitch, but all the instruments which are not so tuned would be as insensible to the ether waves flashing over the ocean as a dead body is insensible to pain. The Christian heart which is tuned to the expectant hope of a returning Lord need not fear that the thrill of the midnight cry will not be felt. The shout of the coming Christ will set the chords of the true believers' hearts to vibrating, and they will mount on the wings of faith to join their voices with the voice of the archangel while the trump of God fills the Heavens with its triumphant music. Ah, at midnight, what hope to make the dark hours of waiting bright! Ah, what need of watchfulness, that the heart may be tuned to hear the cry! Ah, what sad disappointment to be among the five foolish virgins who are shut out of the marriage supper! Oh, Christian, WATCH YE! You may be ready to go in with your Lord when He comes if you will.

The Grip Leaves Thousands in its Path
Weak, Nervous, Dyspeptic, Catarrh Wrecks.

"For Grip and the after effects like debility, nervousness, dyspepsia and other catarrhal conditions resulting from the Grip, in the entire Materia Medica I have found no remedy that equals Peruna for prompt action."—Dr. S. B. Hartman, President The Hartman Sanitarium.

From N. Y. Journal. "During the recent Grip epidemic, claiming a million victims or more, the efficiency of Peruna in quickly relieving this malady and its after effects has been the talk of the continent."

LIKE A DEMON grip has crossed our country, leaving behind scores of physical wrecks.

Victims of catarrh of the head, catarrh of the throat, catarrh of the lungs, catarrh of the stomach, catarrh of the kidneys, catarrh of the pelvic organs, are to be counted by hundreds of thousands. Grip is epidemic catarrh, and sows the seed of chronic catarrh within the system.

This is so true that few grip sufferers are able to make a complete recovery until they have used Peruna.

Never in the history of medicine has a remedy received such unqualified and universal eulogies as Peruna.

A New York Alderman's Experience.

Hon. Joseph A. Flinn, alderman Fifth District, writes from 104 Christopher street, New York City, as follows:

"When a pestilence overtakes our people we take precaution as a nation to preserve the citizens against the dread disease.

"La grippe has entered thousands of our homes this fall, and I noticed that the people who used Peruna were quickly restored, while those who depended on doctor's prescriptions, spent weeks in recovering, leaving them weak and emaciated.

"I had a slight attack of la grippe and at once took Peruna, which drove the disease out of my system in a few days and did not hinder me from pursuing my daily work.

"I should like to see our Board of Health give it official recognition and have it used generally among our poor sick people in Greater New York."—Joseph A. Flinn.

D. L. Wallace, a charter member of the International Barber's Union, writes from 15 Western avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.:

"Following a severe attack of la grippe I seemed to be affected badly all over. I suffered with a severe backache, indigestion and numerous ills, so I could neither eat nor sleep, and I thought I would give up my work, which I could not afford to do.

"One of my customers who was greatly helped by Peruna advised me to try it, and I procured a bottle the same day. I used it faithfully and felt a marked improvement. During the next two months I took five bottles, and then felt splendid. Now my head is clear, my nerves steady, I enjoy food, and rest well. Peruna has been worth a dollar a dose to me."—D. L. Wallace.

Mr. O. H. Perry, Atchison, Kansas, writes:

"Again, after repeated trials of your medicines, Peruna and Manalin, I give this as my expression of the wonderful results of your very valuable medicine in its effects in my case after repeated trials.

"First, it cured me of chronic bronchitis of fifteen years' standing by using two bottles of Peruna in January, 1894, and no return of it.

"After I was cured of bronchitis I had la grippe every winter for several winters. But, through the use of Peruna, it got gradually weaker in its severity, until it dwindled down to a mere stupor for two or three days. Now the stupor does not trouble me any more."—O. H. Perry.

A Congressman's Experience.

Gentlemen—"I am more than satisfied with Peruna, and find it to be an excellent remedy for the grip and catarrh. I have used it in my family and they all join me in recommending it as an excellent remedy."

Very respectfully,
George H. White.

If you do not receive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

He never takes luncheon alone, but always invites a colleague, with whom he shares the contents of his flask before they begin their midday meal.

THERE was a general fight on the floor of the Missouri House of Representatives last Friday. It originated in a charge made by Speaker Whitecotton that boodle was being used to defeat the School Text Book Bill. The doorkeeper and an unruly member started a fisticuff which became general.

County Court brought into town Monday one of the finest and best behaved crowds that have graced such an occasion for a long time, and the Courier was glad to observe that a large majority of them departed in the afternoon in the same condition as they came in the morning—duly sober.—Williamstown Courier. The Courier certainly does not mean to intimate that there have been occasions when more than half of those composing the large court day crowds in Williamstown went home other than sober.

SENATOR TILLMAN, of South Carolina, was recently plunging along through a driving rainstorm without an umbrella or any other protection from the wet. When he had almost reached his home a negro coachman, muffled up in a rubber coat and a rubber robe, shouted to him from his seat on a carriage: "Say, boss, will you ring the bell of that house? I don't want to get down, because I'll get all wet." With the water running in a small rivulet off his hat, Senator Tillman said a few things. He did not ring the bell.

THE United States Supreme Court affirmed the opinion of the Supreme Court of South Carolina in the case of John Broomfield vs. the State of South Carolina. Broomfield is a negro who resides in South Carolina and was convicted of murder. He alleged that he had been denied the equal protection of the law under the constitution because that, notwithstanding four-fifths of the people of the community are colored, all negroes were excluded from the grand jury by which he was indicted. Justice Holmes, who delivered the opinion of the court, said there is no proof of the allegation and therefore sustained the judgment of the State court, which was adverse to Broomfield.

Great stress is laid in congress on the fact of the inadequacy of some of the fines stipulated in the anti-trust provisions. It was contended in the house that the Hoar bill was too weak-kneed against violators of its provisions and the Elkins anti-rebate bill was regarded by the advocates as far too moderate in the matter of fines. The whole history of English attempts to suppress monopoly by terrible fines shows how futile it is where the spoils are sufficient to risk violating the law. Wrong systems never were abolished by fines. The true remedy is to abolish the laws which make the system possible. Until we repeal some of the laws under which the trusts were incorporated the fines will not save us.—Boston Globe.

IT recently came to our ears that a gentleman who published a paper for $1 a year, was in this county not long since, and, perhaps unintentionally, was sowing seeds of discontent among our patrons by saying the RECORDER is surely a big money maker at $1 50 a year. Having one of the gentleman's papers on our table, we took a few measurements for comparison. Deducting the displayed advertisements from his paper they left 442 inches of reading matter, which is set in large type with a strip of led between the lines. Deducting the advertisements from the RECORDER and there were left 715 inches of reading matter, which is set in small type with no leads between the lines. Now, taking the price of our voluble friends paper as a basis for determining what the price of the RECORDER should be, it is seen that by considering space alone it should be $1 60 a year. But then the manner in which the reading matter is set is a considerable factor in making the estimate, and as our friend would have to issue his paper at least twice a week to furnish his subscribers each week with as much reading matter as a single issue of the RECORDER carries, it follows that his paper being worth $1 a year the RECORDER is worth $2 a year.

IT is thought that Senator Fairbanks, of Indiana, will in a few days, announce himself a candidate for President. He will pay special attention to the rounding up of delegates in the South.

A telephone message from our Idlewild correspondent yesterday afternoon, said Rev. Sproles has accepted the call of Bullittsburg church. That being the case he will accept the call of the Baptist church at Burlington.

First. No person other than the producer of Burley Tobacco in one of the following named counties, Anderson, Bath, Boone, Bourborn, Bracken, Carroll, Carter, Clark, Fayette, Fleming, Franklin, Gallatin, Grant, Greenup, Harrison, Henry, Jessamine, Lawrence, Lewis, Mason, Mercer, Montgomery, Nicholas, Oldham, Pendleton, Robinson, Scott, Woodford, Trimble, Spencer, Shelby, Boyd, and such other counties in the States of Kentucky, Indiana, Ohio and West Virginia as may hereafter become interested shall be permitted to sign this agreement or to become a party thereto, and if at any time any one of the said signers shall cease to be a producer of burley tobacco, within one of said counties, he shall cease to be a party to this agreement and shall thereupon at once cease to have any rights under the same and likewise cease to be bound thereby, but the cessation of interest of any such person shall not affect but shall leave in full effect and operation this agreement as between the other parties thereto. During the continuance of this agreement persons who may be or may become producers of burley tobacco may from time to time sign this agreement, and shall thereupon become parties thereto and entitled to all the rights, benefits and subject to all the obligations of this agreement from the date of such signature until the termination of this contract or until such person shall cease to be a party hereto in the manner hereinbefore mentioned.

A telephone message from Petersburg at 4 p. m. Monday, announced the death a few minutes before of Orlando Snyder at his home one and a half miles below the town. He had been in bad health for several months, and his death was not unexpected. Orlando Snyder was a man whom to know was to admire. His every impulse was of the purest, and the hearty grasp of his hand was an index to his honest and faithful heart. He lead a quiet life, but his neighbors always knew where to place him on all public questions—the right side. He was a kind husband, an indulgent father, and a neighbor who was always ready to lend a helping hand where assistance was needed. He was a faithful member of Petersburg masonic lodge, and the members of that order, with loving hands, placed the remains in their last resting place at 10 o'clock this morning. The deceased leaves a wife, who was the daughter of the late Albert Corbin, and a daughter, besides a host of friends to mourn his death. Truly a good man has gone to his reward.

USED SLEDGE HAMMER

Missouri Farmer Slaughters His Wife and Six Children.

After Placing the Seven Bodies Side By Side He Seized the Hammer and Dealt Himself a Blow On the Head.

St. Louis, March 13.—Adolph Krauss, a farmer, living near Bellefontaine, Thursday night killed his wife and six children with a sledge hammer. He then knocked himself unconscious with the hammer and at midnight was dying. It is believed that Krauss suddenly became insane. He had the reputation among neighbors of being a quiet, inoffensive, industrious farmer, and no other cause but insanity has been assigned. Early Thursday night John Krauss, a brother, went to Adolph's house. The lights were out but the door was unlocked and this aroused his suspicions. He entered the house and upon striking a light found that there had been a tragedy.

From all that can be learned Adolph Krauss entered the house some time Thursday afternoon armed with a sledge hammer. Without warning he struck his wife on the head, killing her instantly. Then seizing his first child, 12 years old, dealt another murderous blow. The other five children were killed similarly, the youngest, a six-months-old babe. Krauss then placed the seven bodies side by side on the floor in one room, seized the hammer and dealt himself a blow on the head. He fell unconscious almost in line with his victims. When John Krauss had discovered the tragedy Thursday night he immediately summoned the police. The bodies were taken in charge by an undertaker but the coroner decided not to move Krauss, who apparently would be dead by morning.

THE NEW DEPARTMENT.

Temporary Quarters Have Been Secured in a Large Office Building.

Washington, March 13.—The new offices of the department of commerce and labor, which until the new fiscal year are to be in a large office building at 719 and 721 Thirteenth street Northwest, are being put in shape and Mr. Cortelyou will move into them the early part of next week. The secretary is following out modest ideas in getting his department into running order. His own office and that of the force immediately connected with the secretary's office, will be housed in a single room, the total area of which is 3,575 feet. Accommodations have been arranged for a private office for the secretary and another for Mr. Garfield, the chief of the bureau of corporations, and for about 40 or 50 clerks.

Secretary Cortelyou has been besieged during the week by politicians, who want to secure places for their constituents, but he has been compelled to announce that they would be filled in the usual course by selections from the civil service eligible list. This applies to all clerkships and minor appointments.

A CENSUS REPORT.

Geographical Distribution of Population in the United States.

Washington, March 14.—The census bureau Friday issued a bulletin on the geographical distribution of population in the United States. It shows that almost 96 per cent. of the total population lives in the country drained by the Atlantic ocean; over 53 per cent. in that drained by the Gulf of Mexico; 44 per cent. in the drainage area of the Mississippi river; almost 10 per cent. in the area drained by the great lakes; 4 per cent. on the Pacific coast and half of one per cent. in the great basin.

The proportion living within the region drained to the Atlantic ocean is steadily diminishing, while the part drained to the Gulf of Mexico is becoming relatively more populous as is the case in a still more marked degree in the great basin of the Pacific ocean region. Of the foreign born, 93 per cent. live in the region drained to the Atlantic ocean; 36.44 per cent. in the region drained to the Gulf of Mexico, and 15 per cent. in that drained to the great lakes. The proportion in the region drained to the Pacific ocean is 6.1 per cent. Out of every 1,000 Negroes 998 are found in the regions drained to the Atlantic ocean and 61.4 per cent. are in the lands drained to the Gulf of Mexico, the proportion in the west and on the Pacific coast being trifling.

WEST VIRGINIA OPERATORS.

Will Refuse to Meet the Miners to Adjust Wage Scale.

Charleston, W. Va., March 14.—The coal operators are asked to meet the miners in conference at Huntington on March 23 for the purpose of adjusting differences and signing a scale for the coming year. A prominent New river operator, who was seen Friday, spoke for all the operators in that region. He said: "No New river operator will be present at Huntington. The meeting is for the organization of the union and that the New river operators are not going to concede even if they have to shut their mines for the year. We have no objection to our men organizing among themselves, and are willing to deal with them when so organized, but we do not intend to deal with an organization controlled by men whose interests are inimicable to the West Virginia fields, and who will keep their mines open all the year at the expense of our closing much of the time. If we must make another fight this year as we did last we are ready to do it, and it will be made right from the start, with all the operators pulling together and all along the line. We will pay no attention to the Huntington meeting."

Spoiled His Dinner.

A prominent clergyman in Boston, who is actively identified with missionary work, has recently been preparing some colored clergymen from the south for missionary work. Lately he invited them to dine with him. Toward the dinner hour the reverend gentlemen waited an hour in his reception room for his guests, but none came. At last he called his maid servant, mentioning the matter to her and remarking that it was very strange that his expected guests did not put in their appearance. "Yis, sor," replied Mary, "but wot's stranger still, sor, is that I've done nothin' the whole avenin' but turn nigger minstrels from the dure."—N. Y. Times.

He Means It.

New Berlin, Ill., Mar. 16th:—Mr. Frank Newton of this place speaks very earnestly and emphatically when asked by any of his many friends the reason for the very noticeable improvement in his health.

For a long time—over two years—he has been suffering a great deal with pains in his back and an all over feeling of illness and weakness. His appetite failed him and he grew gradually weaker and weaker till he was very much run down.

A friend recommended Dodd's Kidney Pills and Mr. Newton began to take two at a dose three times a day. In a very short time he noticed an improvement; the pains left his back and he could eat better. He kept on improving and now he says:

"Yes, indeed! I am a different man and Dodd's Kidney Pills did it all. I cannot tell you how much better I feel. I am a new man and Dodd's Kidney Pills deserve all the credit."

Mrs. F. Wright, of Oelwein, Iowa, is another one of the million women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

A Young New York Lady Tells of a Wonderful Cure:—

"My trouble was with the ovaries; I am tall, and the doctor said I grew too fast for my strength. I suffered dreadfully from inflammation and doctored continually, but got no help. I suffered from terrible dragging sensations with the most awful pains low down in the side and pains in the back, and the most agonizing headaches. No one knows what I endured. Often I was sick to the stomach, and every little while I would be too sick to go to work, for three or four days; I work in a large store, and I suppose standing on my feet all day made me worse.

"At the suggestion of a friend of my mother's I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it is simply wonderful. I felt better after the first two or three doses; it seemed as though a weight was taken off my shoulders; I continued its use until now I can truthfully say I am entirely cured. Young girls who are always paying doctor's bills without getting any help as I did, ought to take your medicine. It costs so much less, and it is sure to cure them.—Yours truly, ADELAIDE PEARL, 174 St. Ann's Ave., New York City."—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

MRS. RATH'S BABY

Tired Mother's Touching Story of Anxiety and Suffering.

Cuticura Brings Blessed Cure to Skin Tortured Baby and Peace and Rest to Its Worn Out Mother.

It is no wonder that Mrs. Helena Rath was taken sick. Single-handed, she did all the housework and washed, cooked and mended for her husband, Hans, and their six children. After a plucky fight to keep on her feet, Mrs. Rath had to yield, and early in 1902 she took to her bed. What followed she told to a visitor, who called at her tidy home, No. 821 Tenth Ave., New York City.

"I hired a girl to mind the children and to do whatever else she could. I couldn't stay in bed long. Sick as I was, it was easier for me to crawl around than to lie and worry about my little ones. So I got up after a few days, and let the girl go. I had noticed that she had sores on her face, hands and arms, but I paid no attention to that until Charlie, my youngest, began to pick and scratch himself. He was then ten months old, and the girl had paid more attention to him than to any of the others. Charlie was fretful and cross, but as he was cutting teeth, I didn't think much of that. Even when a rash broke out on his face I wasn't frightened, because everybody knows that that is quite common with teething babies. Several of my others had it when little, and I thought nothing about it.

"But the rash on Charlie's poor little face spread to his neck, chest, and back. I had never seen anything quite like it before. The skin rose in little lumps, and matter came out. My baby's skin was hot, and how he did suffer! He wouldn't eat, and night after night I walked the floor with him, weak as I was. Often I had to stop because I felt faint and my back throbbed with pain. But the worst pain of all was to see my poor little boy burning with those nasty sores.

"I believed he had caught some disease from the girl, but some of the neighbors said he had eczema, and that is not catching, they told me. Yes, I gave him medicine, and put salves and things on him. I don't think they were all useless. Once in a while the itching seemed to let up a bit, but there was not much change for the better until a lady across the street asked me why I didn't try the Cuticura Remedies. I told her I had no faith in those things you read about in the papers. She said she didn't want me to go on faith nor even to spend any money at first. She gave me some Cuticura Ointment—I think the box was about half full—and a piece of Cuticura Soap. I followed the directions, bathing Charlie and putting that nice Ointment on the sores.

"I wouldn't have believed that my baby would have been cured by a little thing like that. Not all of a sudden, mind you. Little by little, but so surely. Charlie and I both got more peace by day, and more sleep by night. The sores sort of dried up and went away. I shall never forget one blessed night when I went to bed with Charlie beside me, as soon as I got the supper dishes out of the way and the older children undressed; when I woke up the sun was streaming in. For the first time in six months I had slept through the night without a break.

"Yes, that fat little boy by the window is Charlie, and his skin is as white as a snow flake, thanks to the Cuticura Remedies. I think everybody should know about the Soap and also the Ointment, and if it is going to help other mothers with sick babies, go ahead and publish what I have told you."

MRS. HELENA RATH.

The agonizing, itching, and burning of the skin as in eczema; the frightful scaling, as in psoriasis; the loss of hair, and crusting of the scalp, as in scalled head; the facial disfigurements, as in pimples and ringworm; the awful suffering of infants, and anxiety of worn-out parents, as in milk crust, tetter and salt rheum,—all demand a remedy of almost superhuman virtues to successfully cope with them. That Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Resolvent are such stands proven beyond all doubt. No statement is made regarding them that is not justified by the strongest evidence. The purity and sweetness, the power to afford immediate relief, the certainty of speedy and permanent cure, the absolute safety and great economy have made them the standard skin cures, blood purifiers and humour remedies of the civilized world.

Armed and Masked Men Rob the Home of a Wealthy Widow.

Part of the Gang Remained For Hours and Helped Themselves to the Wine and All the Eatables They Could Find.

Wapakoneta, O., March 16.—A bold robbery took place Saturday night near Cridersville, six miles north of here. About 10 o'clock 14 armed and masked men entered the house of Mrs. Jacob Reischelderfer, an aged and wealthy widow woman, and took possession. With Mrs. Reischelderfer are living her granddaughter Blanche, aged 12 years; George James and his wife and their son, Joseph James, a young man. Mrs. Reischelderfer is of a nirserly nature and afraid to trust her money to the banks. The robbers knocked down old man James, who showed fight, and then proceeded to bind him and the two women, hand and foot with ropes and tied them to beds in separate rooms. In the meanwhile some of the robbers laid in wait for Joseph, who was in town, and when he returned jumped on him, bound and tied him in the kitchen. At the point of a shotgun they made the little girl tell where the money was.

They then secured $1,200 in cash and $7,000 worth of notes and securities from an old chest upstairs and proceeded to ransack the house from top to bottom looking for a secret door supposed to be in the wall. They took possession of all the jewelry and silverware and secured a month's wages from old man James' pocket. They blindfolded everybody but left the little girl free. After dividing the money in the cellar part of them left at midnight and part remained until 2 o'clock helping themselves to the wine and cider in the cellar and all eatables they could find. They called all by their first names and are supposed to come from Cridersville and vicinity.

A SQUALL AT HAVANA.

Five Cubans Were Drowned By the Capsizing of Vessels.

Havana, March 16.—While the secretary of the navy, Mr. Moody, and his party were making a visit on shore Sunday afternoon a squall of tremendous violence swept over the harbor. It became as dark as night and the wind and the downpour were terrific. Commander Stoney, of the Dolphin, realizing the peril to the small boats in the harbor during such a squall, called for volunteer rescuers. The entire crew of the Dolphin responded. Boats were instantly manned and sent off. The launch returned with four half-drowned Cubans and the captain's gig with another, who was lifted aboard apparently lifeless, but was later resuscitated. The courage and heroic action on the part of the Americans are especially commended, as the British ships did not rise to the emergency, although one of the capsized boats was much nearer to the Ariadne than to the Dolphin.

Secretary Moody Monday will summon the Dolphin's crew and commend them for their pluck and presence of mind.

Up to Sunday night it is known that five men, all Cubans, were drowned by the capsizing of boats during the squall.

The arrival of the British squadron, consisting of the warships Ariadne, Indefatigable, Retribution, Tribune, Fantone and Columbine Sunday morning from Kingston, Jamaica, gave the harbor a naval aspect. The morning was occupied with exchanges of salutes and calls. The Ariadne, Vice Adm. Sir Archibald Douglas' flagship, on entering the harbor saluted the fort with 21 guns and later Secretary Moody on the U. S. S. Dolphin with 17 guns. The Dolphin saluted Vice Adm. Douglas with 15 guns.

Vice Adm. Douglas and the commanders of the British warships proceeded to the Dolphin and paid their respects to Mr. Moody. The secretary returned the visit at once. Thirteen guns were fired by the Dolphin in honor of a call on Mr. Moody by Gen. Rodriguez, the commander of the Cuban army.

Secretary Moody and party dined Sunday with Minister Squiers. They will pay visits to President Palma and the members of his cabinet Monday. On Tuesday they will proceed to Bahia Honda, and on returning to Havana will go to Santiago by rail and return on the Dolphin. They will look over the site for the naval station and general situation at Guantanimo.

J. WHITTAKER WRIGHT'S ARREST

He Is Charged With Being Concerned in Colossal Frauds.

New York, March 16.—J. With Wright on the steamship was a tall, good-looking young woman who said she was the niece of the prisoner. Her name was on the passenger list as Miss F. Browne. Wright, when told that he was under arrest, showed no evidence of excitement and said that he was a friend of King Edward. His principal concern was to avoid publicity and he asked that his arrest be kept from the newspapers. Wright and his companion were entered on the original passenger list as M. Andreoni and Mlle. TYNER TO RETIRE.

Resignation of Assistant Attorney General to Be Requested.

Mr. Tyner Denounces as Absurd the Charges That There Was Wrong-Doing in Connection With Turf Companies Decisions.

Washington, March 16.—It is announced that James N. Tyner, assistant attorney general for the post office department, will be requested in the near future to tender his resignation, but the announcement is accompanied with the statement that this action will have no hearing on the complaint filed with the president by T. C. Campbell, of Cincinnati, an attorney, representing several of the turf investment concerns, whose affairs recently have been aired in the courts.

Mr. Tyner is incapacitated by illness from performing the duties of his office and it is said his resignation will be requested solely on that account. Mr. Tyner is 77 years old and suffered a stroke of paralysis last July and in December had a relapse.

Mr. Tyner denounces as absurb and ridiculous the charges that there was wrong-doing in connection with decisions by his office respecting the right of "turf investment companies" to use the mails. The matter, he says, was taken up on the report of an inspector and disposed of as hundreds of other cases are. No evidence was submitted with the inspector's reports, showing that the concerns were either lotteries or frauds and under the law the department had no right to interfere.

Mr. Tyner admitted Sunday that Harrison J. Barret, his nephew by marriage and formerly his assistant in the law division in the post office department, against whom charges had been filed with a view to his disbarment from practice before the departments, had represented as an attorney one of the turf investment concerns in the matter of mail privileges, but he said it was after Barrett had severed legal services to a number of the "bond investments companies" as to the legality of which the latter had written an official opinion while still in the post office department. This service also was rendered after Barrett had left the department.

The opinion prepared by Barrett declared that the bond concerns as organized were in violation of law, but to the opinion was attached an appendix stating that by certain changes in their by-laws and in the wording of their literature they could be admitted to the mails. This appendix, Mr. Tyner said, was not written by Barrett but by Postmaster General Smith. The department had official knowledge of more than 500 of these concerns and the capital involved was estimated at $50,000,000. It was the opinion of Mr. Smith and other officials of the department that the business should not be crushed out if it could be made legal and such an eminent lawyer as John G. Carlisle had appeared before the department in behalf of the concerns.

DIED SUDDENLY.

Recorder J. O. Brown, Prominent Pittsburger, Passes Away.

Pittsburg, Pa., March 16.—Recorder J. O. Brown, of this city, who tendered his resignation to Gov. Pennypacker on Friday last, died suddenly at his home here late Sunday afternoon. The immediate cause of Recorder Brown's death was nervous collapse superinduced, it is believed, by the unusually perturbed condition of politics in the county.

Mr. Brown was always delicate physically and had to make frequent trips away from home for his health, but his death was entirely unexpected at this time.

The death of Mr. Brown makes the third prominent political leader in the county during the past two years. The other two were Senator C. L. Magee and George M. Von Bonnhorst. These three men were practically in control of republican politics in Allegheny county for 25 or 30 years.

REVOLUTIONISTS DEFEATED.

A Three Days' Battle at Cumarebo, Venezuela.

Coro, Venezuela, March 14.—The revolutionary forces, under Gen. Riera and Gen. Penaloca, numbering about 1,250 men, which during the course of the Anglo-German blockade were reorganized in the neighborhood of this city, were attacked last Monday by the government troops under Gen. Castillo at Cumarebo, 180 miles northwest of Caracas, and after a fight lasting three days, were defeated and their entrenched and fortified position was captured.

Gen. Riera fled in the direction of Piritu, a port in the Burmedese province.

Caracas, March 14.—The Venezuelan government has raised the Orinoco blockade.

Washington, March 14.—The action taken by the Venezuelan government raising the blockade was received here with great relief, for although there was no outward symptoms of trouble, it is now known that the enforcement of the decree probably would have resulted in serious friction, perhaps involving a renewal of hostilities. British interests next to our own being predominant in the Orinocco section, the British ambassador here was the first to move after the announcement of the blockade decree. The United States government practically decided to recognize the blockade if Venezuela stationed a sufficient number of ships at the mouth of the Orinocco to make it effective, particularly if these ships were supplemented in their work by certain shore batteries in command of positions. But the British government was not disposed to recognize the blockade as it would work particular hardship to the British colonies in Trinidad and Guiana which already are in straightened financial circumstances. The Venezuelan government was given to understand that if the blockade was persisted in Great Britain would recognize the belligerency of the rebels in Venezuela, and moreover, applying the laws of neutrality with strictness, would close all British ports to Venezuela warships, allowing them only the small privilege of putting in in time of stress for a very limited period. Even during the enforcement of the blockade last March the British government never went to this length and the threat dismayed President Castro. If the rebels were to be recognized as belligerents their cause would be strengthened immensely for they might charter privateers and be put in a position to borrow money and conduct war on a larger, and it may be, successful scale.

HONDURAS REVOLUTION.

The Caribbean Squadron Ordered to Look After American Interests.

Washington, March 14.—The Caribbean squadron, under command of Adm. Coghlan, has been ordered to Honduras, where the revolution is assuming serious proportions, to protect American interests. Late Friday afternoon Acting Secretary of the Navy Darling sent the following cable instructions to Adm. Coghlan at San Juan:

"Proceed with squadron Olympia, Panther, Marietta, Vixen (and Brutus, collier); protection American interests Puerto Cortez and Celba, Honduras. Communicate with minister. Authorized to leave Vixen (tender) under commandant at San Juan."

The navy department decided to send Adm. Coghlan to Honduras on the theory that a flag officer present on the scene would be in a position to take such steps as may be necessary for the protection of American interests without constant reference to the department here. The presence of a squadron instead of a single ship, it was thought also, would have a salutary effect.

SENSATION AT FRANKFORT.

Frankfort, Ky., March 12.—The sensation of years in business circles here was sprung Wednesday afternoon in the announcement that L. B. Weisenburgh, a reputable business man, had disappeared, owing local banks $52,500. His family and business associates have no information as to his whereabouts, and the banks confirm the story of notes held.

The banks holding Weisenburgh paper, or rather that of L. B. Weisenburgh & Co., are the Deposit bank, of Frankfort, $25,000; National Branch bank, of Frankfort, $15,000; State national bank, $10,000; Farmers' bank, of Frankfort, $2,500.

The officials of th two first named banks decline to either confirm or deny the story of the amount of their holdings of paper, but the directors of the others confirm the amounts given above. The notes given by Weisenburgh to the banks were secured by warehouse receipts for wheat, and by indorsement of Dudley Blanton, a local merchant, who had been interested for some months with the missing man in the purchase of wheat for speculation.

CALHOUN'S EXPENSES.

It May Be Deducted From His $71,000 Fees.

Frankfort, Ky., March 13.—In the matter of Capt. C. C. Calhoun's fee of $71,000 for collecting the Kentucky war claim, the attorney general, to whom the matter has been referred, asked the auditor Thursday for an itemized account of money heretofore paid to Capt. Calhoun for expenses incurred in collecting the claim, including railroad fare, stenographers and typewriters. Auditor Coulter, in reply, stated that $2,300 (in round numbers) had been so paid. The attorney general has not given out his opinion in the matter, but it is possible that he may hold that this $2,300 should be deducted from the $71,000 fee due Capt. Calhoun.

It Is Understood He Is in Hiding In Cincinnati.

Frankfort, Ky., March 13.—A conference of the representatives of the banks affected by the disappearance of L. B. Weisenburgh with his relatives here Thursday have created the impression that a settlement will be affected by which he will not be prosecuted under the warrant sworn out Wednesday night by his partner, A. SEVERE ATTACK OF GRIP

"When I had an attack of the grip last winter (the second one) I actually cured myself with one bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says Frank W. Perry, Editor of the Enterprise, Shortaville, N. Y. "This is the honest truth. I at times kept from coughing myself to pieces by taking a teaspoonful of this remedy, and when the coughing spell would come on at night I would take a dose and it seemed that in the briefest interval the cough would pass off and I would go to sleep perfectly free from cough and its accompanying pains. To say the remedy acted as a most agreeable surprise is putting it very mildly. I had no idea that it could or would knock out the grip simply because I had never tried it for such a purpose, but it did, and it seemed with the second attack of coughing the remedy caused it to not only be of less duration, but the pains were far less severe, and I had not used the contents of one bottle before Mr. Grip had bid me adieu." Absalom Graves Gaines.

[Plaindealer, Canton, N. Y.]

On Thursday afternoon at two o'clock at the Universalist church in Canton, was held the funeral of Dr. A. G. Gaines. The church was filled with the students, faculties and alumni of St. Lawrence, and citizens of Canton and friends from away. Dr. J. M. Payson read the scriptures and was followed by Dr. G. S. Weaver in prayer. The sermon was delivered by President A. Gmon Gunnison, who paid a high tribute to one whose memory will always be held dear to the hearts of hundreds. Eight of the old students and loyal friends of Dr. Gaines bore his body with loving and reverent hands to its final resting place in Evergreen cemetery. They were the final honors paid to a worthy and consistent life. There were those in that audience who could have testified to kind words and kind deeds freely and quietly given by the departed. Many a man there is today making his way successfully in the world who owes his all to the aid of that wise and quiet man, who by encouragement and assistance made it possible for them to acquire an education and obtain their start in life. Those who acted as bearers were Prin. W. B. Gunnison, F. L. Backus, N. L. Robinson, Percy I. Bugby, H. F. Gunnison, G. B. Helmle, J. W. Rafferty, and L. P. Hale.

Dr. Gaines was the third president of St. Lawreuce. He was born in Boone county, Ky., on March 27, 1827, his family being of English extraction. He was educated in the private schools of his native county and completed his preparation for college at Morgan academy. He entered the University of Virginia in 1849 and graduated from the course in moral philosophy, economics, chemistry and physiology. He then taught in the common schools of his county for some time, to later become instructor in natural science in Clinton Liberal Institute for three years. During all this time he had been preparing for the Universalist ministry and his uncompromising opposition to slavery induced him in 1856 to leave the south where he had gone from Clinton, and for 12 years he was pastor of the Universalist churches at Bethel, Augusta and Mechanics Falls, Me. He came to the Universalist church at Canton in 1869, having a large regard for the educational advantages of St. Lawrence. When President Fisk resigned in 1872 Dr. Gaines was induced to assume the Presidency. At this time the college had reached a crisis, owing to the resignation or illness of some members of the faculty and from some other causes. Dr. Gaines took hold of affairs with the hand of a leader. He reorganized the faculty, raised funds and labored with all his strong might for the University. He did two men's labor; took money from his own pocket to buy necessary things, and by the devotion of himself and his income worked wonders. It is due to his labors at that time that the University is what it now is. His many duties, his many classes, and the small number of students enabled him to come into personal contact with all in the college. He assisted the poor with money, and labored earnestly for the improvement of all. In 1888 he saw that a younger man was required at the head of the institution and he resigned, but continued his labors unremittingly almost to the last, as Craig Professor. In spite of his many duties he found time to write and was the author of "The Divine Nature and Procedure." "Sound Money," which appeared in the columns of the Plaindealer, and other works. He received the degree of D. D. from Tufts in 1874 and L. L. D. from Lombard in 1891. He was married in 1853 to Emma Clare daughter of Davis Hurd, of Royalton, N. Y., who was a woman of rare endowments. She died in December, 1887, leaving one son, Prof. Charles Kelsey Gaines, who survives his father.

The greatest danger from colds and grip is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for this disease we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous disease. It will cure a cold or an attack of the grip in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

Leomer Louden and Miss Rebecca Burris were married, last Wednesday, on the Steamer Swan, while lying at the Aurora wharf, by Justice of the Peace, J. H. Thompson. I hope that during their courtship they sufficiently studied each others characteristics, tastes, distastes, likes and dislikes, so as to enable them to stear clear of the old logs, snags, hidden rocks and sandbars along the river of life on which their future happiness might otherwise be wrecked. May peace, happiness and prosperity attend them as they drift down the stream of life. WALTON.

March 22.—The tobacco growers are doing much talking about forming the association. What is wanted is to have some one who can explain in full the working of the business. One day before the meeting at Beaver it was told in town, and a well knowu gentleman stirred around town and got ten others to go with him, who had never heard of the movement. All of them signed the agreement and took stock in it. These men had never heard of it and vouched for their neighborhood joining it in a body. Mr. Geo. Powers, a prominent farmer and a progressive one will, attend to this precinct and he is the very man for the business.

The semi-annual festival of Adams Lodge I. O. O. F., Atwood, Kenton county, was held at the school house, last Saturday, and was the usual grand success that has always attended these meetings. There was a very large number of visitors from neighboring lodges. These celebrations having become famous throughout the country ever since the first three degrees of membership in Adams Lodge, after which came the feast, and words cannot describe the joyousness that dances now in our mind at the remembrance of a Grange festival years gone by. The whole community was a Granger hive, and to one unaccustomed to what an entire community can do in the way of furnishing a table for a large crowd, Delmonico is not in it. There is a heartiness among the country people in their hospitality that deals with one as long as memory lasts. But enough about the gastronomical temptations that beset one on occasions of this kind; suffice it to say that they are no faint imitations of those set before Olympian Jove when he summoned the old Pagon deities to a feast on High Olympus. The speaking was the next thing in order and loud calls for Bucks brought the Judge to the front. He was in his happiest mood and he so electrified his audience that there was a burst of universal acclamation. The Judge, so his brethren say, can always be depended on to rouse the feelings and sympathies of the lodges whenever the occasion warrants the effort. But they say, he does it without effort.

The tobacco growers will hold a meeting here at 2 p. m. Thursday. Several good speakers will be present. Let all the tobacco growers be come out. If our farmers and growers can or will not embrace the present opportunity of heading off the operation of the combines, they will find themselves at the mercy of the Continental and the Cincinnati Leaf Tobacco Companies. They will be compelled to take whatever price they may set upon it. Mr. J. Kahn the drygoods merchant, and who also has a store in Verona, is working hard for the success of the Farmers and Growers scheme as being the surest way of combatting these giant combines. Many well posted men think the Cincinnati Co. is controlled by the Continental Tobacco Co. The indications are that a larger acreage will be put in this year than for many years previous, and the only hope the growers may have will be in the support they will find is by maintaining the agreement with the growers.

Rev. Sproie's accepting the call to preach for Bullittsburg church another year, dispelled the cloud of sorrow that had prevailed in this neighborhood since he announced his resignation.

Another dash of disagreeable weather. March could not pass without at least a little roughness.

THE SHORN SAMSONS.

Spiritual Strength Gone When Under Power of Delilah of Sin.

They May Not Realize It, But the Lord Has Departed from Them—Sermon by "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

Text:—"And he (Samson) wist not that the Lord was departed from him."—Judges 16:20.

IT IS the privilege and the duty of the Christian to "be strong in the Lord and in the power of His might," but it is the sad and mournful fact that too often his love of the world and his indulgences in sinful pleasures rob him of his strength, and, like the [illegible] Samson of our text, he does not realize that the Lord has departed from him until he falls into the hands of the enemy of his soul, his eyes are burned out and he is set to grinding out the bread of sorrows in the prison house of affliction. Then, if he is teachable, he may be led to sincere repentance and regain his lost strength and his lost power. Yes, his eyes will still be sightless—the hideous scars left by the enemy's power over him—but, with his strength restored, he may be able to win mightier victories over the forces of sin during the remainder of his life than the sum of all his previous triumphs. Yea, he will be willing to die that his God may be vindicated and glorified, and that Dagon, the false god of the Philistines, may be put to shame. This is the lesson of Samson, the Nazarite, God's strong man.

LET us go down to that frontier land where dwelt the tribe of Dan and search out our hero. As we journey through the wildly beautiful hills and valleys of that part of Palestine we begin to hear tales, wonderful tales, of the prowess of a young Israelite. Being told that he was even then in the camp of Dan between Zorah and Eshtaol performing mighty deeds, we hasten thither. Those were evil days and the oppressive hand of the Philistines was heavy upon God's people because of their disobedience to His law and yielding to the sinful pleasures and practices of the heatheu nations about them. The common distress and peril draw the people together in thought and sympathy. They hold their public meetings to talk over the situation and find a possible way of escape from their slavery. It was at such a meeting as this in a safe retreat between Zorah and Eshtaol that one day a young man appeared. He heard the stories of cruel oppression as they were told, and realized as never before that the dominion of the Philistines meant destruction of the life of the home and of the nation of the children of Israel. While the discussion went on and plans were offered for the breaking of the yoke, the Spirit of God began to move within the young man before us, and the arena at Athens or Rome never witnessed greater feats of strength, or braver, than first astonished, and then aroused to new hope the oppressed Israelites.

IF the supernatural strength of Samson awakened in the hearts of the children of Israel a sense of the true source of power and strength, his sins aroused them to a consciousness of what harm their close fellowship with the Philistines was working and would continue to work for them. They knew he was a Nazarite, and that his great strength came from God, and, when they saw their hero shorn and with sightless eyes grinding in the prison house of the Philistines, they knew that weakness and terrible disaster followed swift upon the departure from God's commandments and God's service. Surely the experiences of Samson must have made the children of Israel stop and think, and teach them more of God's way with man. When messengers came speeding across the borderland from Philistia into the country of the Israelites, bearing the news that while the Philistines were celebrating in wild abandon the great victory over their enemy and were exalting Dagon as the god who had triumphed, Samson, "whose hair had grown with his repentance, and his strength with his hair," had torn away the gigantic pillars that supported the vast arena where the celebration was taking place and had wrought the destruction of all the lords of the Philistines, this news must have revealed to them that God was a forgiving God, and that with repentance came renewed strength and opportunity for new victories.

UNHOLY associations and revealing the secrets of God to his unrighteous companion were great sins and cost Samson his strength, his sight, and plunged him into the degradation and shame of a convict laborer, but it would have been a greater sin for Samson to have lost all faith in God and to have ended his days in the Philistine prison. While he was grinding for the Philistines he was sitting under the tutelage of God, and learning his bitter lesson. Each hair as it grew in length was a strand in the faith which was laying hold of God anew. And while the taunting shouts of his enemies are ringing in his ears, the opportunity comes to strike another blow, and Scripture declares that "the dead which he slew at his death were more than they which he slew in his life." And so out of miserable defeat and degradation was born a new and more glorious victory. Unholy associations and indulgence in sin rob the soul of its strength and place it at the mercy of its enemy, Satan. It locks it in the dungeon of affliction and sets it to grinding for the enemy. It makes it the object of the reproach and ridicule of the world, while the world exalts its own virtues and holds them up as its gods of superior power. This is bad enough; the sin is black, the weakness is disgusting, the fall is far, the affliction is great, the rejoicing of the enemy is loud and boisterous, but a condition far worse, more sinful and more terrible is reached when the soul, abandoning faith in God, and persisting in its sin, is content, in weak subjection, to sit in the prison house of affliction and grind the enemy's grist. Then no glorious victory comes to brighten the last page of life's book. But if the soul sits with shorn Samson and in repentance renews its Nazarite vow of loyalty and faithfulness to God, new power will come and new victories follow, and, as the flashing gold of the sunlight, bursting through the black cloud after the awful tempest is past, illuminates the heavens and uses the dark background of the angry-looking clouds to heighten its splendor, so that soul will shine with a triumphant beauty which will silence the world's taunt and bring swift destruction to the proud lords of the modern Philistines.

THUS Samson comes with his warning, and his message of hope for the Christian of to-day. Let us search out the modern shorn Samsons. How may we distinguish them? By their shorn locks. It was not hard to discover the change in Samson. It is not hard to identify the shorn Samsons of to-day, if we know where to look for them and are able to discern their disfigured countenances. First of all, Samson was abiding in a strange land, amidst worldly associates. He was as good as shorn when he went into Philistia to dwell and took as his bosom companion that woman Delilah. The Christian who dwells in the land of worldly pleasure and sinful indulgences is the shorn Samson. Like the Samson of old he is intoxicated with the pleasure and joy of the moment. His conscience is deadened with the sleep of indifference as he rests in the lap of ease and luxurious indulgence, and while thus reposing the seven locks of his strength are clipped close to his head. God never intended that Christians should, be weaklings. His command ever to his followers is: "Be strong in the Lord and in the power of His might." Samsons, with Divinely given strength to slay evil on every hand; Samsons, with the fearlessness of a righteous purpose that will lead them right into the heart of the enemy's country and enable them to carry off the gates of the city and place them on the summit of the adjacent hill, which holds the commanding position against the city. But such soldiers of Jesus Christ are not numerous.

The reason the church to-day is so weak and impotent in the face of evil; the reason it is so sharply criticised for its lack of power; the reason it is not finding "the Gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation," is because it is filled with shorn Samsons, and before the church will ever be able to win new and larger victories for God it must either cast out its shorn Samsons or awaken them to a realization of their condition and set them to grinding in the prison house of affliction until repentance brings a new infilling of the strength and power of the Lord.

DELILAH knew and the men who were with her knew that Samson was shorn, that he was a weakling in their hands. How they despised him in the shame of his departed glory! But Samson "wist not that the Lord was departed from him." When the warning cry aroused him from his slumber, he was confident in himself, and ready to meet his enemies. He said: "I will go out, as at other times before." And he did, and we know his defeat, his torture, his shame. The world to-day knows better than the church does that it is filled with shorn Samsons.

It is so easy, too, for the Christian to discover the shorn head of the fellow Christian, but so hard to realize that the shorn Samson may be the "ego"—self—whose eyes are adjusted to see the motes in other eyes, while the beam remains undiscovered in its own eye. Samson "wist not that the Lord was departed from him." How is it with you, my Christian friend? Are you dwelling in the land of your own desire? Are you delighting your heart in unchristian and unholy associations? Is your heart filled with "love for the world and the things of the world?" If so, look to the locks of your Nazarite vow which sealed you for the Lord when you accepted Him as Christ and Saviour. Some or all of your locks are shorn, and though you go about Christian service as of yore, and wist not that the Lord is departed from you, He is no longer with you, and His strength and power have ceased to flow in potent measure through your life. While you dwell in the land of your own desires and indulgences, be they seemingly ever so innocent and harmless, you dwell apart from the Lord, and the enemy may take you, and does take you, at his pleasure.

THE unshaven head of Samson was the silent witness of his peculiar relations to God. From the day of his birth he was to drink no strong drink, nor was he to eat any unclean thing. The Christian from the hour of his birth into the Kingdom of Jesus Christ is set apart for God's service. The command to him is "come out from among them (the world and the people of the world), and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing"—(the allurements and sinful indulgences of the world). And he is told to "be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess; but be filled with the Spirit." And the fruits of the indwelling Spirit are the signs of the Christian's relations to God. As Samson's hair was the sign of his Nazarite vow, and was a token of his mighty strength in the Lord, so the Christian who is adorning and crowning himself with the glorifying growth of love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance, is giving indisputable proof of his Nazarite vow and bears about with him the token of his strength and power in the Lord.

The shorn head of Samson was the plain evidence of violation of his vow of consecration to God, and marked the departure of God from him. The Christian whose heart is shorn of the grace of God and the fruits of the Spirit needs no mark of Cain on the forehead to reveal the sad fact that the vows of loyalty and consecration have been broken, and that God has departed from him. He may be as ignorant of his real condition and as unconscious of his weakness as was Samson. He may go out as at former times against the enemies of the Lord, but it will only be to fall into their hands, and to suffer torture and indignities and shame, and then the prison house.

WITH eyes blinded and hands and feet manacled, Samson soon realized his true condition. The Lord was departed from him. There is no sadder thing which can be recorded than to say that the Lord has departed from the shorn Samsons. They are not conscious of the weakness until they are seized by the enemy, and their eyes are bored out, and their limbs have the chains forged about them; then in bitterness they learn that while they have been dwelling in the land of self-desire and worldly indulgences, and sleeping in the lap of sin and pleasure, they have been shorn. Eyes blinded and limbs shackled—how suggestive! Long, unbroken abiding in darkness will weaken and destroy the power of sight. The blind fish in Mammoth cave have eyeballs, but no sight. It is supposed that when the fish first came into the dark cavern they could see, but as the years rolled on and the eyes were not used in the dreadful blackness, they lost the use of those eyes. The Christian who dwells in the darkness of the world's pleasures and sins is as sure to be stricken with blindness—spiritual blindness—as the fish in the cave. And chains are forged there, too, and the Christian is forced to wear them, and finally grind for the enemy. Ah, what a sight all over the world to-day; shorn Samsons, blinded and bound, grinding for the Philistines who have enticed them! Shorn Samsons, but, thank God, the enemy cannot prevent the hair growing again. There is escape from the prison, and the chains. There will come new opportunities. New victories will crown the closing days.

Did it ever occur to you that it was a strange thing that those Philistines did not keep Samson's hair clipped? They knew his strength lay in his hair. This had been clearly and most forcibly demonstrated to them. Why, then, such fatal oversight as to permit it to become long again? The devil is always short-sighted. He is never able to keep the shorn Samson from regaining his strength. Even the devil's power is limited. There is encouragement here for every Christian. There are two steps which the shorn Samson must take to get his strength back and to get out of prison. He must be patient in tribulation, and must sincerely repent of his sin. Patience will supply the material out of which repentance is able to build the ladder up which faith may climb to the presence of God. And the soul that gets back to where God is will find that he has regained his strength.

THE restored Samson won the crowning victory of his life, so that God could write of him that "the dead which he slew at his death were more than they which he slew in his life." Looked at from God's viewpoint, Samson's death was a glorious triumph. Do not suppose that revenge was what nerved Samson's arms that day to tumble the arena in ruins upon the heads of the Philistine lords and people. It was a contest between the false god Dagon and the true God. Do not suppose that Samson, because of his sightless eyes and shackled limbs, sought death in despondency. No, rather with his returning strength and the conscious thrill of the presence of God with him, he was willing to die that the God, Whom he had so dishonored, and Whose name he had so brought in reproach before the godless people about him, might be vindicated. So it is with the Christian who regains his strength after having been shorn by the enemy. He may win victories, if he will, which will far eclipse any which he had won before. I never used to like to read about Samson after he fell into the hands of Delilah, it seemed so sad, so terrible, and his death seemed so ignominious and shameful for so mighty a champion. But this part of the story of Samson glows with new beauty for me now as I realize how faithfully it illustrates the majesty, the power, the triumph of God through the forgiven and restored Christian. Shorn Samsons on every hand! What a dark picture can be made to glow with the Divine presence and power, if those shorn Samsons will only patiently walk in the affliction and darkness until through repentant tears may be seen shining the face of the Lord, and they may hear His reassuring words: "Be strong in the Lord and the power of His Might." Then strike, strike! For the lords of the Philistines are delivered into their hands!

USE OF PHOTOGRAPHS.

Frequently Employed to Advertise Articles of Merchandise Without Permission.

"It would seem that if anything on earth belonged to a man it is his physiognomy, and the right to its reproduction by photographic process or otherwise," remarked a member of the District bar to a Washington Star man. "Yet the difficulty that some of our prominent statesmen and leading public characters have in the attempt to remove, by legal proceedings, their facial representations from advertisements of brands of cigars and liquors, and on the part of several ladies to prevent flour dealers and other vendors of merchandise from reproducing their pretty faces on the labels of goods would lead to a different conclusion.

"It also appears odd that while the law jealously guards a person's good name, or the use of his or her name in any respect, and bestows damages and inflicts punishment upon the offender, a photograph is seized upon by anybody and used without regard to the owner's feelings or rights, unless it be copyrighted, and often the copyright is ruthlessly violated.

"While there have been some decisions, it is to be hoped that a fixed legal precedent may become firmly established which will insure to the highest as well as the humblest citizen the right to place a legal embargo upon the practice of the promiscuous use of his features by another, but it would appear that it is rather hard when one is obliged to go to the expensive process of the courts to enforce a right which ought to be enforced by mere verbal or written protest; and this right should be extended to the heirs of a deceased person.

"The practice mainly arose from the free use of the photographs of actors and actresses. It is to the interest of the members of the theatrical profession to keep their features before the public as much as possible, and they encourage the practice rather than frown upon it. But to take the features of a beautiful society woman, or a lady in private life, and use them on a label of merchandise, even without her accompanying name, or the features of a deceased public man, is a personal insult and little short of a grievous outrage.

"Manufacturers of all kinds of merchandise and articles, as is apparent from bill posters and other placard advertisements, use, without compunction or consent, the features of men and women, and often their names, to bring goods to the attention of the public. The offensive side of taking a man's face and using it, either alone or with the features of other men, smiling in appreciation of the flavor of a brand of cigars, wines or liquors, is so great that it need not be adverted to, while it must be a real cruelty to the family of a person deceased to see the features of their loved ones thus publicly displayed to the profit of strangers."

SHE WAS NOT THE QUEEN.

But She Bore a Name That Was Historic and Full-Sounding, Just the Same.

Representative Shattuc, the fat, jolly joking member from Cincinnati, is never so happy as when he is playing a practical joke on his fellow members or some of the employes of the house. Not even the bright boys, called pages of the house, are immune from his playfulness. Many of the little fellows have the autograph craze, and they are keen after the signatures of distinguished or conspicuous persons, says the New York World.

The other day Representative Shattuc bustled into the house from the direction of the senate. Meeting one of the youthful autograph fiends, the Cincinnati member remarked: "Say, bud, I just passed Liliuokalani, the former queen of Hawaii, on her way to the senate. You ought to get her name in your book."

"Bud" only needed the suggestion, and a moment later, album in hand, he was dashing along the corridor trying to locate the dusky queen, as described by Mr. Shattuc. In the ladies' reception-room of the senate Bud approached a portly colored woman, the shade of a rusty nail, decked out in flaming attire, a big red hat, and a plentiful supply of pinchbeck jewelry.

"Would you please give me your autograph?" asked Bud, pointing to a writing table, upon which there was pen and ink.

"What you mean, chile?" inquired the supposed queen, indignantly, probably having heard of the gold brick process.

"Ain't you Queen Liliuokalani?" asked Bud.

"No, indeed, honey. I'se Martha Washington Syfax from Forginia, and I'se looking for mah member, Mr. Rixey, of Culpepah county."

The Sailor as a Valet.

"Talk about your gentleman's gentleman, or trained valet," said a man who has had ample experience in the expedients of bachelor living in New York, "a good capable sailor man, who has had a few years' experience before the mast, is worth a dozen of them. I know of at least a dozen retired sailors in New York who are employed by unmarried men to look after their clothes and keep their living rooms in order."—N. Y. Times.

Mrs. Emilie Seering, 174 St. Ann's Ave., New York City, writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—If women who are always blue and depressed and nervous would take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound they would find it the medicine they need to bring them to a more cheerful frame of mind. I was terribly worried and downcast, and was thin and bloodless. My back ached all the time, no matter how hard I tried to forget it or change my position to ease it, and the pain at the base of my brain was so bad that I sometimes thought that I would grow crazy; I had the blues so much and was always so depressed I could not seem to shake them off; half of the time I did not seem to have the courage to do my work; everything seemed to go wrong with me, and I was always worrying and fearing the worst. I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After the first few doses a load seemed lifted from my shoulders, I felt better in every way. The blues left me and my head stopped aching; before long my back was better too, and I looked younger and stronger I took six bottles in all, and it is with thankfulness that I acknowledge that my present good health is due to the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

OATS AND FIELD PEAS.

Ohio Farmer Explains Why He Prefers This Combination to Timothy and Clover.

After some years of repeated disappointment in trying to get paying crops of timothy and clover on our light sandy loam, we began in 1899 to try oats and field peas, cutting some to feed green into the cows and haying the rest. The result is that we have since made them our regular hay crop, abandoning timothy entirely but still whacking away at the clover because we hate to give it up. A fine stand of clover secured last year, sown in July with buckwheat, nearly all winter-killed, and the ground (six acres) went to swell our oat and pea acreage this spring to over 20 acres.

Here is a photo showing the growth made by the oats and peas made the man shown being five feet nine inches.

OHIO OATS AND PEA FIELD.

The poorest stand was from 1¼ to two feet high, but most of it was three feet or better. We sow three bushels to the acre, half and half by measure, thoroughly mixed on the barn floor, and put in at one sowing. We set the drill down to suit the peas, and the oats seem to have no trouble in getting up in time to support them. With a large acreage, or other crops needing attention at about the same time, we begin to cut when there are peas "big enough to ent." The oats are mostly well headed out by that time, but we are governed by the condition of the "clover" (peas) part of the combination.

We generally let the hay lie undisturbed in the swath for about 24 hours after cutting, then it is tedded and the next day we drive over it with the loader, which picks it up on the wagon from the swath. In all, we hayed over 16 acres, about four acres being cut and fed green to the cows from day to day after it got a foot or more high. From the earliest cutting there was quite a second growth by the time we were through with the lot (two acres). The first five acres we cut for hay was rained on the night after cutting, and on four days thereafter we were kept from it by intermittent rain. It finally went into the barn in much better shape than timothy and clover—especially the latter—would under the same circumstances. The peas generally had pretty good color, though the oats were decidedly strawy. Later we had about one acre rained on intermittently for two days, after it was ready for tedding. This was practically spoiled, of course, but we hauled five loads to the barnyard and made a stack for the cattle to work at; leaving another small load of scatterings (an 11 acres) that we did not take time to rake up. In all we hauled 49 loads of oat and pea hay from about 16½ acres. We weighed the first load, a rather small one, and from this we estimated that the crop averaged over three tons to the acre.—Eugene E. Stevens, in Ohio Farmer.

How Geese Are Fattened.

The following method of fattening is adopted by the English goose farmer: Geese in good condition should be shut up in a quiet place, shaded from light, where they cannot see other geese at liberty, and should be kept there from twenty to twenty-five days. It is beneficial to let them out for about fifteen to thirty minutes the first thing in the morning and again in the evening about dusk. The meals they get should be nutritious and a mixture of barley meal, wheat meal, a little cornmeal and boiled potatoes given twice a day is good. About the last ten or twelve days it is advisable to mix a little finely chopped rough fat with the meal. This has the effect of plumping them up, rendering their flesh much more palatable. A trough of clear water should be supplied the birds after the evening meal.

Using Straw to Advantage.

There are large sections of the country that are past the "straw burning" habit, that have not reached the higher plane of farming that runs the whole output of straw into manure either by drawing it into the feed lot to be trampled over and worked over by the hogs or using it as bedding for stock. Straw used for the latter purpose not only keeps the stock warm, and [illegible] but helps to absorb and hold the [illegible] manure till it reaches the [illegible] of is drawn to the field. In either case it increases the amount of manure made. Be liberal with straw in the [illegible].—Farmers' Voice.

A WORD ABOUT DUCKS.

If Managed on Correct Principles the Culture of Good Breeds Results in Profit.

Is there any money in ducks? Undoubtedly, but in some seasons it requires careful computation, and close attention to small details to receive pay adequate to the expense, trouble and time expended.

Is there more profit in ducks than there is in chickens? That depends on several things; on the flock of ducks, on the flock of chickens, but more yet upon the person that has charge of the flocks. There are quicker returns received from a flock of ducks than from chickens, and less outlay is necessary in the way of fences and buildings. The per cent. of fertility is higher with duck's eggs than with chicks, and the loss from death is much less but unless one is careful as to small details, will stay at home to give ducklings their meals at regular times, is also a careful seller, and sells just at the right time, ducks will soon "eat their heads off" as far as any profit is concerned, for they are very greedy eaters, and unless they are rushed from the end of the first week, until they are marketable, at eight or ten weeks, the feed bill will probably come to as much as the check for the ducks sold. Besides the slower gain, the price drops in chunks after a certain time. This time differs in different markets, but it is usually in June that the bottom falls out of the duck markets. Some years it is a few days earlier than others, so it is best to be on the safe side by having the ducks out as early as possible. The drop from 12 cents per pound one week to five cents the next, is surely enough of a drop to cause almost anyone to hustle the ducks to market.

A combination of chicks and ducks is the happiest for an all around profit producer, but they must be combined separately, else the combination will cause the owner more trouble and loss than all the trust combinations in the business. Ducks and chicks will not thrive in the same yard. The ducks may get along all right, but woe to the chicks. One can use the hens for incubators. In fact it is necessary to have old hens or wooden incubators. Ducks are no good for this business in the spring. While the hens are incubating their own and the duck's eggs, the ducks will be filling the egg basket, then the young ducks will be for sale before any chicks. When the ducks stop laying, the hens should be laying some too. By a combination of two good breeds, one of ducks, one of chickens, and a careful manager for the flocks, profits should be more, and oftener in coming. Pekins are perhaps the best all around ducks for the farmer and Rocks or Wyandottes in chicks.

Does it sound too nice on paper? Well, try it and see if it don't pay. Be sure, if the round-up shows a loss, that there have been leaks somewhere, or an untoward accident; for it has been proven to be a profitable investment in more than one trink.—Emma Clearwaters, in Ohio Farmer.

THE INCUBATOR HOUSE.

How to Improve It for Late Spring and Early Summer Use at Moderate Expense.

It is difficult to hold the heat uniform in many incubator houses, especially during late spring and early summer. The sun shining on the roof during the day raises the temperature, which falls again at night. A simple way out of this difficulty is to put on an additional roof, leaving an air space between the two as shown in the illustration. The first roof can be covered with cheap boards and roofing paper, held in place with lath battens.

The outer roof should be shingled, as a black roof absorbs the heat rapidly. Unless the house is built in a bank or partly under ground, it should be double-ceiled all around with an air space between the two thicknesses of boards. It would be even better if it were sheathed up in the inside making a second air space.—Farm and Home.

INCUBATOR POINTERS.

Don't feed sloppy feed to chicks. Ducks will do well on it, but chicks do when fed such feed.

The batch that is not finished by the twenty-first day will show weak chicks in the number brought out.

Begin turning the eggs at the end of two days from the time the incubator is started and do not turn them after the eighteenth day.

Eggs that are ill-shaped, or that have rough shells or those having thick and thin spots in the shell seldom hatch well and should be rejected.

Do not open the egg chamber after the chicks begin to pip the shell, until the hatch is finished, unless it is absolutely necessary to do so.

It is a good plan to suspend the thermometer so it does not touch the eggs, the bulb being on a level with the top of the eggs.—Commercial Poultry.

The eggs of fireflies are luminous; but the young insects have no light-giving powers until they are able to fly.

The stick insect of Borneo is the largest insect known. Specimens 13 inches in length have been captured. The stick insect exactly resembles a piece of rough stick.

The schipperke is one of the very few tailless dogs. Its name means "Little Skipper," and was gained from the fact that this dog was a common companion of the Flemish bargee.

Fish kept in filtered water, it is said, will die. That is because the food has been taken out of it. The food, however, is what makes unfiltered water dangerous as a beverage to human beings.

The okapi discovered in Uganda and which resembles the zebra, is found to be not an equine, but a ruminant akin to the giraffe. Prof. Wiedman shows that the head of the Egyptian god Set figured on monuments 1,500 years B. C. has its prototype in that of the okapi.

The common house fly is very rapid in its flight, but its wings make 800 beats a second, and send it through the air 25 feet, under ordinary circumstances, in that space of time. When the insect is alarmed it has been found that it increases its rate of speed to over 150 feet per second. If it could continue such rapid flight for a mile in a straight line it would cover that distance in exactly 33 seconds.

DISGUISED CATARRH

A Stealthy, Insidious, Weakening Enemy to Women—Many Thousand Women Suffer Needlessly From This Cause.

There are a multitude of women, especially housewives, and all other women obliged to be on their feet constantly, who are wretched beyond description, simply because their strength and vitality is sapped away by catarrhal discharges from the pelvic organs. These women get up in the morning tired, drag themselves through their daily duties tired, only to go to bed at night as tired as before.

Mrs. Eva Bartho, 133 East 12th Street, N. Y. City, N. Y., writes:—"I suffered for three years with what is generally known as leucorrhœa in connection with ulceration of the womb. The doctors advocated an operation which I dreaded very much, and strongly objected to go under it. Reading of the value of Peruna, I thought it best to give this well-known remedy a trial, so I bought three bottles of it at once. Now I am a changed woman. Peruna cured me; it took nine bottles, but I felt so much improved I kept taking it, as I dreaded an operation so much. I am to-day in perfect health, and have not felt so well for fifteen years."—Mrs. Eva Bartho.

MRS. EVA BARTHO.

MISS LOUISE MAHON.

MRS. KATE MANN.

Miss Louise Mahon, 3 Glen Baille Street, Toronto, Ont. Can., Secretary of the King's Daughters and Secretary of Lady Macesbecs, writes:—"I all women knew of the benefits to be derived from taking Peruna we would have many happier and more healthful women. My health has never been too robust, and I am easily fatigued and can not stand much. About a year ago I was so run down that I had to take to my bed, and became weaker and weaker. A friend advised me to try Peruna, and I have great reason to be grateful, for in two weeks I was out of bed and in a month I was perfectly well, and I now find that my health is much more robust than formerly, so that I take Peruna once or twice a month and keep well."—Louise Mahon.

Peruna is such a perfect specific for each case that when patients have once used it they can never be induced to quit it until they are permanently cured. It begins to relieve the disagreeable symptoms at once. The backache ceases, the trembling knees are strengthened, the appetite restored, the digestion made perfect, the dull headache is stopped and the weakening drains are gradually cured. These results certainly follow a course of treatment with Peruna.

Barbara Alberty, corner Seventh and Walnut streets, Appleton, Wis., writes as follows in regard to Peruna:

"For years I have suffered with backache and severe pains in the side. I doctored so much that I became discouraged. A school friend told me how very much Peruna had benefited her and I sent out for a bottle, which did more to relieve me than all the other medicine I have ever taken. I used it faithfully for two weeks, and it completely cured me. I have not had any pains since, anywhere, but feel like a new woman. I am truly thankful for what Peruna has done for me."—Barbara Alberty.

Mrs. Kate Mann, 806 Bathurst Street, Toronto, Ont. Can., Vice President of the Ladies Aid Society, writes:—"I am pleased to give praise to Peruna for the blessed relief I found through its use. I suffered for years with backache and dragging down pains and often had to go to bed and stay there when I was so busy that I could ill be spared. It was therefore a simple godsend to me when Peruna was brought to my notice. Every drop seemed to give me new life, and every dose made me feel much better, and I promised myself at once if I found that it cured me I would advocate it so that other suffering women should know of it. I have been in perfect health for one year. I enjoy work and pleasure because in such fine health, and no trouble seems too heavy to bear when you are in good health. Peruna has simply been a household blessing, and I never will be without it again."—Mrs. Kate Mann.

Mrs. Ann Martin, 47 Hoyt Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:—"Peruna did so much for me that I feel it my duty to recommend it to others who may be similarly afflicted. About a year ago my health was completely broken down, had backache, dizziness and irregularities and life seemed dark indeed. We had used Peruna in our home as a tonic, and for colds and catarrh, and I decided to try it for my trouble. In less than three months I became regular, my pains had entirely disappeared, and I am now perfectly well."—Mrs. Anna Martin.

MRS. ANNA MARTIN.

Mrs. Wm. Hetrick, Kennard, Washington county, Neb., writes:

"I am fifty-six years old and have not felt well since the Change of Life began ten years ago. I was in misery somewhere most of the time. My back was very weak, and my flesh so tender it hurt me to lean against the back of a chair. I had pain under my shoulder-blades, in the small of my back and hips. I sometimes wished myself out of this world. Had hot and cold spells, dizziness and trembling of the limbs, and was losing flesh all the time. After following your directions and taking Peruna I now feel like a different person."—Mrs. Wm. Hetrick.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Peruna can be purchased for $1 per bottle at all first-class drug stores.

The Four-Track News.

When the different members of the editor's family ask, "Why don't The Four-Track News come?" it is getting to be like Castoria, even "the childreiery for it," and this tells the story. It is the most interesting publication that comes in our exchanges, and the reason is easily told. Mr. Geo. H. Daniels, the General Passenger Agent, who has charge of it, has the "Carnegie faculty" of getting good men around him, who know their business, and the result is that in everything the publication department of the New York Central distributes it is "all right."—Brooklyn, N. Y., Journal.

We are authorized to announce James A. Duncan as a candidate for clerk of the Boone circuit court, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

We are authorized to announce Jas. H. Craven, of Verona, as a candidate for Clerk of the Boone Circuit Court. Subject to the action of the Democratic party.

We are authorized to announce T. T. HEDGER, of Georgetown, Scott county, as a candidate for Commissioner of Agriculture. Subject to the will of the Democratic party. Primary election, May 9th, 1903.

SOME friend has our thanks for an illustrated copy of the Los Angeles, California, Times.

THE Senate ratified the Cuban reciprocity treaty, last Thursday, by a vote of fifty to sixteen, after which that body adjourned sine die.

THE State campaign is warming up but the enthusiasm is of the wrong kind and bodes no good for the Democratic party at the November election.

THE calling of the primary elction for this county to be held on May the 9th will be endorsed by the Democrats, as they could see no reason for holding two primary elections this spring.

The Cuban reciprocity treaty was so muddled by the Senate, it is claimed, and the State Department does not know what to do with it. President Palma has been asked to call the Cuban Congress in extra session to act on the treaty before April 1 as a possible way out of the trouble. As ratified by the Senate the treaty provides for ratification by both American and Cuban Senates by March 31, and then it was added the treaty "shall not take effect until approved by the Congress."

IRA JULIAN, of Frankfort, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Attorney-General, was in town, last Friday. Mr. Julian has been in campaigns before that brought him to Boone county, where he always found friends. He is a very pleasant gentleman, and has filled several responsible official positions in the past. He is well qualified for the position of Attorney-General, and is a good campaigner, and will be very much in the race on the 9th of May.

JAS. H. FUQUA, of Logan county, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Superintendent of Public Instruction, was making acquaintances here, last Friday. Mr. Fuqua, is a very pleasant gentleman, and has been identified with the educational interests of the State for many years, having been a teacher in some of the best colleges and schools in Kentucky. He is making a vigorous campaign, and leaves a good impression with those whom he meets.

SENATOR TILLMAN was asked at Madison, Wisconsin, one day last week, about the propriety of calling a convention to meet in Atlanta, Georgia, to discuss the race question, and answered by saying that the problem could not be solved in that way, and intimated that the people of Wisconsin did not sufficiently understand the race question to send delegates who understand the matter, and that they could not arrive at any definite conclusion. He said he had been studying the question for twenty-five years and had not arrived at any conclusion.

COL. NALL WILL NOT RUN.

Says His Information From Farming Element All Over the State

Is That Hubert Vreeland Will Be Nominated By Big Vote For Commissioner of Agriculture.

Col. Ion B. Nall, State Commissioner of Agriculture, who for forty years has been one of the foremost agriculturists in the State, and who is conceded to be more thoroughly posted as to farming interests than almost any other Kentuckian, has announced to his friends that at the expiration of his present term of office he will return to his old home to live. Col. Nall has organized more farmers' institutes than any other Commissioner the State ever had, and he has been one of the leaders in good roads movement.

Col. Nall, in an interview last week, said he was taking no active part in the selection of his successor, as that was a duty which developed upon the Democratic farmers of the State, but when asked for his opinion on the race he said he personally was going to vote for Hubert Vreeland because he believed him to be not only the best qualified, but by far a more aggressive man than the others, and by reason of his experience as assistant in charge of the office would not have to consume his time learning the routine, and would be in a better position next winter to secure favorable legislation for the farmer, such as good roads and many other things that are needed with all of which he is thoroughly conversant. Col. Nall said that from what he could hear from the farmers and others with whom he came in contact, there was not the slightest doubt in his mind about the nomination of Mr. Vreeland by one of the largest majorities that would be received in any of the races for State offices.

The Boone County Democratic Executive Committee met in Burlington, Ky. on Saturday March 21st, and the following resolutions were adopted:

First:—That a primary eleetion be held on Saturday, May 9th, 1903, for the purpose of nominating a democratic candidate for Circuit Clerk and for Representative, and that a poll be opened in each and every precinct in the county of Boone between the hours of 6o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p.m., standard time, under the primary election law of this State.

Second:—That in said primary all known democrats of lawful age, and all democratic youths who will be of lawful age on the 3rd. day of November, 1903, shall be entitled to vote.

Third:—That the officers of election shall be selected by this committee and said officers will be asked to donate their services free of charge.

Fourth:—That upon application to the Chairman of this Committee each candidate shall be permitted to have a challenger at the polls in each precinct and an inspector of the count of the ballots in each precinct in the county.

Fifth:—It shall be the duty of the officers of the election at the close of the polls to count the vote and certify the result to the Committee and they shall deliver the ballot box to the Committee, and said Committee shall meet on the 12th day of May, at Burlington, at 10 o'clock a. m. for the purpose of canvassing the result and delivering to the successful candidate a certificate of his nomination.

Sixth:—That the expenses of this primary shall be paid by the announced candidates, who shall on or before the 23rd of April, notify the chairman of this committe of such intention, and pay to him his assessment.

Seventh:—That the assessment of this primary shall be $20 each for candidates for Circuit Clerk, and $10 each for candidates for Representative, and in the event there is a surplus remaining after defraying the expenses of said primary, it shall be returned to the candidates in the proportion in which it was paid, and in the event the expenses are greater than the amount assessed, said overplus is to be paid by the successful candidates in same proportion as levied.

He declares he will be very busy during the next three weeks writing a book of the story of his life, in which he proposes to deny many falsehoods published concerning him.

Rouse—Craig.

On last Wednesday, at 1 o'clock p. m., Mr. Carl Rouse, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Rouse and Miss Myra Craig, daughter of Mr. Chas. Craig, of Rabbit Hash, and niece of Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Lawell, with whom she had made her home for some time, both of this vicinity, were married by Rev. Sproles in the Baptist church, of which they were both members.

They were attended by the bride's brother, Mr. Chas. Craig, jr., and Miss Sadie Crisler, of Burlington. The ushers were Messrs. Otto Crisler and Cecil Gaines, two of the most affable young gentlemen of the town.

At exactly 1 o'clock the doors of the church were thrown open by the ushers and as the strains of a beautiful wedding march rendered superbly by Miss Ella Duncan pealed forth, the bridal party marched up the aisle and was met at the altar by Rev. Sproles, who performed the ceremony couched in beautifully and impressive language.

The bride, always charming, was attired in a beautiful gown of Castor shade canvass cloth handsomely trimmed with Crepe de Chine and Ecru lace. The groom, smiling and happy, in the conventional black. The brides-maid looked beautiful in White Oxford cloth with Cluny and pearl ornaments; best man wore corresponding black.

Immediately after the ceremony they left for the bride's father, where an elegant supper and many friends, awaited them. Friday they returned to the groom's home and were entertained at dinner, which consisted of all the delicacies of the season. May their lives be as the day—all sunshine is the wish of Craig and wife, of East Bend, entertained a few friends on the evening of the 18th inst., in honor of their daughter, Myrah, who was married that day at Burlington Baptist church to Carl Rouse, of Burlington neighborhood. The bride and groom were accompanied by Miss Sadie Crisler, of Burlington, and Charles Craig, brother of the bride, who were their attendants at the church. They received some useful and pretty presents, mostly silver and glass. The supper was a bountiful and delicious repast, and was enjoyed by all who were so fortunate as to partake of it. The happy pair have the best wishes of many friends at the bride's old home.

An important contribution to scientific data bearing on the necessity of Sunday rest from labor has been made by a Pennsylvania Railroad official. He selected two groups of laborers from the working force of a certain freight house controlled by his road. He measured the working capacity of each group in terms of tons handled daily for a week. On Sunday one group rested; the others worked as usual. On the following Monday the men who had been continuously at service showed a decrease of 10 per cent in efficiency as compared with the previous Monday, and each day after their comparative delinquency became greater. The men who had their Sunday respite, on the other hand were as valuable to the company the second week as the first.—Duluth Minn. Herald.

I cannot recommend Thedford's Black-Draught too highly. I keep it in my house all the time and have used it for the last ten years. I never gave my children any other laxative. I think I could never be able to work without it on account of being troubled with constipation. Your medicine is all that keeps me up.

He will dig the corn and wheel barrow out when the ground settles.

The following are the only reports made by justices of the peace under the order of the fiscal court requiring them to inspect and report upon the manner in which the roads in their respective districts were worked. The inspection was made by them within the time required by the order of the court:

To the Honorable Judge of the Boone County Court:—I would beg leave to make the following report on the roads. I have been over all the roads in the Rabbit Hash precinct, and find that they have all been well worked, and are in as good condition as could be expected in this kind of a time, except in district No. 3, in which there has been no overseer, and there has been no work, and the road is in bad condition.

In Big Bone precinct I find that the roads in district No. 1, have been worked as well as the means in the overseer's hands would admit. Some places are too narrow, but I see no way for him to better them with his present means.

In district No. 2 there is a great deal of the road running in branches and creeks, and I think that they should be changed so as to get them out of them. On the road leading from G. L. Smith's place on Gunpowder creek to Hathaway the branch has been allowed to take the road. I think it could have been kept out. The rest of the road has been well worked.

In No. 3 some of the roads have not been worked. One bridge on the road leading from Big Bone Springs past J. H. Slater's I would recommend be raised on a level with the road. I think it would save some mud at the end of the bridge. In this district we had no overseer until recently.

In district No. 4 the back water gets over about two-thirds of the roads, making them very hard to keep in order. The head water gets over a good deal of them. The road seems to be well worked with the means that is in his hands.

Yours Respectfully,
Moses Scott, J. P. B. C.

To the Boone County Fiscal Court:—Acting under an order of this court requiring me to inspect the county roads in my magisterial district in the time specified in the order, I rode three days examining the roads and enquiring about the work, and would respectfully report as follows:

In the Beaver precinct I found the roads well worked, and I believe more in accordance with the instructions of the court than I find elsewhere, working the hands to do the grading and using all the money hauling and spreading stone.

In the Union precinct the grading was well done and a fair share of stone was hauled and spread. I think that much more stone would have been hauled, but the bad weather set in and prevented it. This I found to be the case in both precincts, and it is probable that they, the overseers, will, most of them, have money to report unexpended at the end of the year.

I believe that they all have honestly discharged their duties, except in delaying their hauling until the weather prevented. I would suggest that the court insist that more stone be hauled and less grading be done, and especially on the most important road.

Respectfully submitted,
M. C. NORMAN, J. P. B. C.

Having been appointed by the fiscal court of Boone County, at its spring term of 1902 to inspect the county roads of the First Magisterial District of this county we beg leave to submit the following report, which is very imperfect, owing to the almost impassable condition of the county roads, caused by the incessant rains that fell during the months of November and December:

In the Bullittsville precint, road district No. 1.—C. W. Riley overseer—we find the roads that are under the supervision of John Cropper, have been very much improved and are nearly all macadamized. There has been very little work done on the rest, owing as Mr. Riley says, he was unable to employ teams to haul stone and gravel to repair said roads, and he still has money in his possession unexpended.

Road Districts Nos. 2, 3 and 4 of said district we find from inquiry have been well worked and were in good condition up to the time of the late fall rains.

In Burlington precinct we find from persons living in various parts of the precinct, the roads have been well worked, and were in good condition, especially in road districts Nos. 2 and 4, under the supervision of Bert Sullivan, and Ben J. Kelly.

Respectfully submitted,
CLINTON GAINES, J. P. B. C.

THE BIG COAL STRIKE.

Anthracite Commission Makes Public Their Report.

Mine Owners Seem Satisfied With the Findings and Will Put Clerks to Work Figuring Up Bonus Due Each Employe.

Washington, March 23.—The report of the anthracite strike commission was made public Saturday. It is considered a victory for the miners, although they failed to obtain complete [illegible] for which they had contended.

The commission adjudges that the men shall have an increase in wages amounting to 10 per cent. in the case of contract miners over the rates in 1902. Water hoisting engineers get an increase of 10 per cent. and eight-hour shifts. Other engineers and pump men, 5 per cent. increase and Sunday holidays, without loss of pay. Firemen, eight-hour shifts, without increase in pay after April 1, 1903, but an increase of 10 per cent. from November, 1902, until April 1, 1903.

The commission fixes a minimum wage, as well as a sliding scale of wages. All disputes that arise during the life of the award, from April, 1902, until March 31, 1906, shall be settled by arbitration. The report also provides against discrimination on the part of mine owners or the mine workers on account of membership or non-membership in a union.

The commission discusses the question of recognizing the union, but declined to make any award in the matter. Check weighmen and check docking bosses shall be employed when requested by the miners; cars must be distributed equitably and the output of coal shall not be curtailed save by mutual agreement. The sliding scale of wages shall be based on the minimum price of $4.50 for a ton of coal. The employes must be furnished with an itemized account.

The commission finds that the "boycott" and the "black list" are inhumane institutions. The average daily rate of earnings by the miners does not compare favorably with that of other industries. The union must not undertake to assume or to interfere with the management of the business of the employer.

Shamokin, Pa., March 23.—Coal operators of this vicinity at an informal meeting decided that the best plan in reference to paying the mine workers the back wages since November 1, awarded by the strike commission, is to divide the amount into three parts and add each amount to the three ensuing regular pay days, the first of which will fall on March 30.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., March 23.—Most of the mine owners Sunday refused to comment on the mine commission award. They seem to be satisfied or at least willing to abide by the findings.

An officer of the largest corporation said that violence and boycotts have been denounced in the report in no unmistakable language and that peace and normal conditions would prevail in this region for the next three years at least.

All the local companies will put clerks at work to figure up the bonus coming to each employe under the award granting 10 per cent. increase on wages earned since November 1. The Lehigh Valley Co. has in its employment 35,000 men and most of them will receive from $25 to $50 each. The miners have made good wages since the strike ended and will profit by the award to the extent of from $40 to $60 each on percentage. The Susquehanna Coal Co. was the only corporation that was not represented before the commission, but they have agreed to abide by the award.

VOLCANO LA SOUFRIERE.

Violent Eruptions Took Place Early Sunday Morning.

Kingston, St. Vincent, March 23.—The eruption of La Soufriere, which began Saturday, continued and increased in activity during the night until it became most violent at 7 o'clock Sunday morning. At half-past 8 o'clock Sunday morning its violence was unabated and the spectacle was awe-inspiring. The crater is belching forth dense black clouds which rise heavenward, accompanied by loud roaring and flashes which rend the spreading pall of smoke which now envelopes the entire island in darkness. Electrical discharges occurred at intervals during the night while at daybreak the sunlight was playing on the stupendous volcanic clouds produced exceedingly beautiful effects.

FAMILY TRAGEDY.

A. M. Betty, His Wife and Child Found Dead in Their Home.

Cincinnati, March 23.—There was a mysterious triple tragedy here Saturday night at the home of A. M. Betty, local manager of the Washburn-Crosby mills, of Minneapolis, in the Carrolton flats on Gilbert avenue, but it was not known until Sunday night when the dead bodies of A. M. Betty, his wife, Lulu, and their boy, Harry, aged 20 months, were found by neighbors. A note written by Betty was found in which he accused his wife with killing the babe and the police think the woman may have killed herself and babe on account of domestic troubles. It is stated that divorce proceedings had been instituted two years ago and were withdrawn before the birth of their boy. As Betty was known to have been in a game near his home as late as Saturday midnight it is thought that he found the dead bodies on his return home and then deliberately took his own life. The body of the babe was found in the basin with no marks on it whatever. It is thought that Betty took it from the crib and tried to revive it by turning on the water. When he found it dead he lay down beside his wife's dead body to die from asphyxiation and in that position their bodies were found. The odor of gas led to the search Sunday evening that disclosed the three dead bodies. There is nothing to indicate how any of the family came to their death except the line left by Betty and the fact that the gas was turned on. The coroner and others think Mrs. Betty was dead hours before her husband came home and that the babe possibly may have died after he returned. While there are indefinite reports about Betty's troubles at home, he was prominent in business circles. He came originally from Memphis and formerly was with omnibus transfer companies at Chattanooga and St. Louis.

Nashville, Tenn., March 23.—Alfred M. Betty, whose name figures in the triple tragedy at Cincinnati, was a native of Murfreesboro, Tenn., where he was prominently connected. His mother still has large property holdings there, though she makes Estill Springs her home. Betty had made frequent visits to Murfreesboro since removing from there ten years ago, and was highly thought of there.

SHOOTING AT A WEDDING FEAST.

Discarded Lover, Extending In One Hand a Gift, Shot the Bride.

Chicago, March 23.—Extending in one hand a wedding gift, Benjamin Valerie, a discarded suitor, pointed a revolver and fired at the bride of Joseph Malone at the wedding feast which they were celebrating here Sunday night. In the struggle which followed as the bride sank to the ground dangerously wounded, Valerie received fatal injuries and Michael Malone, a brother of the groom, was so severely hurt that he may not recover. The tragedy occurred when the nuptial festivities were at their height and while enthusiastic guests were crowding around the newly wedded pair to offer congratulations.

HELD UP AN ELECTRIC CAR.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 23.—Three masked robbers attempted to hold up a car on the Los Angeles & Pacific electric railway between Los Angeles and Santa Monica and after a pistol fight between C. W. Henderson, a passenger, and one of the robbers, the other two highwaymen began shooting through the crowded car. H. A. Griswold, of Mason, Ia., was killed, and two persons were wounded. It is believed that one of the robbers was wounded, but the three desperadoes escaped.

RAILWAY TRAFFIC IMPEDED.

The Heaviest Snow Storm of the Year at St. Joseph, Mo.

St. Joseph, Mo., March 23.—The heaviest snow storm of the year set in at 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon and an hour later railway traffic was greatly impeded. Sunday night telegraph and telephone wires were only partially in operation. The flakes were the largest seen here, and while much of the initial fall melted rapidly, the temperature fell slowly and the blanket of white soon covered the northern part of the state to a depth of from six to twelve inches.

CASTRO RESIGNED.

Presidential Function Turned Over to the Congress.

The President Was Requested to Reconsider His Decision—Will Present Another Message of a Solution to the Situation.

Caracas, March 23.—President Castro has resigned. He placed his resignation of the presidency of the republic of Venezuela in the hands of the president of congress after reading the presidential message.

The congressional hall was crowded Saturday and all the members of the diplomatic corps were present when President Castro read his message to congress. President Castro first passed in review the terrible conditions which prevailed in the country and denounced the errors of his countrymen.

The president of congress then received President Castro's resignation and a committee was appointed to draw up a reply to the tendered resignation.

Later a night session of congress was held and a resolution was adopted, requesting President Castro to reconsider his resignation in view of the critical condition of the republic and a vote of confidence in his policy was passed unanimously. A committee was appointed to transmit this resolution to the president Sunday.

The delegation appointed by congress called at noon Sunday at the president's residence and transmitted to President Castro the resolution unanimously adopted by congress, refusing to accept his resignation and requesting him to reconsider his decision. President Castro in reply declined to change his mind, but after being urged by his personal friends he offered to present another message to congress, which he will meet on Thursday to suggest a solution to the situation.

Washington, March 23.—President Castro's resignation came in for a good deal of discussion Sunday in governmental and diplomatic circles. The general sentiment of persons conversant with South American affairs seemed to be that the president's action was merely a political move, having for its object the declaration of an expression from congress of its united and hearty support. It was not thought that he had any serious idea of giving up his office permanently. Some manifestation of confidence, it is suggested, was necessary, in view of conditions existing in Venezuela, arising it might be out of the extraordinary import duties levied by Castro about a month ago and the effect on the country of the revolution through which the country has been passing.

Montevideo, March 23.—Peace was signed Sunday between the Uruguayan government and the rebels.

The government, while taking strong military measures to suppress the revolutionists, also made certain proposals with a view to arriving at a peaceful settlement.

Washington, March 18.—Without dotting an "i" or crossing a "t," even without changing a single punctuation mark, the senate Tuesday voted to ratify the treaty with the republic of Colombia for the construction of the isthmian canal. The vote for ratification was 73 in the affirmative to 5 in the negative. The senate was in executive session when the result was announced, so that only the senators themselves and a few confidential employes were present. All the senators announced themselves as gratified to have the long siege terminated, but none of them manifested their appreciation by cheers or bandicapping. The day was given up almost entirely to general debate on the treaty and in addition to the set speeches made under the general agreement by Senator Morgan and Nelson, there were many short addresses and a rather long speech by Senator Daniel (Va.). The only party vote of the day was taken on the substitute for article four, which was agreed upon by the democratic caucus and had reference to the acquisition of territory in Central and South America by the United States. There were a number of speeches on this amendment, but it was voted down by an almost two-thirds majority, the ballot footing up 51 ayes to 27 noes. When the senate adjourned at 6 o'clock there was a general belief that the business of the session might be completed in time to permit final adjournment Wednesday. Some, however, placed the date 24 hours later.

Washington, March 19.—The race question again was discussed in the senate Wednesday. Mr. Money spoke for two hours, his remarks having direct reference to the action of the president in closing the Indianola, Miss., post office. Before adjourning at 7 o'clock Wednesday night the senate entered into a unanimous agreement to vote on the Cuban reciprocity treaty at 3 o'clock Thursday. The hope of securing a vote Wednesday was dissipated by the discovery that there were more speeches to be made in opposition to the treaty than had been counted upon. Indeed, it was difficult to secure an agreement to vote on the treaty Thursday, and it was evident that this result could not have been accomplished but for the anxiety of senators to secure a final adjournment of the session. The executive session covered six hours and was devoted largely to adverse criticisms of the treaty. During the day Senator Newlands made a plea for the annexation of Cuba and presented an amendment to the treaty tendering an invitation to that island to become a state of the American union.

Washington, March 20.—After ratifying the Cuban reciprocity treaty the senate adjourned sine die Thursday at 15 minutes past 5 o'clock. Practically the entire day was spent behind closed doors in executive session. Most of the time was devoted to consideration of the Cuban treaty. Several speeches were made in opposition to the treaty and one in favor of it and then promptly at the agreed hour, 3 o'clock, voting began. Roll calls were had on a number of amendments and the treaty itself was made the subject of an aye and no vote. The motion to ratify was adopted by a ballot of 50 to 16, somewhat more than a three-fourth vote, whereas only a two-thirds vote was necessary to secure a ratification. Immediately after the doors were closed a few minutes past 11 o'clock Senator Foster (La.) took the floor in order to make a set speech in opposition to the treaty. He spoke for about two hours and a half. In the main his speech was an appeal for the protection of the American sugar producing industry. He spoke especially for the cane sugar interests of Louisiana, but said that while the sugar interest was of paramount importance in his own state, on account of the cane produced there, the beet sugar industry had grown to such proportions that many other portions of the union also were coming to have a very pronounced interest in the making of sugar. He drew a graphic picture of present conditions in Louisiana and said that if the treaty should be ratified the result was liable to be very disastrous to many of his constituents. He appealed to senators from north and south alike to refrain from inflicting this hardship on his people. Mr. Foster also made the point that there was nothing to prevent the introduction of Chinese coolie labor into Cuba and said that if such labor should be introduced American labor could not compete with it.

SURE CURE FOR RHEUMATISM.

In This Case the Tomato Proved to Be Just as Good as the Potato.

"I have been cured of rheumatism strangely," said a fat man, according to the Philadelphia Record. "It happened in this manner: "I was groaning in my office the other day when the janitor of the building entered and said:

"'Are you ill, sir?'

"'Oh, I'm nearly crazy with rheumatism,' I answered.

"'Well, sir,' said he, 'I tell you what you do. Just you get a raw tomato and carry it in your pocket and in a little while you will be all right.'

"I got the raw tomato, and I carried it, and, by Joye, the rheumatism left me. So I called in the janitor and made him a present of a box of good cigars.

"'Well, sir,' said he, 'William,' I said to him in a hearty voice. 'With your raw tomato you cured me entirely.'

"'Raw tomato, sir?' says William. 'Why, sir, you mistake me. I didn't use raw tomato. I said it was a raw potato that you were to carry.'"

A RESOURCEFUL BRIDE.

Her first venture at cooking dinner in her own home had passed uneventfully and they sat in silence at opposite ends of the table wondering at the novelty of it all and gazing at each other, relates the New York Times.

"Honestly, honestly—cross your heart—did you like it, Fred?" she asked finally.

"Never enjoyed anything so much in my life," he said, and swallowed a lump.

"Everything, everything—from soup to pudding?"

"Every mouthful, from soup to pudding," he said, bravely.

"Oh, I'm so relieved, then," she said, as a huge sigh escaped her. "You see, I forgot to order the sirup for the sauce for the pudding, and I had to have something, so I took the cough sirup, and I was so afraid you'd taste it."

A Cure for Rheumatism.

Alhambra, Ill., Mar. 23rd:—Physicians are much puzzled over the case of Mr. F. J. Oswald, of this place. Mr. Oswald suffered much with Rheumatism and was treated by doctor after doctor with the result that he got no better whatever. They seemed unable to do anything for him and he continued to suffer till he heard of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Mr. Oswald began a treatment of this remedy which very soon did for him what the doctors had failed to do, and they cannot understand it.

This is the same remedy that cured Hon. Fred A. Busse, our State Treasurer, of a very severe case of Rheumatism some years ago, and which has since had an unbroken record of success in curing all forms of Rheumatism and Kidney Trouble.

There seems to be no case of these painful diseases that Dodd's Kidney Pills will not cure promptly and permanently.

How It Really Happens.

"Johnny," cautiously inquired Mr. Sixweek of her little brother, when he called the other evening—"she" was putting the finishing touches to her toilet upstairs—"have you ever, does you ever hear your sister speak of me?"

"You can't pump me," promptly replied Johnny, "I don't butt into my sister's business."

Then Johnny picked up a shinny stick out of the hall rack and went out.

THE ST. FRANCIS LEVEE

Two More Breaks and the Situation Becomes Serious.

Long Line of Levees Guarding the Mississippi River Front Reported to Be In a Critical Condition at Many Points.

Memphis, Tenn., March 21.—Friday the St. Francis levees gave way at Random Shot and Shawnee Village, Ark., the first about 42 miles from Memphis and the second about 35. Both crevasses are reported to be serious, the one at Shawnee being the worst of the three. The two breaks Friday probably will increase slightly the water in the territory of Arkansas, which is flooded by the break at Trice's and in addition, they are flooding a vast scope of country, which has thus far been free from any considerable amount of water. The situation therefore in Arkansas is more grave than at any time during the flood. Relief measures have been and must be for several days completely inadequate.

The long line of levees that guard the river front of the Mississippi and protect the vast and fertile delta region of that state and which have thus far stood firm against the great flood, are reported to be in a critical condition at many points and news of disasters from that country will not be surprising. At points the water is seeping through the embankments, flooding villages and plantations and at other places the embankment is overtopped by the flood and enormous quantities of water are being discharged into the country.

Refugees are continuing to arrive in great numbers and the facilities are completely too limited to care for them. In response to a telegram asking for aid Mayor Williams, of this city, Secretary of War Root has answered that he will supply all needed tents as well as provisions for the flood sufferers. This offer will be accepted.

These tents will be pitched on vacant lots and commissaries will be established so that all the destitute may be cared for. The prompt action of the secretary and of the cabinet has given the greatest satisfaction to the people of the city as well as to those of the surrounding territory.

From the protected sections able-bodied Negro men and their entire families are coming to the city in large numbers, ostensibly as flood refugees, but it is claimed their real purpose is to escape work and be cared for by the city and charitable organizations. This is not only increasing the city's burden but is working great hardship upon the planters as they can not secure laborers, which are so badly needed at present.

Vicksburg, Miss., March 21.—Showers, accompanied by a stiff northwest wind, have caused increased anxiety for the safety of the levees in this section. A more rapid rise in the river also is noted, the gauge here registering 50.1 Friday night, a rise of .6 in 24 hours.

Reports from Duvall's late Friday evening state that the main levee there is in no immediate danger, but from the end of the loop to Chotard, a distance of four miles, the old protection levee is in bad shape with the water washing over at several points. Back water from Steele's Bayou has attacked the river from the rear. This, it is feared, will have the effect of weakening the base. Inspector Dulaney has a large force of men sacking the top of the levee from Duvall's to Chotard, and strenuous efforts are being made to withstand the rapidly rising flood.

The private levee at Davis Island, south of here, was dynamited Friday night in several places. This was done with the object of easing the water through and preventing the damage that will be the result from a sudden rush.

CONGRESS' EXTRAVAGANCE.

Expenditures More Than Doubled in Seven Years by Republican Administration.

The people of the United States have become so used to hearing about millions that but few really appreciate what a large sum a million dollars is, and yet to even count it, at the rate of one for each second of time, would require over 277 hours, or nearly 23 days of 12 hours each of continuous mental work. The congress of the United States, which has just adjourned, voted $1,534,105,514 during its two years' work. This sum would require 35,742 days to count, or 98 years of 12 hours a day, with no time for eating or even speaking. It is estimated that one-third of this enormous sum, which is beyond the computing of any man during his life, is either wasted or used for purposes for which the tax payers do not receive any benefit.

It is only four years ago, during war time, that a billion dollar congress was denounced by even republican newspapers, as profligate of the people's money, and we were told that new taxes would have to be imposed if the extravagance was continued. For the year ending June 30, 1897, the appropriations for all purposes were $296,862,627, but that was the last year appropriations were made by a democratic congress. Now more than double that large amount is to be spent. The republican administration has increased the expense of running the government more than $400,000,000 in seven years.

THE 57TH CONGRESS HOMEWARD BOUND.

If this extravagance continues it will require in the year 1910 that the Sixty-first congress must appropriate over $3,000,000,000 to keep up the pace that the Fifty-seventh congress has set. Can the people stand this tremendous drain on their earnings? Is it not necessary to take stock and figure out just where the leaks are, and retrench accordingly? The business man, the farmer and the mechanic, who have launched on a sea of extravagance, are obliged sooner or later to steer their bark closer to the wind and seek a safe harbor from the financial storm that surely follows fair weather.

Every man, woman and child is now taxed over ten dollars every year to support this extravagant republican government. That means that each head of a family pays over $40, which is more than doubled in an indirect way by the enormous profits which the trusts and combines extort through the working of the protective tariff. If the cities and towns of the United States were run on the same extravagant plan that the federal government is, there would be a general going into bankruptcy.

DRIFT OF OPINION

——Roosevelt has demonstrated that riding a broncho is easier than bucking a trust.—Memphis News.

——Speaker Henderson retired "amid wild enthusiasm." The act of retirement was popular enough, in his case, to warrant a bit of hilarity.—Albany Argus.

——The Fifty-seventh was a billion-and-a-half congress. Will the Fifty-eighth be a two-billion aggregation? The nation, like the individual, never has any trouble making its expenses keep up with its income.—Indianapolis News (Ind.).

——If, as the president, governor and vice governor appear to hold, the reduction of duties on imports from the Philippines to one-fourth the Dingley low rates will save the islands from industrial and commercial ruin, would not their abolition altogether give a hope of the prosperity which had been promised as the consequence of "benevolent assimilation?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

——The Fifty-seventh congress, in spite of failure in the performance of duty, has, nevertheless, indirectly served the people. Its record proves that a change in the majority control of congress is imperative, if the people's will is to prevail. Voters have been taught that the trusts control the republican party. Antitrust legislation, tariff revision and a wise and profitable reciprocity must come through democratic success at the polls. The effect of this teaching should exercise a compelling influence in next year's elections.—St. Louis Republic.

REPUBLICANS BUSTING TRUSTS

An Expensive Amusement That Requires Education to Be Properly Conducted.

The republican members of congress may be backward in enacting laws that the people demand or desire, but when they come to creating new offices with fat salaries, their industry is unquestioned. Having established the new department of commerce and labor, of course it has to be provided with officials and clerks and money to pay them and other expenses. There are thirteen bureaus, which are already provided for by appropriations already made. Mr. Cortelyou, the new secretary, has furnished an estimate to congress for the other three bureaus, which are necessary under the new law, and asks for $660,000 for salaries and nearly a million dollars for various expenses. No doubt all that he asks congress to provide is necessary if a real trust-busting department is intended, but until the republican leaders are assured that there will not be any too strenuous work in that direction, there will be no such extravagant sum voted as Mr. Cortelyou asks for. The trusts and corporations have too many friends in congress to allow a precedent for huge appropriations to be made that might be used to annoy them, when some administration will be in power that really would be intent on trust-busting. If Mr. Cortelyou, after a year's trial, is found to be conservative and only does just enough trust-busting to fool the people into believing that something is being done, the next congress will be found quite willing to fill his requisitions, even to the extravagant amount that he now asks for.

Republican trust-busting is an accomplishment that requires education to make perfect and the most necessary part of it is, to make a good showing and yet accomplish nothing.

Imperialism Not So Dead.

The republicans have been claiming that the whole trouble in the Philippines has been settled and that the supreme court had long ago decided the legal status of the inhabitants. But the evidence is all against their claims, for the late news from the islands tells of the most unsatisfactory conditions existing there. The Manila Times of December 29 describes the Moros dying by hundreds from cholera which is sweeping the whole Lake Lanao district of Mindanao. The cable dispatch from Gov. Taft to the president urging legislation which he says is necessary for the welfare and political necessities of the people, also shows a most critical state of affairs. The article by Justice Brewer in Scribner's, forecasting important cases that are yet to come before the supreme court, deals with "questions arising out of our insular possessions. To what extent," he adds, "the provisions of the constitution operate in these possessions is yet undetermined." Evidently Justice Brewer does not consider the legal status of the islands settled by any means, and yet republicans in and out of congress keep repeating their fables that imperialism is no longer an issue.

——Among the labor measures that a republican majority has shelved in the senate are the antiinjunction bills, the eight hour bill, the railroad appliance measure and the immigration bill. It is very well known who are the opponents of these salutary measures. They are great combines, the shipping, steel and other trusts, who are deadly foes to any measure that is designed to help workingmen. They fear most the passage of the antiinjunction measure, which would curb the power of federal judges to issue sweeping injunctions that deprive laboring men of every right which the constitution has conferred upon them.—Denver News.

——The trusts need have no fears so long as the republicans continue to control all branches of the government. There may be strong antitrust talk on the part of the republican president and a few republican members of the house, but with the republican party in control the trusts are in the hands of their friends.—Atlanta Constitution.

——The Littlefield "anti-trust" bill wasn't much of a trust-buster, yet it will go down in history as the only one of the lot which was worth the bother of killing.—Albany Argus.

HEAVY WEIGHTS FELL.

Crashed Through An Elevator Cage Injuring Ten Persons.

Louisville, Ky., March 19.—Without warning the heavy iron weights at the courthouse elevator fell Wednesday morning, crushing through the roof of the cage at the first floor, in which were 14 persons. Ten persons were injured, many fatally.

It was 10:20 o'clock when a tremendous crash shook the courthouse. The noise was heard for a block around the building. In a few moments a crowd of 1,000 people had hastened to the spot.

Those who first reached the elevator beheld a sickening scene. The cage was standing at the basement entrance to the elevator, about four below the surface. Within it were 14 people, nearly all of them on the floor prostrate from their injuries. Their shrieks and groans resounded throughout the building.

The top of the cage was wholly demolished, and the weights that had fallen through lay on top of the victims.

Following are the injured; May Tie: Mrs. Ed M. Simons, skull feared to be fractured, internal injuries; Miss Agnes Wilson, Prospect, Ky., injuries of spinal column; John E. Simons, injuries to head and body; W. K. Sechriat, H. A. Babbitt, Nick Witry, Christ Needy, John Lepping, John Cunnarney—all were injured about the head and body, but none fatally.

Sechrist lost a foot while in the employ of the B. & O. S.-W. railroad, and was at court to attend trial of suit over it. He formerly lived in Cincinnati.

Later he came to this city, where he went to work on the Anzieger, and had been connected with the paper ever since. He was a veteran of the civil war and was prominent in Grand Army circles. He leaves a wife and two sons, one of whom is associated with him on the Anzieger.

The total membership in the state is now 7,015. This is a net increase for the year of 230. The active lodges in the state are 109.

BECKHAM'S APPOINTEE OUSTED.

The Nicholasville Town Council Selected the Police Judge.

Lexington, Ky., March 21.—The town council of the little burg of Nicholasville, Jessamine county, has resented state interference with municipal affairs in a very decisive manner. Two weeks ago the venerable police judge of that city died, and last Wednesday Gov. Beckham appointed William Stanley, a dry goods clerk, and brother of Congressman-elect Owsley Stanley, to fill the vacancy. This was not pleasing to the people of Nicholasville—not that they held any objection to Stanley, but they contended that as the custom had prevailed in Nicholasville for years that the police judge should be elected by the general council they voted Stanley out Friday night and put in John H. Traynor, ex-chief of police. There were five candidates for the office.

Al and Will Rogers have completed the invoice of the stock of goods they bought of F. J. Clore & Son, and have taken hold of their new line of business like experienced merchants.

The widow and daughter of Orlando Snyder have the sympathy of a host of friends in their bereavement, the loss of a kind and loving husband and an indulgent and an affectionate father. He was an honorable, upright, christian man, and in his death the community sustains a great loss, but [illegible] loss is very small in comparison to his gain.

Stephens' at Erlanger, last Thursday afternoon and were married. It is hoped that Mr. and Mrs. White's married life will be as bright and pleasant as was the beautiful March day on which they plighted their troth. They have many friends who extend congratulations. Friday the bride and groom and a few friends took dinner at Mr. Eddins', and that evening they were met by a large number of friends at the home of the groom's parents, where an elegant supper was served. That night the young men of the neighborhood turned out en masse and gave the newly married couple an old time charivari.

Tragedy Averted.

"Just in the nick of time our little boy was saved" writes Mrs. W. Watkins of Pleasant City, Ohio. "Pneumonia had played sad havoc with him and a terrible cough set in besides. Doctors treated him, but he grew worse every day. At length we tried Dr King's New Discovery for Consumption, and our darling was saved, He's now sound, and well." Everybody ought to know, it's the only sure cure for Coughs, Colds and all Lung diseases. Guaranteed by W. F. McKim, Burlington; Union Drug Store, Union; J. G. Oelsner, Florence; A. W. Smith, Walton; O. N. Grant, Belleview.

L. H. Voshell, of Union, passed through town Sunday afternoon on his way to the scenes of his youth. He is very much interested in his work in the interest of the Tobacco Growers' Association, and reports that all the growers in the lower part of the county are signing the contract. A meeting will be held at Waltou at 2. p. m. Thursday, and no doubt but it will be well attended. He wants a good active man to work up the business in each precinct in this end of the county, where but little interest has been taken as yet.

One day during the recent rainy season Bert Gaines, who lives west of town, was going home, and in crossing Woolper creek, which was very much swollen, his horse, by some unaccountable means, stripped itself of the harness amid stream, leaving Bert sitting in the buggy, which the raging water threatened to carry down stream. Bert saw that the situation required quick action, when he leaped over the dashboard between the shafts, which he grabbed and waded ashore, drawing the vehicle after him. The water was deep and swift but Bert was equal to the emergency.

LYMAN GAINES.

Lyman Gaines, aged 22 years on the 3d day of February, 1903, died in Kansas City, Missouri, on March 17th, of typhoid fever followed by pneumonia. The deceased was the oldest child of O. W. Gaines and wife, of Bullittsville, and had been in business in Kansas City only about six months. His parents had taken great pains to prepare him for a life of usefulness, which was, apparently, opening up before him in a most promising manner, and his taking off was distressing alike to his immediate family and friends. He was a young man with a commanding physique and a spotless character, and lead the life of a christian of the highest type. In the fall of 1894, at the age of 13 years, he united with the Bullittsburg Baptist church under the preaching of Rev. Preston Blake, of Dayton, Kentucky, and was baptized by the venerable and beloved pastor, Dr. J. A. Kirtley, and from that time on was a consistent follower of the meek and lowly Jesus. He took great interest in church work, and as he grew older his faith grew stronger, and when the final summons came his house was in order, and he was ready to appear before his Lord and Master. The life of Lyman Gaines was worthy of emulation by all his acquaintances, and in his death society loses one of its loviest characters. The high esteem in which the deceased was held was made manifest last Friday by the very large congregation that assembled at Bullittsburg church, to pay the last tribute of respect to the departed. A short and appropriate funeral service was conducted by Rev. Sproles, after which the remains were placed in the vault. The pall bearers were W. D. Cropper, W. K. Gaines, Elmo Gaines, Charles Stevens, Edgar Graves and Winston Gaines. The bereaved parents and brother and sister have the sympathy of all.

More Riots.

Disturbances of strikers are not nearly as grave as an individual disorder of the system. Overwork, loss of sleep, nervous tension will be followed by utter collapse, unless a reliable remedy is immediately employed. There's nothing so efficient to cure disorders of the Liver or Kidneys as Electric Bitters. It's a wonderful tonic, and effective nervine and the greatest all around medicine for run down systems. It dispels Nervousness, Rheumatism and Neuralgia and expels Malaria germs. Only 50c, and satisfaction guaranteed by W. F. McKim, Burlington; Union Drug Store, Union; J. G. Oelsner, Florence; A. W. Smith, Walton; O. N. Grant, Belleview.

SEVERE ATTACK OF GRIP

"When I had an attack of the grip last winter (the second one) I actually cured myself with one bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says Frank W. Perry, Editor of the Enterprise, Shortsville, N. Y. "This is the honest truth. I at times kept from coughing myself to pieces by taking a teaspoonful of this remedy, and when the coughing spell would come on at night I would take a dose and it seemed that in the briefest interval the cough would pass off and I would go to sleep perfectly free from cough and its accompanying pains. To say the remedy acted as a most agreeable surprise is putting it very mildly. I had no idea that it could or would knock out the grip, simply because I had never tried it for such a purpose, but it did, and it seemed with the second attack of coughing the remedy caused it to not only be of less duration, but the pains were far less severe, and I had not used the contents of one bottle before Mr. Grip had bid me adieu." For sale by all druggists.

A fine mare belonging to O. J. Harris, of Rising Sun, died on his farm near here a few days ago.

Joe Riddell and James Sebree, of Gunpowder, were the first to land a wagon here from the country for one month and a half.

William Wingate and wife have moved to town, and are keeping house for B. R. Stephens, who expects to board with them for a while.

H. J. Calvert, of Ludlow, was here Wednesday and Thursday to attend the funeral of his sister, Mrs. Anna Ryle. Hiram looks quite natural.

E. L. Stephens and Will Craig went over to Indiana, a few days since, and each brought back a handsome farm horse bought back of Aurora.

Dode Pope, of Waterloo, was here, Thursday, and reported the mud in the roads in his neighborhood at an average stage of two feet in the channel.

A small winter crop of tobacco was raised around the fire here, and very few plant beds have been sowed. At present prospects for a summer crop are slim.

E. L. Stephens has bought Sid Stephens' stock of drygoods and groceries, and will continue the business in the house now occupied by Sid. B. W. Nelson, clerk.

The Grange here initiated 8 candidates at its meeting last Saturday. Its regular meetings are on the third and fourth Saturdays in each month. It looks like everybody here is turning granger.

James A. Duncan, candidate for circuit clerk, was calling on the Democrats here again a few days since. He had that old fashion grip in his hand we have been up against so often.

S. N. Riggs raised steam in his shop, Thursday, to test his machinery since his change. Everything worked to perfection, especially the whistle. He has ordered new burrs for grinding corn.

So far we have failed to make connection with any big dinners like those about which some of our brother correspondents are having the luck to run up against every week. We are not growing jealous, and, although good things may not come our way, hope will always be found at our door.

Stanley Ryle, of Waterloo, was here one day last week in the interest of a Larenceburg tailoring establishment. A couple of our old bachelors examined his samples of black goods closely, but it is not supposed that anything unusual is going to happen them, as our bachelors are all recognized as fine dressers.

Wm. Hess spent Saturday and Sunday with his parents in Rising Sun. He has worked for T. G. Ryle for 20 years, making him a good and trusty hand, and Mr. Ryle has found out that he can not farm without Billie, who, in turn, has discovered that he can not get along without Mr. Ryle. Billie knows how to do all kinds of works in the house.

Mrs. Anna C. Ryle, widow of the late B. H. Ryle, of this place and county, died of pneumonia at her home in Rising Sun, at 2 a. m., on March 24th. She was buried in the Methodist cemetery in East Bend, at 11 a. m., last Thursday. She leaves one son, three sisters, three brothers and many friends to mourn her loss. She was a christian lady and a splendid nurse. It was a great satisfaction to her to administer to the wants of the sick and distressed. She was a daughter of the late Samuel Calvert.

COMMISSARY.

March 28.—William Fleek and wife from near Limaburg, visited William Slayback, last Sunday.

T. J. Walton spent Tuesday and Wednesday in Erlanger and Cincinnati.

H. P. Parsons went to Constance, Thursday, to deliver a horse he had sold.

Mrs. James Botts and Mrs. Fannie Randall went to Covington and Cincinnati Friday.

T. J. Walton spent two days in Burlington this week as juryman, and is not in a very good humor.

The Commissary quill driver ate supper with the Bellevue quill driver Wednesday evening. Thanks Bro. Acra.

Dr. Williamson, who has been attending T. J. Walton's little boy, who has been quite sick, reports him improving.

Mrs. W. I. Rouse says she never knew the help and worth of a daughter-in-law until she commenced cleaning yard.

Mrs. Flave Louden and Miss Gracie went to Rising Sun, Wednesday. Unfortunately they missed the Charlie Sandford at Bellevlew, and went to McVille and went on the Alf Louden.

Mrs. Will Ryle will please accept my thanks for a dish of cooked cabbage and parsnips, which were very nice. It was an act of kindness, and will not be forgotten. Bro. White, please take notice.

Mrs. Scott and daughter, Maud, Mrs. Will Ryle and daughters, Artie and Stella, Mrs. James Botts, Mrs. Will and Bernard Rogers, and Miss Fannie Clore were guests of Mrs. Eugene Kelly Thursday.

Riverview, unless someone has been giving me taffy with saplinter when you called on the Commissary you had your hair cut for the occasion, and dressed in male attire, there was but one person called on me that day, (who I thought was a young man and claimed to be Ernest Ryle, the Rabbit Hash correspondent. During our conversation I noticed in the Recorder given me, what you said about the chase, and asked who is the Riverview correspondent? and the reply was, "my sister." I have no objections to ladies calling on me, but I do not fancy their calling when attired as a man. It will take someone shrewder than Riverview, to pull the wool over my eyes.

Some people cannot refrain from mixing up in every matter that comes up in their neighborhood. They are messengers for everbody who has anything to say about another person. It is not my wish to discourage a spirit of investigation, but I will give a word of gentle warning of the unwisdom of butting in where there is no present necessity for doing so. People should not forget the wise rule to keep out of a game unless they have an invitation to play, when they butt in in a game without an invitation, there are ten chances to one they will be filled with vain regrets afterwards. Bro. Acra's and my game of spat is being played in a spirit of friendliness, and there is no necessity for anyone butting in, and no one has an invitation to take a hand. It is very unkind in anyone to try to make trouble between Bro. Acra and me, especially when they resort to misrepresentations. If such people must talk they should talk to the man in the moon.

Dangers of Colds and Grip.

The greatest danger from colds and grip is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for this disease we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous disease. It will cure a cold or an attack of the grip in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

WALTON.

Mrs. R. L. Ricketts and R. L., junior made a pleasant visit to her sister, Mrs. J. E. Botts, as she was going to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Wilson, of Nicholson.

John R. Cravens commenced work laying concrete pavement in, where he quit in the early part of the winter, when the finishing coat hadn't time to dry before the freeze came. During the fine weather of the past week the top dressing was scraped off and a new one put on, giving Mr. Glehn as neat a sidewalk as there is in town. Craven also put down one for Rev. J. H. Rogers connecting with John Stamler's, which will give an almost unbroken concrete pavement to the Christian church.

F. H. King, who had the paralytic stroke at Memphis, from which he died at Worthville, was brought here for interment by the Masonic Lodge of this place, of which he was an honored member, and buried on Thursday, in the family lot of the Baptist cemetery.

Miss Blanche Dixon, 13, the bright young daughter of Mr. Wesley Dixon, and as handsome a flower as ever bloomed in Walton, was brought here from Covington, where she died and was interred in the Baptist cemetery. Blanche Dixon was conceded to be the most charming girl in the town.

Miss Sallie Herndon, who has been visiting relatives in Texarkana, is again in our midst, looking as attractive as ever.

Mr. Charles Chambers is about to establish a writing school. He has quite a number of subscribers and the specimens exhibited show the almost wonderful improvement some of his pupils have made in a very short time.

The meeting of the growers of Burley tobacco rather astonished the people of the town and some of the farmers themselves. There was a very good attendance and all were deeply interested. None were more surprised than the man to whom this territory was assigned and he confessed to the writer that more than three times the number of persons signed the agreement than he thought to obtain. It looks as if the farmers and growers were being awakened to a sense of what can be done, and with very few exceptions have signified their intention of signing the agreement and taking stock in the venture. It will be a prond day for them when they can set the price on the produce of their farms, and it is not at all probable that there will be anybody so silly as to strut around and claim that such and such a district will be claimed for this or that tobacco slaughtering warehouse. The golden era for the grower may come again when the farmers independence is re-established. There has been a Louisville party in town the past week and it looks as if any tobacco is moved it will go to Louisville as our growers greatly prefer that market and the way business is managed at the Falls City.

The ceremony took place in the drawing-room at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bonnie, and was performed by the Rev. Neander Wood, of the Second Presbyterian church. The couple entered the room to the bridal chorus from Lobengrin, played by Gerardi, and stood before the mantelpiece which was beautifully banked with palms and ferns, relieved by ascension lilies. It was lighted by several crystal and gold candelabra filled with white candles. During the service the harpers played "Hearts and Flowers." Miss Bonnie had no attendants, except her young sister, who held her flowers during the ceremony. Miss Bonnie wore an exquisite imported gown of cream venaissance lace made over white chiffon and satin, and wore the regulation tulle veil, which fell to the bottom of her skirt. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley. The house was charmingly decorated in white and green with ascension lilies arranged on the manteis and sideboard both of which were lighted with white candles. The refreshment table had a centerpiece of ascension lilies, narcissus and ferns, and was encircled by bridal silver candelabras holding white candles with green and silver shades. AN EXTRA SESSION.

The Congress Will Be Convened Prior to December.

Unless This is Done the Chances of the Cuban Senate Ratifying the Reciprocity Treaty Appear to Be Very Slender.

Havana, March 27.—The chances for the carrying through of the reciprocity treaty appeared slender Thursday night, unless the United States government concedes the right to the Cuban senate to provide that the treaty shall not be effective unless it is ratified by the United States congress during the present year.

The senate committee on foreign relations met Thursday afternoon and decided to report Friday in favor of adoption of all the amendments added by the United States senate to the treaty, but also to adopt a separate provision as an accompaniment to the effect that the ratification must be completed before December 31.

The chairman of the foreign relations committee, Senor Bustamento, made a statement to a press representative at the session of Thursday's meeting, at which were heard the representative of the commercial and manufacturing interests, all of whom favored the ratification of the amended treaty and urged that it be made effective as early as possible. During the afternoon, said Senor Bustamento, the committee were informed of the contents of a cable from Secretary Hay to the effect that the treaty could not now be amended, that the amendment covering the reference to congress applied only to the United States congress and giving assurances of President Roosevelt's intention to call a special session of congress prior to December. It was believed that these assurances, coupled with the unanimity with which the business men who were consulted, urged the ratification of the treaty, would result in a favorable report unhampered by any condition, but the committeemen appear to believe that the condition that they recommend will not injure the treaty.

STOPPED THE SHOW.

Actors Playing "McFadden's Row of Flats" Egged.

The Affair Was the Culmination of a Series of Attempts to Bring the Performance of Such Player to An End.

New York, March 28.—Two hundred Irishmen, whose feelings had been outraged by the performance of "McFadden's Row of Flats" at the new Star theater, rose in their seats in the theater at a signal Friday night and pelted the performers with rotten eggs, decayed vegetables and fruit.

The audience of over 2,000 was thrown into an uproar and the actors were driven from the stage.

The affair was the culmination of a series of attempts to bring the performance of this play to an end and to stop forever the production of such plays. The disturbing element was scattered through the orchestra, balcony and galleries of the theater, which is one of the largest in New York. Some of the players howled their disdain at the original disturbers. In the uproar a policeman, who was trying to preserve order, discovered and stamped out a burning rag in one of the aisles.

Not for years has a play been rotten-egged in New York city. The assertion was made Friday night that the allied Irish societies had determined to rout the actors who burlesque Irish character and arranged the Star theater disturbance.

Maj. Edward T. Crystal, formerly of the 69th regiment, declared openly and forcibly that New York Irishmen have banded together to stop such performances. Five arrests were made.

One Answer for All.

Lancaster, N. Y., Mar. 30th.—Postmaster Remers is still in receipt of many letters asking if his cure was sale good.

It will be remembered that some time ago the particulars of Mr. Remers' case were published in these columns. He had been very low with Diabetes. Physicians could do nothing to save him and he grew worse and worse till some one recommended Dodd's Kidney Pills. A treatment of this remedy was begun and when four boxes had been taken Mr. Remers began to see an improvement, which continued as the treatment proceeded till he was completely restored.

He has since enjoyed perfect health and is as robust and able a man as any in Lancaster. Interviewed the other day he said:

"My people think I owe me the life of my eldest child, and I would say quite to me yet asking if the cure was only temporary and if the diabetes has returned. I have only one answer to everybody. Three years ago I was very low with Diabetes. The best physicians failed to help me and Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me. I am well and strong and have not had the slightest return of the old trouble."

An Adjustable Limit.

It was a Maine girl of whom the story is told that she refused to marry a most devoted lover until he had amassed a fortune of $10,000. After some expostulation he accepted the decree and went to work. About three months after this the vivacious young lady, meeting her lover, asked:

"Well, Charley, how are you getting along?"

The young lady blushed and looked down at the toes of her walking boots, and stabbed the inoffensive earth with the point of her parasol. "I guess," she said faintly, "I guess, Charley, that's about near enough."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

ECZEMA

Psoriasis, Scalled Head, Milk Crust, Tetter, Ringworm, etc.

Cuticura

The agonizing, itching, and burning of the skin, as in eczema; the frightful scaling, as in psoriasis; the loss of hair, and crusting of the scalp, as in scalled head; the facial disfigurements, as in pimples and ringworm; the awful suffering of infants, and anxiety of worn-out parents, as in milk crust, tetter and salt rheum,—all demand a remedy of almost superhuman virtues to successfully cope with them. That Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Resolvent are such stands proven beyond all doubt. No statement is made regarding them that is not justified by the strongest evidence. The purity and sweetness, the power to afford immediate relief, the certainty of speedy and permanent cure, the absolute safety and great economy have made them the standard skin cures, blood purifiers and humour remedies of the civilized world.

Complete External and Internal Treatment

Bathe the affected parts with hot water and Cuticura Soap, to cleanse the surface of crusts and scales, and soften the thickened cuticle. Dry, without hard rubbing, and apply Cuticura Ointment freely, to allay itching, irritation, and inflammation, and soothe and heal, and, lastly, take Cuticura Resolvent to cool and cleanse the blood. This complete treatment affords instant relief, permits rest and sleep in the severest forms of eczema and other itching, burning, and scaly humours of the skin, scalp and blood, and points to a speedy, permanent and economical cure when all other remedies and the best physicians fail. As evidence of the wonderful curative properties of Cuticura Remedies and of their world-wide sale, we quote from

The Hon. Mr. Justice Finnemore's Letter.

"I desire to give my voluntary testimony to the beneficial effects of your Cuticura Remedies. I have suffered for some time from an excess of uric acid in the blood; and since the middle of last year, from a severe attack of Eczema, chiefly on the scalp, face, ears and neck, and on one limb. I was for several months under professional treatment, but the remedies prescribed were of no avail, and I was gradually becoming worse, my face was dreadfully disfigured, and I lost nearly all my hair. At last, my wife prevailed upon me to try the Cuticura Remedies, and I gave them a thorough trial with the most satisfactory results. The disease soon began to dissappear, and my hair commenced to grow again. A fresh growth of hair is covering my head, and my limb (although not yet quite cured) is gradually improving. My wife thinks so highly of your remedies that she has been purchasing them in order to make presents to other persons suffering from similar complaints, and, as President of the Bible Women's Society, has told the Bible women to report if any case should come under her notice when a poor person is so afflicted, so that your remedies may be resorted to." GUSTAVUS SWIFT DEAD.

The Wealthy Packer Died From Internal Hemorrhage.

Chicago, March 30.—Gustavus Franklin Swift, president of the Swift Packing Co., died at his home, 4343 Ellis avenue, early Sunday of internal hemorrhage resulting from a surgical operation performed several days ago. Mr. Swift was 63 years old.

The hemorrhage which caused Mr. Swift's death resulted from an operation for an infection of the gall bladder, performed March 22. His death was entirely unexpected both by Mr. Swift's family and his physicians. He had given every indication of recovery and all danger was considered passed. In fact, so hopeful was every one, including himself, for his speedy recovery, that his son, Herbert L. Swift, who had been summoned from Boston, left Saturday night for the east. This son was intercepted at Harrisburg, Pa., Sunday with a telegram announcing the death of his father.

Gustavus Franklin Swift began his business career as a butcher and died leaving a fortune estimated at from $7,000,000 to $10,000,000. This fortune was made in the course of 35 years. He was born at Sandwich, Mass., in June, 1839. He opened a small butcher shop in his native town. He removed to Boston when he was less than 30 years old. He remained in Boston until 1875, when he came to Chicago. In this city he engaged in the same business which he had left in Massachusetts, and developed the department of shipping live cattle to eastern markets. In 1877 he evolved plans for the first refrigerating car and dressed meats, instead of live animals, were shipped to eastern cities. He was the pioneer in this line of business, and it was not long before other packers took advantages of his methods and slavishly imitated him.

Mr. Swift was not only was the oldest "packer" at the time of his death, but he was the originator of the methods that has made many large fortunes. From the small plant started in 1877 has developed a great corporation with branches in St. Louis, Kansas City, St. Joseph, Omaha, St. Paul and Fort Worth, Tex., and with distributing offices in every important city and town in the United States, and with representatives in the leading cities of Europe, Asia and Africa. Its employes number 22,607. Upon its capital stock of $25,000,000 the sales of 1902 exceeded $200,000,000.

ON THE HOUSE TOPS.

People at Greenville, Miss., Waiting to Be Rescued.

The Protection Levee in the Northern Part of Greenville Cut With a View of Relieving the Situation in the City.

Greenville, Miss., March 30.—The backwater from the LaGrange crevasse is slowly rising and nearly all of the city is submerged. Business is paralyzed and people are moving about the city in the southern section in skiffs. The sensational reports sent out from here that the city is in danger of destruction are highly exaggerated, and the facts do not warrant such statements. While rumors of great loss of life are absolutely without foundation so far as is known here. Relief parties with boats have been at work rescuing people in the path of the flood and the refugees are brought here.

The shut-down of the electric light plant is a serious inconvenience to the people and lanterns in skiffs may be seen throughout the town at night.

The flood situation outside of Greenville remains practically unchanged. The waters have covered thousands of acres of the fine delta farms and is sweeping south to Vicksburg. The loss will be heavy, but it is impossible to give anything like a correct estimate of the damage wrought by the flood.

It was said by some of the relief parties Sunday that since Friday many of the Negroes have been on the top of houses waiting for the boats to get out and during that time they have not had anything to eat. Arrangements have been made to rescue the cattle in the flooded district as they are suffering for want of food.

A singular phenomena at Leland, Ark., is puzzling every one. The news was brought to the city Sunday afternoon by Mr. Shields, an engineer on one of the government boats. He said that Saturday night the water against the levee and dyke in the pocket was a foot deep and Sunday morning he found the water off and stock on the ground, from which the water had receded. He further said the water was not turbulent at the end of the dyke, which but a day before was washing a way most of the night. There to protect it. Further out in the stream the water was very rough and the current swift. The change of the current it is thought, is due entirely to the break above it on this side or to the fact that the river there is making a new channel, and if the new channel is formed it will leave Greenville on a beautiful lake.

The protection levee in the northern part of the city was cut at midnight by order of the mayor. The crevasse was made with a view to relieving the situation within the confines of the town, the hope being that the cut thus made will let the water now standing in the city back into the bayou.

BULLET THROUGH HIS HEAD.

A Grandson of Bishop Bowman Committed Suicide.

New York, March 30.—Herman Bowman Esher, 20 years old, of Chicago, said to be a student at Yale university, killed himself by putting a bullet through his head Sunday in his room at the Hotel Manhattan in this city. From papers in the young man's room there were found indications that he had been greatly worried over some difficulty regarding business matters, but further than that little else is known as to the cause of his trouble.

Chicago, March 30.—Herman Bowman Esher, who killed himself at the Manhattan hotel in New York Sunday, was the only son of Edward B. Esher, a lawyer of this city, and was grandson of Bishop Bowman, of the Evangelical church. He was 20 years old.

When seen Sunday night, the father could offer no explanation of his son's act, and was unable to account for the young man's visit to New York. About two years ago young Esher fell from a six-story window of the Yale dormitory, fracturing a leg and sustaining other injuries, but miraculously escaping death.

ALLEGED POOLROOM RAIDED.

Detectives Chopped a Hole in the Floor Above and Dropped Down.

New York, March 28.—In effecting an entrance into an alleged poolroom in the basement of a six-story business building in West Third street Friday, two detectives were forced to chop a hole through the floor in the rear room of a saloon and drop into the room below, where other detectives were holding the men inside at bay with their revolvers. William Daly, said to be the proprietor, and a dozen others were arrested.

Detective Sergeants Kerr and Fogarty, disguised as truck drivers, had frequently visited the place, where, they say, they have placed bets on the races at Bennings. They were there Friday when Detective Sergeants Valely and Collins, dressed as laborers, entered the [illegible] laborately decorated one. Valley had a crowbar and a sledgehammer, and Collins was equipped with two axes and a sledgehammer. Each carried a "jimmy." They went at once to the rear room. There they arrested the outer sentries, and while one detective watched the prisoners the other battered down a door.

As soon as the blows were heard in the inner room Kerr and Fogarty drew revolvers and, backing to a corner, covered the crowd.

Meanwhile Valley, after battering down one door, came to a second. This, though built of oak, soon gave way, and the detectives found themselves in a room which had three doors. Cutting through one of these doors, the detectives and their prisoners entered another room, which also had three doors. They were in the maze. It was then that the detectives decided to go upstairs to the rear room of the saloon, where Valely and Collins cut through the floor. Several policemen, who had been attracted to the place by this time, watched the prisoners, while Valley and Collins and a uniformed policeman dropped through the hole into the alleged poolroom.

Those arrested besides the alleged proprietor were his alleged manager and several employes. The others found in the place were allowed to go.

GERMAN EMPRESS HURT.

She Fell From Her Horse, Which Stumbled in the Grunewald Forest.

Berlin, March 28.—The empress fractured her forearm as the result of a fall from her horse, which stumbled while she was riding in the Grunewald forest. The empress, who was accompanied by Prince Adelbert, her third son, and her suite, was assisted to the hunting lodge after her fall, and a surgeon was telephoned for, with the result that a physician was sent to the lodge in an automobile, which was driven at the highest possible speed. The empress fell heavily. Emperor William, who was near at hand, was among the first to reach her side, and assisted her to rise. The imperial party was galloping at the moment when the empress' horse shied and stumbled, flinging her violently to the ground. It was announced Friday that, considering the circumstances, the condition of the empress is satisfactory.

No bulletin has been issued by the doctors, who affirm that the injury is a case of simple fracture. Dr. Gunker stayed at the palace all night.

ALFRED KNAPP'S TRIAL.

It Can Not Take Place Before Spring Time in May.

Hamilton, O., March 28.—Alfred Knapp, the multi-murderer, was indicted Friday. When Knapp was told of the indictment at the jail Friday night he laughed and said he couldn't expect anything else from a lot of "jays." He said he was not worried.

The trial of Alfred A. Knapp, the murderer, can not occur before May. Judge Bisden has fixed the trial of Fred C. Wellner, a Miltonville farmer, accused of murder, for April 20. This trial will be followed by that of Samuel Keelor, who murdered his wife. Knapp's case will then be heard. The Wellner and Keelor cases are sure to occupy a week or more each, so that it is likely to be June 1 before Knapp's fate is known.

Darling, acting secretary of the navy, stating that the monitor Arkansas had been ordered to Paducah, if conditions are favorable. It is left to the discretion of the commanding officer. If there is plenty of water and he can spare the time the vessel will come here. Local river men say there will be sufficient water over the [illegible] chain, the only shoal place between Paducah and Cairo. Should the vessel come it would be the first time a naval craft has been at the mouth of the Tennessee river since the civil war. The Arkansas is now on the way up the river to St. Louis.

INDIFFERENT TO HIS FATE.

Lexington, Ky., March 27.—William McCarty, sentenced to be hanged here for wife murder, heard Thursday for the first time of the appellate court's refusal to give his case a rehearing. McCarty is in the last stages of consumption, and said: "I do not care. My mother is dying, and she will not be here to see my end."

When the time comes for the democrats to assemble in national convention they will select a candidate for the presidency and will formulate a platform of principles. Meantime no man is commissioned to say what will be done, although every man may say what he thinks ought to be done at that convention.—Danville News.

The "get rich quick" swindlers had a friend in the postoffice department in Washington upon whom they could rely to look after their interests in the mails. He is not there now. The President learned of his connection with the swindlers and instead of giving him the bounce, requested his resignation, and he passed it up.

The Court of Appeals ignored the very question that Gov. Beckham wanted it to decide—as to his eligibility to reelection, but it only decided that he is entitled to a place on the ticket, and the contention of his opponents that he is not eligible to the office of Goverhor was not taken from the canvass, and the Governor will have to meet it as best he can.

Last week's Williamstown Courier contained a picture of Grant county's handsome infirmary, followed by a statement showing the cost of maintaining it last year. There were kept at the infirmary an average of 18 inmates at a cost of $25 85 per head. Over $300 worth of stuff was sold off of the farm, while $233 70 was received from board of turnpike hands. The superintendent's salary is $500 per year.

A report from St. Louis says that city is overrun with workmen of the various trades who have gone there thinking to obtain employment during the rush of the World's Fair work. Many are penniless when they arrive, and those fortunate enough to belong to trade unions were sent home by the members of the local unions. This should serve as a warning to those who contemplate going to St. Louis to get work.

In 1881 during March and April there were 29 days of rain with snow mixed in between. In 1884 there were seventeen days of rain in March. From then until 1890 March did very well but on the 7th of the month that year ice houses were filled. In 1891 March turned off six inches of rain. So it has been with the succeeding years. This has been no worse a month than unusual except for a warm day or two.—Blue Grass Clipper.

A medical journal says: "Lettuce is an absolute specific as a preventive of smallpox. All fear of smallpox may vanish when this simple precaution is taken. Should this remedy seem to fail in any case, we would be glad to be notified. There has never been a failure up to date and we are anxious to know if one should occur. We have absolute confidence in lettuce as a preventive of disease and do not hesitate to assure any one that there is no danger of acquiring smallpox so long as the system is fortified against it by this natural and potent preventive."

Political gossip from Mount Sterling and Frankfort says that Breckinridge may withdraw and throw his strength to Beckham, and that Beckham will have the fight of his life for renomination.

Representative Lacey, chairman of the house committee on public lands, in speaking of the work accomplished during the recent session of congress, made the announcement that the only reservation to be opened is the Red Lake reservation consisting of 100,000 acres.

A movement is on foot to protect the wool growers of the country and by western railroads over the action of the eastern lines in raising the rates on wool 15 per cent from Chicage to the seaboard. The staple has heretofore been carried on a commodity tariff, but is now placed in the classes. Washed wool is first-class and unwashed is third-class.

Poor Watterson! He is appealing to Cleveland not to run again and yet he is more than half afraid that Cleveland will refuse to listen to his entreaties. Why does he not announce himself as a candidate against Cleveland? He ought to be willing to make the sacrifice for the rescue of the country. The Commoner could wish each success as against the other.—Commoner.

Judge James N. Tyner, Assistant Attorney General for the Post-office Department resigned on formal request, it is alleged. Irregularities are said to have been discovered in his department but no investigation of his individual conduct is to be made. Government officials are probing the rural free delivery service, however, and other resignations are to be requested, it is declared.

Another chapter in the Venezuelan question developed on March 19 when Minister Bowen made an effort to obtain positive information from the allies as to the cause of the delay in the peace negotiations. The question of the payment of claims is proving a perplexing one, as is also the provision as to the customs receipts. Mr. Bowen has made an appeal to the representatives of the allies in regard to this matter.

A sensation was caused last week, when the jury returned a verdict of three years in the penitentiary for Dr. Taylor, at Lexington, President of the Industrial Mutual Deposit Company that went to pieces there a year ago. The charge was embezzlement by appropriating surplus funds to the dividend fund when no dividend had been earned. Among the bills being prepared for introduction at the coming session of the Ohio general assembly is one relating to compulsory voting in Ohio. It will be modeled after the proposed enactment in Nebraska, and seeks to compel every man to cast his ballot on election day, unless physically unable to do so. It will provide a voting tax of $3, a receipt for which shall be given by the judges of the election when each man casts his ballot, the receipt to be accepted by the county treasurer in payment of the tax. The only other alternative than paying the amount is the sworn statement that the voter is not able to get to the polls on election day. Another bill will seek to make the general election day each year a holiday, on which the schools and the places of labor will be closed.

To the modern surgeon nothing seems impossible. He will probe the innermost regions of a patient's anatomy, deprive him of a stomach, cut away a third of his bodily substance, and produce other amazing changes in the course of a simple day's work. People have grown so accustomed to hearing of these wonderful feats that they look on them more or less as a matter of course. But the very latest achievement of surgery is calculated to astonish even those in whom use has bred a large amount of indifference. At a recent clinic in England the operator actually started a man's heart working after its functions had ceased by massaging the vital organ with his hands. Imagine having the delicate pump which you associate most intimately with your tenure of life worked up and down and squeezed and churned about in the hands of an outsider. Surgeons had talked the thing over for some years past as a possibility of their science, but only a short time ago was the thing definitely accomplished on a human subject.

Crop and Stock.

It is well to remember that all crops have two values—their feeding value and their manurial value.

It is seldom we find a man that has a good milch cow and wants to sell her, provided he knows a good milch cow when he sees it.

It is estimated that the cost of protecting trees to prevent disease, by the use of spraying mixtures is less than one-fifth of a cent, per tree, and the spraying may also increase the profit on fruit, by including better quality.

Rotation of crops is necessary for success in farming, as two or three crops of the same kind cannot be profitably grown on a plot. This may be noticed every day, as hedge plants or apple trees planted by a hedge of the same kind and trees planted in place of others of the same kind do not thrive. The best results are obtained when there is a radical change.

When stock is given the use of early green rye the results are not always satisfactory, and farmers find that the cattle lose flesh and less milk is given. Rye is one of the most useful of all plants for providing early green food at a season when grass has not appeared, but its injurious effect on animals is not due to the rye being an unsuitable food but to allowing the animals free access to it. In its early stages of growth (which is really the time when it is most in demand) it is composed almost wholly of water, the proportion of solid matter being very small.

Farmers are getting shy of the mixture feeds now on the market. It appears that some of the feeds contain a good deal of ground hulls or corncobs, or other substances not very fattening to their tendency. As a result of recent analyses at the Massachusetts Experimental Station, many mixed feeds were found to be seriously adulterated with ground corncobs and feeders are especially cautioned against them, Bulletin 85 states which feeds are the most economical to purchase, gives the relative values of all the most important concentrates, suggests a number of satisfactory grain rations, and furnishes much information about the composition and feeding value of condimental stock and poultry foods.—New England Homestead.

When a young calf is taken from its dam there is more or less difficulty in raising it. Some mistakes are usually made, the result being scours. The natural food of the calf is fresh, warm milk, and the milk given it after it is separated from the cow should also be fresh and warm. If skim milk is used there will be a lack of cream, which is important so far as the welfare of the calf is concerned. One who has been successful adds a raw egg, well shaken with the milk, at each meal. Flaxseed meal, cooked until a jelly is formed, may be used with the milk, a gill at each meal being sufficient at first. Do not overfeed, but give a little milk at a time and often, at a temperature of 95 degress.

When a horse balks, no matter how badly he sulks or how ugly he is, do not beat him; don't throw sand in his ears; don't use a rope around his forelegs or even burn straw under him. Quietly go and pat him on the head a moment. Take a hammer, or even pick up a stone in the street, tell the driver to sit still, take the lines, hold them quietly while you lift up either front foot, give each nail a light tap and a good smart tap on the frog, drop the foot quickly and then chirp to him to go. In ninety-nine cases out of 100 the horse will go right on about his business, but the driver must keep his lines taut and not pull or jerk him back. If I have tried this once I have tried it 500 times and every time I have suggested it people have laughed and even bet $5 bottles of wine that I could not do it. So far I have won every bet. This may make you smile, but a horse has more common sense than most people are willing to give him credit for. The secret of this little trick is simply diversion. I am a firm believer that with kindness and proper treatment a horse can be driven with a string.—Missouri Valley Farmer.

The Bedford people have had a survey made from that place to Carrollton showing the expense of building the electric line from here to Louisville, and the survey demonstrates that it is several miles shorter and several thousand dollars cheaper than the river route. These people have shown commendable enterprise and we believe the Ohio Valley Traction Co. will treat them fairly when the actual route is determined.—Carrollton Democrat.

The Executive Committee of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Association met in Lexington on March 26th with an attendance representing over thirty counties. There were also present many representative farmers and tobacco growers interested in the movement. The meeting was called to order about two o'clock by Vice-President W. B. Hawkins, who made report to the Association that five counties had been organized since the last meeting.

Reports from the several counties were received as to the progress of the work, and various committees made reports.

The most important business transacted at the meeting was the formation of a set of by-laws for the government of the organization in its business matters. Mr. E. E. Barton, chairman of the committee appointed at a previous meeting, presented a set of by-laws drafted by the committee, and after being discussed and with a few amendments, they were approved and recommended for official adoption. Among other things they provided that there shall be a Board of Control in each county consisting of six members, three selected by the tobacco growers and three by the company, and two inspectors to grade the tobacco one selected by the tobacco growers and one by the company, and in case of a disagreement or complaint the matter to be adjusted by the County Board of Control.

Steps were taken to organize the remaining five or six counties in the Burley district and to have them present and represented at the next meeting, which will be in Lexington on April 30th. The Association has not given out a statement of the number of subscribers to the agreement, but at the close of the meeting Mr. C. M. Dean, the Secretary, stated that he believed they had enough subscribers to commence business, that the success of the movement was an assured fact, and that they will handle the next crop.

The Zaro women of India are supreme. They woo the men, control the affairs of the home and the nation, transmit property and leave the men nothing to do. The result is, says a scientist, that they are the ugliest women on earth.

Judge Cason and the following jury were engaged two days last week trying the proceedings instituted by Henry Groger against C. C. and Frank Respass to establish a passway over their land: Charles Whi[illegible] Sullivan, [illegible] Campbell, T. J. Walton, Albert Underhill, Lute Tanner. When the proceedings were instituted Benj. Stephens, A. C. Collins and Jeff Carpenter were appointed commissioners to view the proposed passway, &c. They reported in favor of the passway, and gave Respass $50 damages, and required Groger to build 50 rods of fence. The Respass boys were not satisfied with the work of the commissioners, and were given a hearing before the jury above named, which gave them $70 damages, and allowed them $100 additional in case they build the 100 rods of additional fencing they found would be necessary.

THE ENTERTAINMENT.

After several weeks' diligent rehearsal the Burlington Dramatic Club made its bow to the public, last Thursday evening, and was favored with a good house. A nicely equipped stage that occupied the entire bar in the circuit court room had been constructed, and new scenery prepared especially for the plays that were presented. Those taking part had familiarized themselves thoroughly with the characters they were to represent, and they gave their patrons a first class amateur performance each evening. Saturday night the large court room was packed with an audience that enjoyed "Dutch Jake," presented in three acts, and "Miss Topsy Turvey or the Courtship of a Deacon," a comedy in three acts. The cast of characters in each of the foregoing had been made with good judgment, and each person is entitled to praise for his or her excellent conception of the character assumed, and it would be unjust to compliment any of them to the exclusion of others. Being present only on Saturday night the writer has not had the pleasure of seeing "Diamonds and Hearts" nor the "Wonderful Telephone," but those who have witnessed them say they are presented as successfully as are the other two.

Saturday evening Mr. Pericles Grubbs favored the audience with two or three songs, his sister, Mrs. Pickelheimer playing the accompaniment on the piano. Mr. Grubbs is a great favorite with the public, and is one of the most obliging vocalists in the country.

A violinist from the city, assisted by Mrs. Annie Clutterbuck, made the music for the entertainment, and on Saturday evening, they were assisted by Mrs. John Garrison, who has few equals at the piano.

The entertainment was a success in every detail, and those who patronized it pronounced it the best amateur performance they ever witnessed.

Last Wednesday the people of Burlington were somewhat excited when it became generally known what a narrow escape the town had the day before from a dreadful disaster. Clutterbuck Bros., general merchants, keep a 200 gallon gasoline tank in their barn, a considerable distance from their store, but in much closer proximity to the Presbyterian church and several residences. From this tank they supply a small can which they keep in their store. On Tuesday of last week the tank was full and the can in the store needed replenishing, when they sent a boy about 13 years old to the barn to get a can of gasoline. He was accompanied by three or four other boys. At the barn was a coop in which there were some chickens. It occurred to some of the boys that it would be capital sport to pour gasoline on one of them and touch a match to it, and a rooster was taken from the coop and held under the faucet to a can in which was some gasoline, and when the fowl had been thoroughly saturated the match was applied. The rooster, with the flames rolling in every direction made a circuit of the barn, and took refuge beneath the 200 gallon tank of gasoline, from under which he was driven by one of the boys out into the street, where it was finally put to death having got fastened in a crack of a fence. That the barn was not set on fire is almost a miracle, and had it been, considerable property and several lives would have been destroyed. It makes a person shudder to think about the awful result that would have followed the explosion of that 200 gallon tank of gasoline. It is alright for boys to have their sport, but not when there is a chance for it to lead up to such harrowing results.

THE ISSUE IS NAMED

Tammany's Candidate for President Urges Warfare Upon the Trusts, Taxation and the Tariff.

"What is to become of our industrial freedom?" was the question which Edward M. Shepard, of New York, Tammany's candidate for president of the United States, asked of the members and guests of the Iroquois club at its annual Jackson day banquet at the Auditorium, Chicago, on the evening of Monday, and his answer to the question he Shepard sounded a note of warning in the democratic party against the Bryanism of an issue, and declared that the real issue was trusts against independents.

Mr. Shepard spoke as follows:

"This gathering illustrates the familiar truth that the democratic party is not a body of unchanging membership or of fixed principles. No party can be. It must attend among ourselves to political judgment, sometimes as to an vote on our public action. We might be at least do, we together in a common view of present political necessities and by intention, or at least in effect, which, in a democracy and hereafter.

"It is a mistake to fancy our party or any party to be an end in itself. It can never be more than a means to an end. There is a general and long-time purpose of good for which the democratic party was born and to which it is of necessity dedicated, existing as it does to-day. Its reason for it not for this its divisions and sometime hostilities between men who are or who deem themselves to be democrats might well depress us.

"Nor is this fundamental faith doubtful, because every new day brings new issues arousing it to specific exigencies or policies. It includes equality of privilege among all classes of the republic. And therefore forbids privileges to any citizen or body of citizens not in theory and in fact open on equal terms to the whole people. It includes use of the powers of government for any purpose not common to the whole people. It forbids taxation for any purpose not public. It requires that every citizen bear a share of the burdens of government according to his ability.

Parties Should Support Government.

"It refuses utterly and peremptorily to concede in theory or to practice that the small number of men who make up an administration at Washington can ascertain best and by vast odds, for thousand times as numerous of citizens in private life, what lawful industries ought to be helped and what ought to be hindered. It denounces doctrine of subsidy in the ancient aphorism that the people should support the government and not the government support the people. That the government should rest on the consent of the governed. All who believe this summary of the law and the democratic party, for only they belong to it. Not our party differences over the means of reaching this single democratic end and result is kind in the way.

"Those who would frustrate rather than promote this democratic result ought not to call themselves democrats. Those who believe that the government can better transact the business of the citizen in the citizen's interest, or believe certain private long run it is more wholesome that a small number of able and possibly wise and possibly benevolent men should habitually direct the masses of their fellowmen rather than they should control and direct themselves; they to whom the splendor and results of government of themselves make an end apart from the beneficence and fairness of its concrete purposes all these in the politics of to-day belong, or ought to belong, to the republican party. Among them are many high-minded, intelligent, patriotic men, with whom in other fields, business, charitable, religious, literary or social, I rejoice to work. But we democrats ought not to wish them in our party. For they be sincere we should receive their support only at the price of surrender of some part of the sole justification, the one reason of the being, of the democratic party.

"I do not, therefore, sympathize with programs of political and party organization for 1904 or for any other campaign upon the idea that it is of little moment what the party did, when it comes to power, to have a true and settled purpose ready to carry out. It is the way to keep the latent strength of aggressive and disagreeing dissidents with republican administration—a victory to be followed by nothing effectively useful to the country by an exhibition of efficient, sound, orderly administration on a sincere and open programme of policy. Such victory would bring neither honor nor real power. It is always better for a party that its faithfulness be exhibited after, out of office than when in office.

"Absurd, if we must invent an issue or try to issues grow. They are not made. Few things in public life are less admirable, few things more directly tend to failure than the effort of a great party, longing the purposes of its own existence, assisted by no clear doctrine and seeking no distinct result, to patch together a platform upon which harmony may bring success, so adopted upon plank or two, or even a passing sentiment without expectation, if chosen to power, of putting it into practice. No man anything he is to be in an measure to rely for success on hard times.

"I do not misunderstand me to say that the election of '04 is or ought to be compelled to turn upon its own issues. Politics is no science of principles, but the art of applying them. The politician concerns with present purposes of good government and popular rights is a veritable prisoner if he casually plans that politics not finely ridiculous.

Must Consult Plain People.

"Conceded, then, that the issues must be great and timely and that the party chosen by democrats must unflinchingly take our own democratic position, no matter what the offense, how are we to recognize them? To this there is no fit answer except respectful reference to the plain and contemporaneous expressions of the people themselves. They talk and write about what to them is timely and important, and political parties must talk and act about the same thing.

"But what is the thing of which the American people are thinking hard and at which must center the sound, practical politics of our opposition? Is it right else than the fear of the disappearance of industrial liberty? The talk from the end of the land to the other, in every shop, on every farm, in every street cars, assembly or club, is not of the Panama canal or Venezuela or China. Important as are those topics. It is not even free trade or protection or the gross wrong and folly of our Philippine policy or the alarming extravagance of administration. It is neither of these really great questions which fills the mind and dominates the anxiety of the American masses.

"The talk is of trusts on one side and trade unions on the other. There is a widespread fear that American industrial civilization must come to be a mere interplay between these vast forces in which the great body of independent small producers will cease to be indispensable. The originality of workmen, of citizenship and upon the faith that it would continue the dominant power that our government of freedom and order was established.

"The long power of the republican party, its political devotion to patronage, government, its vast grants of power and wealth to the 'protected' interests, its steadfast centralization of banking and financial privileges, its adoption of a colonial policy of force—these and a hundred other features of its policy, since its usefulness ended with the abolishing of slavery, have some normal fruit.

No Protest Against Combination.

"I make no fight no protest against mere union or combination of capital or labor where freedom of action is preserved and where the power created by it is not thrown into the scale. Ends of limiting individual wealth destroy a pernicious dream. Great fortunes, even in mean and unworthy hands and whether they will or not serve a valuable economic purpose so long as they are the creation of wealth by genius or service or obtained through untaxed privileges are secure and so long as they do not enjoy immunity from a just share of public burdens. The democratic party has never made and never will make an attack upon the freedom of those who have lawfully made fortunes, to make them larger and very certainly the democratic party, made up in a large part of wage earners, can never be otherwise than loyal to the laboring man or stand otherwise than for the sacredness of its moral and economic necessity in giving its great principles.

Tariff Question Discussed.

"To the one obvious effective step against monopolist tendencies that is to say, the repeal of their tariff favors the present president now peremptorily refuses his sanction. All else that he has done or will do in the child's play compared with this. I shall not dispute his sincerity, nor will I put terms this his eloquence or his public service. Here is the issue—the only one immediately available and practical—and not now and for the democratic party to decide. Before we proceed to practical legislation, the wisdom of which may be doubtful, the practical impossible, the policy is hardly doubtful—and before we take up as in time the American people will have to take up, the question of the relation of rich and poor may alike bear their full share of public burden, we can at least repeal the monstrous and indefensible—in high protective duties, the maintenance of which intact is the fundamental purpose of republican politics.

Body of Trust Problem.

"If I may borrow words of a philosopher, the trust problem is to-day the tariff problem in connection with public lands. Indeed, sound politics is generally political or social economy touched with emotion. On its economical side the defense and character of the high protective system has been demonstrated again and again—its artificial usefulness. But Americans today are not so much concerned with that question as with its profits. And the problem fused in their profound and just emotion over the unfairness and social danger of the system of concentrated industrial power and wealth-producing privilege.

"Therefore it is that I should rejoice to hear the democratic party propose not a general revision of the tariff with all of its difficulties and complications, but a revision of the widespread popular belief, faulty as I believe it to be, of great masses of American people that the tariff is a protective tariff, but in the first instance a removal or reduction to a revenue basis of the duties or items in the schedules of which practically monopolized. Instead of dealing with the whole problem of free trade and protection, instead of making trouble and almost every business, the democratic party may well deal with the few schedules in which gigantic and indefensible monopoly vast fortunes have been made by taxation upon the masses of people.

"For that campaign public sentiment is ready. In that campaign every argument in favor of economic freedom would be irresistible to the American people. Its essential corruption will readily appear to the average American citizen when he has scientifically think of free trade. Such a particular assault upon the fortress of monopoly would be effective. And in its benefits, if fault the American people would find, as the English people found in the days of Sir Robert Peel. Not only an all-sufficient reason later to support a campaign for demolition of the fortress.

"Nor is this the whole of democratic duty and opportunity at present. No wise man can fail to see that the republican parliament of a new series of colonies held for the American republic by force of arms and at enormous cost to the people is one of the centralization of power and disparagement of equal rights.

"The democratic minority of the senate committee on the Philippines did themselves and their party honor by the bill they proposed for free trade between the Philippines and the United States during our temporary occupancy of the islands and declaring it to be our purpose to govern them only until their people should have established a stable government, to be sufficiently guaranteed the performance by Spain of our treaty obligations related to the inhabitants of the islands, and have assented to by the United States Philippine military, naval and coaling stations.

"The American people are fickle indeed to be awakened to serious thought on the problem upon a side which is not sentimental. The enormous increase in cost of public administration since President Cleveland's second term is alarming to the last degree. And when the time comes, as come it must and by many reasons, for America to shall be constrained to the human economies of a policy of oppression, an annual expenditure of $500,000,000 (not including the cost of the Panama canal), as against $500,000,000, but eight years ago, will not be tolerated.

Army and Navy Expenses.

As army and permanently increased, and as the navy is greatly increased programme of naval expenditures in the future far beyond the limits yet reached, a disparagement of the moral glory and material prestige of our past, a continuous and strenuous preaching of the 'strong navy' hatred as the supreme function of this industrial and democratic republic, our demoralizing competition with European powers to make our own military and naval productive expense as great as theirs and without their justification of near-by and dangerous rivals—all these are among the results of our new imperial policy.

"The republican party has of late years affected to be the guardian of sound financial policy. Whether the party which made greenbacks a legal tender and passed the Sherman silver law deserves that claim even from good republicans or good democrats is well open to question. But it is beyond question that the republican party does not to-day deserve the praise. Its leaders have deliberately, if unwittingly, refused to give the national bank-note currency the sound and normal elasticity the business of the country requires.

"If we are to have a national bank system it should be permitted, or perhaps, compelled, to perform its duty in the provision of a currency made adequate and saved from redundancy by normal and automatic adjustment to the natural and sufficient demands of business.

Look to Banks for Currency.

"Since the volume of the greenbacks is fixed and their issue of necessity temporary and not normal, we have come to look to banks, national and state, for paper currency. Not only should the latter have the qualities of absolute security and instant redeemability into gold as the national standard of value, but they should be issued by banks in every city and every town of the land. For many purposes small country banks are in the best element of most consequence than the great national banks of Chicago and New York. It is the amount of the national bank currency not the increase as it is legitimately needed and decrease when it is not thus needed the very existence of that currency may be a trap for business.

"Under influences now dominant in it the republican party refuses any reconsideration over silver coinage was ended, to accord such normal elasticity to bank currency. Again and again the business and industry of the country have been put into critical danger by the failure of the currency. Again and again the secretary of the treasury has exercised power of bringing or refusing relief until to be exercised by any one man.

Outlines Next Campaign.

"That body of citizens has struggled again and again with comparative success to assert currency, and with the approval of the republican secretary of the treasury, but in vain. It has now, by the control of the republican party to permit normal elasticity of the currency, to relieve that all the fate of the democratic house committee on banking and currency, vigorously supported a reasonable and practical plan which was substantially conformity with recommendations of the Indianapolis commission. For any sound relief of this kind the country will, I believe, have to look to the democratic party.

"Upon this programme let us, then, make our campaign: The establishment of equal rights, the abolition of special privilege, the maintenance of democratic self-government. The programme to make a tariff reform, beginning with the goods which have fallen under monopoly; reasonable and practical prevention of interstate commerce preferences and abuses, rigorous reduction in cost of administration, the promotion of Philippine self-government and independence and the provision of fair and normal and normally distributed currency by all banks which hold banking charters from the government."

WILD FOWL ARE PLENTY.

Secluded Lake in Louisiana That Is Alive with All Kinds in Winter.

In central Louisiana east of Rapides parish lies Catahoula lake. It is really an extension of Black river into a shallow, marshy body, several miles wide and long.

Save where the river runs through its center, it is not deep and it is grown up with a vast quantity of weeds, reeds, lily-pads and duck grass and it is the winter home of inconceivable numbers of wild fowl. Snipe are along its low banks, woodcock in the woods about it and on its surface is every sort of duck which frequents the south Atlantic country.

There are plenty of wild geese, which feed upon near-by prairies in daytime and roost on it at night. Brant are there in thousands as well as cranes and herons.

No railway runs near enough to Catahoula lake to disturb its inhabitants and its rich stores of food will continue to make it an abiding place for fowls for many years to come, says the New York Sun.

It is hunted only by camping parties who go to it from neighboring towns and by professionals who shoot for the money there is in it. There are not enough of these people to make an sensible impression upon the supply of game.

The shooting on Catahoula is generally good, since it has 15 years ago, since it is far out of the beaten track of sportsmen. The men who go there make enormous bags and this is true particularly of those who have taken the precaution to supply themselves with boats in which they may get out from the land.

Even without a boat steady killing is possible. It is a peculiarity of Catahoula that at frequent intervals along its shores long points of land run far out. They are not more than ten yards wide and their outer ends are covered with reeds which afford excellent cover.

Most of the ducks learn to know these points and to avoid them, but enough of them refuse to grow wise to make the shooting admirable. Squatting on the end of a point a man may mark a flight of mallards hurtling toward him from a mile down the lake and he will have ample time in which to calculate their line of flight, the distance at which they will pass him and their speed.

This is shooting that has many attractions because under the conditions some remarkably long shots are possible and there is nothing which does a duck hunter's heart more good than to bring his duck down apparently out of the sky. It is nothing out of the way for a fair shot to make a score of 50 ducks day in and day out for a week on Catahoula, and there are men who kill a hundred a day regularly.

The market hunters who live about there use swivel guns when they think they will not be found out, but they make no effort to dispose of the meat. They have no way of getting their game to New Orleans, the only market worth considering, so they shoot for the feathers.

The fowl life on Catahoula is so great that the clamor is audible some miles away. Visiting sportsmen always know when they are approaching it by the incessant squawking of the ducks and honking of the geese. This noise is so great that it is a serious inconvenience until one get used to it. For three days after they leave the lake they can hear the cries of the birds sounding in their ears.

Catahoula is a place where a man can shoot until the barrels burn him through the glove on his left hand, and then he can shove the muzzle into the cold water and shoot again. It is a place where he can shoot until he becomes disgusted with shooting, and many sportsmen do get disgusted with it, going home days before their time.

POINTS ON EARTHQUAKES.

Prof. Milne lately addressed the Royal Geographical society on earthquakes, a subject which he has made his own, reports Chambers' Journal. In the course of his lecture he pointed out that there are two kinds of earth disturbances: those which affect continental areas, and those which only disturb an area with a radius of 100 or 200 miles. The first is the result of sudden movements in the process of rockfolding, accompanied by "faulting" and huge displacements of great masses of the earth's crust; the second kind being caused by after-settlements and adjustments along the lines of fracture caused by the greater movements. The relationship between the two groups is that of parents and children. Earthquakes and earthtremors are far more frequent than most persons imagine. On an average there are 30,000 annually, which disturb from ten to several hundred square miles of country with sufficient vigor to be felt by a number of people.

Too Particular.

Diner—What has become of that man who waited upon me the last time I was here?

Proprietor—Had to discharge him; he was too particular.

"Too particular? Isn't that a queer thing to bounce a man for?"

"Not so queer. A customer asked for a dozen in the shell, and he was so careful as to ask: 'Oysters or eggs?' He meant well, but no customer will stand for such a question as that."—Boston Transcript.

"KIDNEY COLDS."

Nothing will "lay you up," "play you out," "put you to bed" quicker than a kidney cold. Thousands feel the first effect of colds in the kidneys. Backache, rheumatic pains, urinary disorders, retention of the urine, infrequent and too frequent urinary discharges tell of kidneys out of order.

A. T. Ritenour, owner of the wood yard at 135 East Cork Street, Winchester, Va., says: "Ever since I had la Grippe I have been a sufferer from kidney troubles, which made themselves apparent in racking pains throughout the region of the kidneys and across the small of my back. The pains were always severe, and sometimes so sharp and biting that they compelled me to take to my bed. The kidney secretions furnished further evidence of disorders. They were off color, irregular and painful of passage. Added to this there was an annoying weakness. The newspaper advertisements of Doan's Kidney Pills attracted my attention, and I procured a box of that remedy at Franck Baker & Sons' drug store. The relief I experienced was magical. The pills lifted me from my bed of sickness, placed me on my feet, and made me a well man. I can work as well as ever. Doan's Kidney Pills, I believe, saved my life. They are a great remedy to stop kidney troubles resulting from colds."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Ritenour will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists; price 50 cents per box.

HIS "HONEY" HAD VANISHED.

The Waiter Didn't Understand Johnson's Inquiry, But He Thought He Did.

A young Philadelphian whom we may call Johnson, because that is not his name, was married several days ago, and it occurred to him that he would take his bride into an upstate town on their honeymoon, relates the Philadelphia Ledger. He was particularly desirous of visiting this town, as he told his bride, because at the hotel where he intended staying "they served such delicious honey at every meal." That will be delightful, said Mrs. Johnson.

The couple arrived at the hotel in due course, and they were just in time for tea. Johnson escorted his bride proudly to a table in the dining room and then, after an admiring glance at her, looked quizzically round the board. There was no honey on the table and none in the room. Johnson was surprised and called a waiter. "Say here," said he, "where's my honey?" The waiter seemed at a loss as to what to say, but finally leaned forward and in a stage whisper said: "She don't work here no mo'!"

COMMUNING WITH NATURE.

Laura Was Not Saddened by the Beautiful Scenery—It Was a Bug.

Close beside the sparkling brook, whose silvery waters danced merrily in the sunlight and rippled joyously over the golden sands, they sat in silence—George and Laura—drinking in the glorious beauty of the rustic scene and communing with nature in one of her chosen shrines. Afar off in the west the sun seemed to linger on the rim of the horizon as if unwilling to shut out from his gaze the lovely landscape that glowed with its softened and even melancholy radiance in his departing beams, says Woman's Home Companion.

"What is it, darling?" he asked, placing his arm tenderly around her waist. "Has the sun seemed to linger on the rim of the horizon as if unwilling to shut out from his gaze the lovely landscape that glowed with its softened and even melancholy radiance in his departing beams, says Woman's Home Companion.

"No, George!" she screamed, waving her hands wildly and making a frantic jab at the small of her back. "I think it's some kind of a bug!"

The Best Way to Teach History.

The idea of object teaching, the foundation of the Froebel system of instruction, has in recent years met with general acceptance and adoption in almost every branch of study, and the application of the same principle and much more valuable in the way of impressing the reality of history upon the minds of the young than any amounts of mere text-book instruction could be. A recent issue of the "Four-Track Series," published by the New York Central management, gives a description of the historical sites in the immediate vicinity of New York, which will be of exceeding value for the guidance of teachers and others who desire to adopt this method of historical study. One of the best ways to develop civic pride and promote good citizenship lies in this very direction, an increase of knowledge of local history being accompanied with an increase of interest in matters of local government and a higher esteem for what affects the welfare and good name of the community.—From Leslie's Weekly.

Fastidious Young Man.

The most fastidious man in Missouri has been found on a farm a few miles south of Nevada. One day tracks that had been made by bare feet were found on what is known as the Autenrieth road. It has been learned that they were made by a young man living in the neighborhood who had had his shoes nicely shined and was carrying them under his arm to keep them from getting muddy.—Kansas City Journal.

Notice Too Good.

A Jasper county (Mo.) farmer paid a high tribute to the literary talents of a Carthage real estate agent the other day. He decided to sell his place and got a real estate agent to write the notice. When the agent read the notice to him he said: "Read that again." After the second reading he said: "I believe I'll not sell. I've been looking for a place of that kind all my life and didn't know I had it until you described it to me."—Milwaukee News.

"In diseases that come to women only, as a rule, the doctor is called in, sometimes several doctors, but still matters go from bad to worse; but I have never known of a case of female weakness which was not helped when Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was used faithfully. For young women who are subject to headaches, backache, irregular or painful periods, and nervous attacks due to the severe strain on the system by some organic trouble, and for women of advanced years in the most trying time of life, it serves to correct every trouble and restore a healthy action of all organs of the body.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a household reliance in my home, and I would not be without it. In all my experience with this medicine, which covers years, I have found nothing to equal it and always recommend it."—Mrs. Laura L. Barnes, 607 Second St., N. E., Washington, D. Such testimony should be accepted by all women as convincing evidence that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound stands without a peer as a remedy for all the distressing ills of women.

One of the essentials of the happy homes of to-day is a fund of information as to right living and the best methods of promoting health and happiness. With proper knowledge, each hour of recreation, of enjoyment and of effort may be made to contribute to that end and are of not less value than the using of the most wholesome foods and the selecting of the best medicinal agents when needed. With the well-informed, medicinal agents are used only when nature needs assistance and while the importance of cleansing the system effectually, when billous or constipated, has long been known, yet until within recent years it was necessary to resort to oils, salts, extracts of roots, barks and other cathartics which were found to be objectionable and to call for constantly increased quantities.

Then physicians having learned that the most excellent laxative and carminative principles were to be found in certain plants, principally in the leaves, the California Fig Syrup Co. discovered a method of obtaining such principles in their purest condition and of presenting them with pleasant and refreshing liquids in the form most acceptable to the system and the remedy became known as—Syrup of Figs—as figs were used, with the plants, in making it, because of their agreeable taste.

This excellent remedy is now rapidly coming into universal use as the best of family laxatives, because it is simple and wholesome and cleanses and sweetens the system effectually without disturbing the natural functions and without unpleasant after effects and its use may be discontinued when it is no longer required.

All who would enjoy good health and its blessings should remember that it is the one remedy which physicians and parents well-informed approve and recommend and use and which they and their little ones, alike enjoy, because of its pleasant flavor, its gentle action and its beneficial effects.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all reliable druggists, at the regular price of fifty cents per bottle, in original packages only, having the name of the remedy—Syrup of Figs—and the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package.

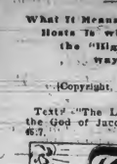
AN INVINCIBLE UNION



God's Purpose Linked with Man's Surrendered Will.

What It Means to Say, "The Lord of Hosts Is with Us"—Sermon by the "Highway and By-way" Preacher.

Copyright, 1903, by J. M. Edson.

Text: "The Lord of Hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge."—Psalm 46:7.

THE words of our text, like the triumphant shout of a returning army proclaiming the prowess of the great general who has led it to victory, sound forth from the 46th Psalm, which was written supposedly in commemoration of the great deliverance of Jerusalem from the mighty Assyrian army. It was during the reign of the godly King Hezekiah that these remarkable events transpired. They are full of thrilling interest. Following the glorious religious and political reforms with which Hezekiah inaugurated his reign, he boldly threw off the yoke of the Assyrian king and refused longer to pay him tribute. Later the northern tribes of Israel were taken captive and their country laid waste by the Assyrians, and this exposed Judah to fresh attack. Many of her strongholds were taken and the vast Assyrian army under Sennacherib came and encamped against Jerusalem. The city was ordered to surrender in the most insulting and blasphemous language. The God of Judah was mocked as being unable to save them from the iron hand of the great conqueror. In the hour of peril and desperate need Hezekiah lays the matter before the Lord and obtains word through the Prophet Isaiah that the Lord has heard his prayer and will deliver the city out of the hands of the enemy. "And it came to pass that night that the angel of the Lord went out and smote in the camp of the Assyrians an hundred four score and five thousand: and when they arose early in the morning behold, they were all dead corpses."

SO MUCH for the historical facts which probably furnished some devout Jewish poet with his inspiration for the Psalm. In the eleven short verses of this paean of praise the words of our text are repeated twice, echoing the thought in the opening verse, and furnishing the key to the whole. The sound of the words comes with the reassuring calm of the "Peace, be still!" which hushed the raging sea of Galilee to rest. It is a confident boast which swells and throbs all through the Psalm and reveals the glory which comes from the linking of the Divine power with human weakness, bringing victory in the face of a mighty foe. What must these words have meant to those helpless Jews shut up in their city and unable of themselves to strike a single effective blow at the enemy which threatened their homes and their loved ones? To-day the Assyrians are seen to be drawing the lines closer about the city and preparing to make the final assault upon the city's walls. Darkness closes in upon the city and the encamped enemy. What the morrow may bring forth fills the people with anxious dread. But Hezekiah and Isaiah have placed the matters at issue in the hands of a mighty ally, and, while the besieged city waits, God's angel goes forth and smites the Assyrian army with the scourge of death. The morning light as it breaks over that troubled and anxious city reveals to the wondering eyes of the people heaps of dead instead of an onrushing and conquering army, and in the distance the remnant of Sennacherib's army can be seen retreating, leaving behind its lifeless warriors. It is no idle boast which echoes throughout the city. They can say in truth: "The Lord of Hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge."

IT WAS a great thing for King Hezekiah to be able to claim the Lord as his ally. It is the greatest boast which any soul can make. Japan a few years ago was proud to claim as her ally the British nation with her powerful fleets. Cuba more recently was made strong and confident in the knowledge that the United States stood behind her in sympathy and was ready to help strike the blow for liberty.

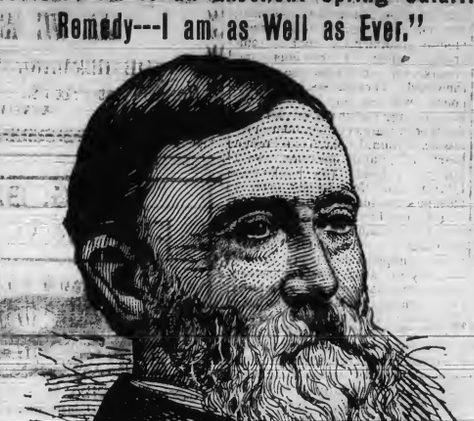
Napoleon's boast that God was with the heaviest artillery sounds well, and has echoed and reechoed on the lips of men in self-assuring confidence ever since, but we dare to claim it is not true. We would like to recast it and say: "God, with the artillery, makes it the strongest." The imputation that God is always looking for the biggest army and the heaviest guns, so as to be on the winning side, is worse than blasphemy. God is always with the right, and whether it has the heaviest guns or not it wins gloriously in the end. Surely it was not because Hezekiah had the heaviest fighting force which made God his ally and secured for him the victory. Follow through the pages of sacred history and it will be seen that with God it was not a question of the largest army and best equipment, but was always an issue between right and wrong; the deliverance of man in answer to faith, and the glory of God in fulfillment of His promises. Trace through the pages of profane history and it is no hard task to find again and again the triumph of the right in the face of the greatest odds; the victory of the weaker over the strong because the Lord of Hosts was with the weaker in the righteous cause. Take it in our own revolutionary war and consider the seemingly insurmountable odds against which Washington's small, and poorly-equipped army contended. If it were read that God was with the largest armies and the heaviest artillery, how can the surrender at Yorktown be explained? how can the bravely-won independence be understood? Wrong may sometimes triumph for a season; the might of man may seem to prevail and victory for a time perch upon its banner, but it must not be forgotten that God is playing a large game, and that His record is written in centuries and generations, or a century. Ultimate triumph is to be His. Truth as it is found in Him is to prevail. God says: "I will be exalted in the earth," and they who can say: "The Lord of Hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge," are fighting along the line of sure victory.

THE titles which are given to God in our text are specially fitting and significant: "The Lord of Hosts," and "the God of Jacob." The hosts of the Assyrians had come up against Jerusalem, but the hosts of the Lord were marshalled to the aid of the beleaguered city. The honor, the power, the faithfulness of God were impugned by the godless enemy, and the covenant-keeping God could not forsake His people; He must deliver them for His own vindication and honor, as well as because the need was desperate and the cry of faith was persistent. The Lord of Hosts as the militant God; the God of Jacob as the covenant-keeping God. If the eye of faith will look long and steadily toward the hills from whence comes its help, a vision will burst upon the soul which will recall the sight which cheered the fainthearted servant of the prophet as he was enabled to see the innumerable hosts of God encamped between the threatening enemy and the anointed prophet—the Lord of Hosts. The Lord with the command of all the forces of Heaven to carry out His commissions and execute His judgments. That was no idle boast which Jesus made when the Roman guard took Him prisoner in the garden, and He declared that He could ask of His Father and He would send "more than twelve legions of angels" to deliver Him. Legion is credited with having an army of over two millions and a half of men when he made his descent upon Greece, supposedly the largest army ever mustered by a single ruler, and yet this immense army, which it is said took seven days and nights to cross the bridge of boats built across the Hellespont, was but a handful when in comparison to the innumerable hosts which God can marshal when need requires. The arena of the upper air is filled with the forces of Heaven as they swiftly pass hither and thither in performing the will of Him who is the Lord of all these hosts. What a tremendous claim it is to say that "the Lord of Hosts is with us!" What invincible union! It was this confidence which brought Moses the fugitive back, and made him bold to go before the mighty Pharaoh and demand deliverance for his enslaved countrymen. It was this confidence which kept Joshua circling the walls of Jericho until they crumbled to the ground. It was this confidence which nerved the arm of David and sent the stone with unerring aim into the forehead of the Philistine giant. It was this confidence which enabled Paul to "fight the good fight of faith," to meet all the perils and hardships of his pioneer missionary work and give him the right at the close of his tremendously active life to claim that he had been more than conqueror through Him who had loved him and given Himself for him. And it is this confidence which makes the servant of the Lord brave and steadfast and victorious in the face of every foe, and enables him to surmount every difficulty. The Lord of Hosts! What a title! "The Lord of Hosts is with us!" What a claim!

BUT the Lord is more than a militant Lord leading His hosts to victory. He is a safe refuge into which His children may withdraw when the storm is sweeping down upon them, and they may rest there until the danger is past. And it is the God of Jacob Who is our refuge. Why so? Why not the God of Abraham, or the God of Isaac? We do not need to go into the history of Jacob very far to discover the reason. Who was it who had to flee for his life to escape the anger of a wronged brother and who found a resting place at the gateway of Heaven, where God met him and made His covenant with him? Who was it who sojourned in the land of his jealous and avaricious father-in-law, who suffered wrong, who was cheated and lied to and abused and threatened, and yet who found the Lord was with him and giving him great substance and a numerous progeny? Who was it who was troubled with the sins of his youth as he journeyed toward the land from which he had been forced to flee, and who when he heard his brother was coming to meet him with a force of fighting men despaired of his life? Who was it sought out God alone that night and wrestled with Him all night and at last found in Him a safe refuge, even though he halted on his hip throughout the rest of his days? The fugitive Jacob whom God brought back in honor to the land of promise; the oppressed Jacob whom God delivered with much wealth and large family; the threatened and hated Jacob whom God reconciled to his brother—this is the one who can speak of God as a God of refuge. The God of Jacob is the God who never fails His children when they are in distress and trouble. To speak of God as the God of Jacob, to claim Him as our refuge, instantly inspires confidence, for despite all of Jacob's meanness and sin and wrong-doing, his faith reached up by way of the covenant promises of God and obtained the needed protection and help. To be able to claim the God of Jacob as our refuge is to put confidence in a God Who has met every human need and given protection in times of greatest darkness and danger. This is the kind of a God we need! This is the kind of a God we have!

BUT not every one can claim that "the Lord of Hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge." Even Christians oftentimes cannot make this proud boast, because sin has drawn them from God's side, and because, when in difficulty and distress, they have turned to human aid instead of looking to God. Not all churches that are founded in the name of the Lord of Hosts can claim in truth that He is with them. Many churches in their methods and practices, in their worldly-minded activities, are not in the blessed company of the One Whose name they bear. They may feel that they are furthering the cause of Christ's kingdom, but they are seeking to perfect in the flesh that which has begun in the spirit, and are walking with the world and not with God. It means much to say, "the Lord of Hosts is with us." Who may make that claim? How may one know that the Lord of Hosts is with him? Let us consider these all-important questions.

First, who may claim that the Lord of Hosts is standing with them, that the omnipotent power is linked with human weakness in invincible union? He who by a threefold act of will and heart has turned towards God, has accepted Him and is walking with Him. It is a matter of attitude towards God, of choice between self or God, and of conduct following the choice. Right attitude towards God will always discover His dwelling place; right choice will always place human feet on the pathway along which God moves, and right conduct will keep the soul in step with the Divine will, so that it can confidently claim "the Lord of Hosts is with me; the God of Jacob is my refuge." This threefinged helper must be used by saint and sinner alike in gaining the realm in which God moves.



There is a sense in which the Lord is always with the soul which has been born again, whether that soul is living in obedience to His will or not, for He knows them that are His, and none shall be lost, even though they are at last saved, "so as by fire." There is a sense in which the Lord is always with the unregenerate soul of man, for Scripture declares that God stands at the door of the human heart and knocks, and the sinner is told to call upon the Lord while He is near. But neither saint nor sinner can make the boast of the text unless his attitude, his choice and his conduct are right in the case of the saint it is the renewing of its broken relationship with God. With the sinner it is the beginning of a new experience, in which the attitude of the heart is toward God, the choice for the first time is made for God and the conduct is with God.

THE sinner cannot share in the triumphant strain of our text until his heart has turned towards God, until his will has been surrendered and a new motive rules in his life. Attitude is the light which shows where God is; choice is the step which, if taken, places the soul at the side of God, and conduct is the music of the life which enables it to keep its step with the Divine will. The Christian cannot stand in the temple of God and sing with the Hezekiahs and Isaiahs that "the Lord of Hosts is with us," unless he quits his worldliness and turns towards God; unless he "seeks first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness," and unless he lives in his life the religion which he professes with his lips. The church cannot claim its right to these words if its attitude is not steadfastly towards God and away from the allurements and enticements of the world; if it chooses fairs, and suppers, and entertainments, and catch-penny affairs of every kind to raise money and interest the people it seeks to reach, instead of preaching the Gospel of repentance and salvation, and keeping itself unspotted from the world. The words may be beautifully inscribed upon the walls of a church, the congregation which resorts thither may read them over confidently so as to arouse a false sense of Divine nearness and cooperation, but methinks in some churches at least there are social and festival occasions when God is very far away, and the Devil himself makes bold to come in and read over the words and laugh at the falsehood they express.

NOW may we know that "the Lord of Hosts is with us?" By testing before God our true attitude towards Him, by searching out underlying motives when exercising the power of choice, by turning the searchlight of God's Word upon our lives and discovering the sins of the inner life and the outward conduct, and by the evidences of experience. Having reassured the heart by the threefold testing that "the Lord of Hosts is with us," then with Hezekiah you can confidently wait until experience proves that God was indeed with you. It may be a long night of anxiety and uncertainty, but the morning light will reveal the dead Assyrians lying all about, and the triumphant shout will burst over the citadel of the soul: Surely, "the Lord of Hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge."

DAN GROSVENOR SAYS:

"Pe-ru-na is an Excellent Spring Catarrh Remedy---I am as well as Ever."

HON. DAN. A. GROSVENOR, OF THE FAMOUS OHIO FAMILY.

Hon. Dan. A. Grosvenor, Deputy Auditor for the War Department, in a letter written from Washington, D. C., says:

"Allow me to express my gratitude to you for the benefit derived from one bottle of Peruna. One week has brought wonderful changes and I am now as well as ever. Besides being one of the very best spring tonics it is an excellent catarrh remedy."

DAN. A. GROSVENOR.

In a recent letter he says:

"I consider Peruna really more meritorious than I did when I wrote you last. I receive numerous letters from acquaintances all over the country asking me if my certificate is genuine. I invariably answer, yes."—Dan. A. Grosvenor.

A County Commissioner's Letter.

Hon. John Williams, County Commissioner, 617 West Second street, Duluth, Minn., says the following in regard to Peruna:

"As a remedy for catarrh I can cheerfully recommend Peruna. I know what it is to suffer from that terrible disease and I feel that it is my duty to speak a good word for the tonic that brought me immediate relief. Peruna cured me of a bad case of catarrh and I know it will cure any other sufferer from that disease."—John Williams.

A Congressman's Letter.

Hon. H. W. Ogden, Congressman from Louisiana, in a letter written at Washington, D. C., says the following of Peruna, the national catarrh remedy:

"I can conscientiously recommend your Peruna as a first class all around good medicine to those who are in need of a catarrh remedy. It has been commended to me by people who have used it, as a remedy particularly effective in the cure of catarrh. For those who need a good catarrh medicine I know of nothing better."—H. W. Ogden.

W. E. Griffith, Conean, Texas, writes: "I suffered with chronic catarrh for many years. I took Peruna and it completely cured me. I think Peruna is the best medicine in the world for catarrh. My general health is much improved by its use, as I am much stronger than I have been for years."—W. E. Griffith.

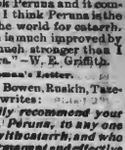
Congressman H. Bowen Ruskin, Tazewell county, Va., writes:

"I can cheerfully recommend your valuable remedy, Peruna, to any one who is suffering with catarrh, and who is in need of a permanent and effective cure."—H. Bowen.

Mr. Fred. D. Scott, Laurel, Ohio, Flight Guard of Hiram Foot Ball Team, writes:



"As a specific for lung trouble I place Peruna at the head. I have used it myself for colds and catarrh of the bowels and it is a splendid remedy. It restores vitality, increases bodily strength and makes a sick person well in a short time. I give Peruna my hearty indorsement."—Fred. D. Scott.

Gen. Ira C. Abbott, 906 M St., Washington, D. C., writes:

"I am fully convinced that your remedy is an excellent tonic. Many of my friends have used it with the most beneficial results for coughs, colds and catarrhal trouble."—Ira C. Abbott.

"I have been troubled all my life with catarrh in my head. I took Peruna for about three months and now think I am permanently cured. I believe that for catarrh in all its forms Peruna is the medicine of the age. It cures when all other remedies fail. I can heartily recommend Peruna as a catarrh remedy."—Mrs. Elmer Fleming.

Mrs. Elmer Fleming, Minneapolis, Minn.

Treat Catarrh in Spring.

The spring is the time to treat catarrh. Cold, wet winter weather often retards a cure of catarrh. If a course of Peruna is taken during the early spring months the cure will be prompt and permanent. There can be no failures if Peruna is taken intelligently during the favorable weather of spring.

As a systemic catarrh remedy Peruna eradicates catarrh from the system wherever it may be located. It cures catarrh of the stomach or bowels with the same certainty as catarrh of the head.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

SEVERE ATTACK OF GRIP

"When I had an attack of the grip last winter (the second one) I actually cured myself with one bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says Frank W. Perry, Editor of the Enterprise, Shortsville, N. Y. "This is the honest truth. I at times kept from coughing myself to pieces by taking a teaspoonful of this remedy, and when the coughing spell would come on at night I would take a dose and it seemed that in the briefest interval the cough would pass off and I would go to sleep perfectly free from cough and its accompanying pains. To say the remedy acted as a most agreeable surprise is putting it very mildly. I had no idea that it could or would knock out the grip, simply because I had never tried it for such a purpose, but it did, and it seemed with the second attack of coughing the remedy caused it to not only be of less duration, but the pains were far less severe, and I had not used the contents of one bottle before Mr. Grip had bid me adieu." For sale by all druggists.

EXCENTRICITIES.

What would the world be without its odd people? How weary, stale, and unprofitable! Banish the eccentricities, the strange geniuses, the men and women with various mental peculiarities, what is commonly known as crotchets and cranks, and you banish the life of the world. Perhaps we might dispense with an epic poet or two, three or four philosophers, and any number of the so-called modern professors. I should not die of a broken heart; my young affections would not run to waste, if the works upon Physics and Metaphysics were to disappear to-morrow. A few of us might [illegible]y survive the extinction of the whole race of sensational novelists. I for one should not be quite unappeasable in my grief if the Boone County Recorder were to announce that by some mysterious and unaccountable [illegible]nat the great libraries of the world had all shared the fate of the manuscripts of the Alexandrian Library; if only the custodians of the same had managed to save the works of Charles Lamb, Mark Twain, Artemas Ward, Josh Billings and Bill Nye. What would life be without these? Abolish all of their epigrams, all the relics of their wit, all their odd contortions of phrase and thought, make it penal to quote a single sentence from any of them, compel us to manufacture our own odd sayings and what would life be worth? How should we contrive to get through a single social, or dinner party? Who would have the courage to look through even one newspaper article? How insufferably dreary would be the debate in our National Congress, were it not for the odd drolleries of its members as shown by the publications of the ecentric "Sunset."

It is strange, but nevertheless true that those whom the world calls its greatest men, its heroes, have all had their peculiar weaknesses, and may be enumerated among the great throng of odd people.

Diogones, an ancient Grecian philosopher, was so eccentric that he lived in a tub, which he carried about with him from place to place. Upon one occasion he was seen going about the street in day light carrying a lantern, searching, as he said, for an honest man.

Caesar, who is thought by some historians to be the greatest man of all times, lost, in middle life, the hyacinthine locks of his gallant youth and used to appear with a wreath of laurel wound gracefully around his brow, in the vain hope of concealing his baldness.

Cicero was the vainest of oratorical coxcombs and certainly in his early career, was the very ideal of a Roman dude. The hem of his purple toga had to be of just such a width and the whole garment had to fall in just such graceful folds about his dandyship or Mrs. Cicero probably became a victim to an oratorical onslaught, such as overwhelmed the unfortunate Anthony after his fatal trip into Egypt.

The fondness of our President for the close hug of the grizzly bear, and the peculiar scent of others less ferocious animals will be transmitted.

There is nothing more wearying to theeye, nothing more distressingly monotonous than to look over a vast extent of level plains, like the prairies of the far west, the pampas of South America, or the steppes of Russia. No gently rising elevations, no undulating hills, and valleys, nothing to attract, nothing upon which to rest the eye, one uniform monotony of sameness. Such is a character in man or woman, young or old, in which there is nothing peculiar to attract and pique our curiosity. After long converse and association with people who resemble one another in almost all things, like so many peas in a pod, this great mass of goody-goodies, who think alike, talk alike, and who go jogging along on the same dull level of leaden stupidity, how pleasant, how exhilarating to meet with a real descendent of Peck; one who can keep everybody within hearing on the laughing lookout to learn what he will do and say next! It is like fondling with the ever agile and restless squirrel after nursing for a long time the lazy and sleepy kitten.

Even physical beauty, and more especially of the face, is said to consist in some peculiar expression rather than in general regularity of the features. The odd habits and whimsicalities of literary men and women are wholy unaccountable. Some write in the morning, others only in the evening. Some with a steel pen, others with a goose quill. As one oddly said, "they spread the opinions of one goose with the pinions of another goose."

We see that Genius has numberless strange ways of displaying itself. We very much admire such eccentric men, as the Frenchman, who ate his plums, looking at them with a microscope under the pleasing delusion that they tasted as large as they looked; and the naturalist, who surrounded himself with animals of every kind, from every zone. Everything that walks runs, hops, swims or flies, found a home under his hospitalable roof. His living statement, was "I love animals better than I do folks." His dying statement, "I am going where there are a great many strange animals.

There will be no more dreaded plagues of grasshoppers or locusts. The Department of Agriculture has discovered a plague to kill the plague—the germ of an extremely contagious insect disease that can wipe out the vastest swarms of locusts or of grasshoppers in a single night. The discovery is the result of years of patient investigation on the part of the department entomologists, and the practical value of the government agents and private individuals acting as such all over the world. The discovery is held to be of immense value to farmers in those sections of the country, notably the Middle West and Southwest where the locust and grasshopper plagues have for years been one of the most dreaded possibilities against which the farmer has to contend.

Mr. John Crowe and his pretty bride were welcomed by Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Crowe with the parental blessing, and John was the recipient of the congratulations of his many friends.

S. Walker Beverly bought, last week, of Mrs. Weigamuth, the property on Pike street opposite church street, 65 feet front, extending back the same width in rear as in front to the L. & N. R. R., for the sum of $800.

Last week Mr. Geo. B. Powers had a thrilling fight with a spreading viper on Mrs. E. P. Holder's place. He was trashing some when he heard something rattling in the leaves behind him. Turning around he was actually scared to see that a large spreading viper with swollen neck was charging directly at him and intent on getting at him with as few preliminaries as possible. Having some wheat in his hand, he struck the viper with it, which sounded its wager of battle in a hiss as loud as that of an old goose. When Powers struck they were so close that he had to hold the serpent down with the scythe. So violent did it struggle that he commenced calling the boy to come and help him. But the boy was over the hill and could not hear him. Becomiug desperate he managed to get the scythe on it so that he had it safe and getting out his knife which he opened with his teeth and cutting a good switch he wore it out on the viper which soon ceased its struggles. It measured 3 feet in length and its head and neck flattened out wider, he said, than his hand. Some one in the crowd suggested to Powers, who was recounting the incident, that had he looked around he would have found its mate. George, with becoming modesty, said that he "didn't want to find its mate just then." Not many years ago these venomous serpents were unknown in this part of the country. In the mean while people have killed the blacksnake indiscriminately altho many of them know that it is the principal enjoyment of its life to hunt down, kill and devour all venomous snakes. Some readers of the Recorder were speculating on the probability of having snake and mad dog items in the near future suppressed. Not an hour afterward Power's note describing his encounter with the viper. In the afternoon of the same day, Mrs. James Holder's little dog exhibited symptoms of hydrophobia, having convulsions and frothing at the mouth. Kirtley Roberts and Waite Cross followed it to a little branch where it again had violent convulsions and was put out of its misery by the unerring shot from Kirtley's rifle. More stray, ownerless dogs are habitues of Walton than any other place of its size in the country.

Carl Cason, of Middle creek, returned from Indiana, Monday, and brought back with him a nice horse he purchased. Now let some one some girl will get to go buggy riding now.

Walter Lonlaker and Carrie McCarty were married in Lawrenceburg, Wednesday. They will live in Aurora, and had their house furnished already to go to as soon as pronounced man and wife. Their plan is a sensible and commendable one.

James Nettles had a chicken that is supposed to have had the hydrophobia. Mrs. Nettles was out in the yard and noticed its strange actions, when she called her husband. They say it acted like a mad dog—would run at the other chickens which seemed to be instinctively afraid of it, and hid from it. When nothing else was to be seen it spied Mrs. Nettles, at whom it made a dart with tail erect, wings spread, feathers ruffled, ears thrown back and mouth wide open. Mrs. Nettles gave a terrific scream and fled for the house, and had her husband not been present and dispatched the chicken with a stick no doubt but what she would have been bitten.

Wise advertisers always use a paper having a large circulation. Then why is it not wise to make your wants known through the correspondent whose items are most read. A short time since the little son of W. B. Walton advertised in the Commissary items for a billie goat and now he has a nice span. Dony Cook had a dog to stray off or was stolen, and he notified the Commissary, and the latter part of next week received postal card from a man on Gunpowder, saying the dog was at his house. Those who have anything to sell, or wish to buy anything, should make their wants kuown to the Commissary, or if you have an item of interest, give it to the Commissary itemizer, and it will be read. Everybody reads his items to see what the old crank has to say.

Thursday and Friday I spent in the interest of the Recorder—two very tiresome days they were. I did talking enough to win over 20 subscribers, but did not get a single one. I found seven not taking it, but a part, if not all will take it in the near future. Two hard days work without getting a subscriber looks discouraging, and yet I am not discouraged. I am not built that way. You will hear from me, Mr. Editor, in a way to please you before many weeks pass. It takes time and patience, no difference what we are working at. I was given words of praise, cheer and wished success all along the line, which did me much good. Thursday I ate one of the very best of dinners with Geo. Hensley. I would tell you what all we had for dinner, but it would make your mouth water.

Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for this disease we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous disease. It will cure a cold or an attack of the grip in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

THE LEVEE GAVE WAY.

New Orleans, April 4.—The most serious development of the flood situation Friday was the break in the levee at Hollybrook plantation, owned by James G. Pittman. The crevasse is about six miles below Lake Providence in East Carroll parish. The levee probably was 18 feet in height and no attempt will be made to mend it. Efforts, however, will be made to hold the ends. Much valuable cotton land will be overflowed but the damage will be principally in delay in getting seed into the ground. The crevasse is reported to be 500 feet wide. Parts of Tensas, Madison, Concordia, Catahouh and Richland parishes, in addition to East Carroll, will be submerged, the water ultimately returning to the Mississippi through the Red river. Dispatches from the vicinity of the break say with favorable existing river conditions the water will not long run through the crevasse and the damage will be considerably less than that done by the Wyly-Bass crevasse in the same vincinity in 1893.

The work of strengthening the crib work at Hymella continued throughout the day. No signs of weakness in the structure have yet appeared. It is anticipated that sacking will begin Saturday and that the break will be mended early next week.

NATIONAL LEAGUE UMPIRES.

Radical Measures Will Be Taken to Enforce Certain Rules.

Washington, April 4.—At a conference between President Pulliam and his staff of National league umpires, held at Old Point Comfort, radical measures were taken to enforce rules against "kicking" and rowdyism. The following important construction was placed on Rule 29, relative to the pitcher's position. It is construed as meaning "That the pitcher, in taking his position, shall place no part of either foot back of the rubber, neither shall he take more than one step in delivering the ball to the backstop." The enforcement of this rule will do away with all preliminary steps, either to the rear or side of the pitcher's rubber.

A stricter interpretation of rules prohibiting the batsman from balking the catcher and that of the fielders interfering with base runners when caught between the bases was agreed on. No batsman hereafter will be allowed to take first when hit by a slowly delivered ball, the umpire to be judge of such speed.

Emphasis is laid on the rule requiring runners to keep within the three-foot lines in going to first, and in general, notice is given of the literal enforcement of playing rules.

He says that Colombia should do her utmost to facilitate the opening of the canal for the benefit of the world, but patriotism rejects the sale of a single foot of the soil of the isthmus and scorns to allow a foreign government to exercise its jurisdiction over territory received as a free legacy from her forefathers.

The temperature was near the freezing point. Danger signals are displayed on the lake and vesselmen have been warned not to venture out.

A child named Carrie Smoot was struck by a flying brick and fatally injured, and several others were badly hurt. The two story house of Frank Palmer was lifted entirely off its foundation. Mr. Palmer's barn was totally destroyed and valuable machinery lost. The storm ran through the country, uprooting trees and overturning 20 barns. The old Christian church was blown down. A number of plate glass windows were broken in the stores and chimneys, small buildings and trees were leveled. The storm was accompanied by rain and followed by a drop of 20 degrees in temperature and a change of wind to the northwest. The damage here is estimated at $25,000.

ENDED HER EXISTENCE

She Was the Daughter of Capt. Edwin Ames, of the United States Army, and the Divorced Wife of An Indiana Man.

New York, April 6—Mrs. Louise Ames Van Welk shot and killed herself in the Hotel Washington, in Jersey City, Sunday. She was 37 years old, a blonde and good-looking. She arrived in Jersey City on Friday, and went to the Hotel Washington.

She seemed in good spirits and was well supplied with money, and numerous packages arrived at the desk from New York stores for her. She was last seen alive Saturday evening by one of the maids of the hotel.

Mrs. Van Welk wore a dressing gown, which was open at the throat. Apparently, while sitting in front of the mirror in her room she had placed a revolver against her breast over the heart and outside her undergarment and fired. The revolver, containing four loaded shells, and the empty, was found beside her.

Several bundles of letters were found addressed to Mrs. L. E. Wolfbauer, care of Mrs. Pease, 1250 McCullough street, Baltimore, and to Mrs. Edward W. Wolfbauer, 1017 Fifteenth street, Northwest, Washington, D. C. All these were signed by Edward W. Wolfbauer and addressed the recipient as wife. The most recently dated was in 1901, and most of the letters were written from various places in Cuba. The signatures to these letters and from the signature to the woman's will, which was found among the letters, it is supposed that Mr. Wolfbauer died and that she remarried, her second husband being Van Welk.

The will was dated Sioux Falls, March 2, 1903. This document leaves all the wardrobe of the testatrix to Mrs. Mary Garland, Washington, D. C. To the daughter of the testatrix was left the houses and lots at 1853 and 1855 Seventh street, Northwest, Washington. In case of the death of the daughter before the provisions of the will are carried out, all the share of the daughter, whose name is Dorothy, is to go to William J. Hess, of Washington. An insurance policy on the life of the testatrix, made out in favor of Otto B. Van Welk, for $1,500, is willed to the daughter.

Mr. Royston and Mr. Townsend, the men to whom registered packages were mailed, are named as executors of the will.

Baltimore, April 6.—Mrs. Louise Ames Welk was the daughter of Capt. Edwin Ames, of the United States Army. Fourteen years ago she was married here to Otto B. Welk, of Indiana. Three years since, they were divorced in Washington. After the divorce proceedings Mrs. Welk placed the prefix "Van" to the surname of her former husband. Her friends in this city were very reticent Sunday night, but it is understood that the body of the young woman will be brought here for burial.

Washington, April 6.—Mrs. Van Welk was divorced from her first husband, and about three years ago she was married to Edward Wolfbauer, a New Yorker. It is said that recently she took up her residence in Dakota, with a view to obtaining a divorce from him also. Mrs. Van Welk had engaged quarters here for the racing season.

Greencastle, Ind., April 6.—Mary Ames Welk, who committed suicide at Jersey City Sunday, was a granddaughter of Bishop Ames, of the Methodist Episcopal church, once president of DePauw university. She was graduated from DePauw with the class of '88 and was prominent in Indiana society and college Greek letter society circles. Fourteen years ago she married Otto Welk, then a student at DePauw, and several years later she received a divorce and married Wolfhauer. Otto Welk is now a resident of St. Louis.

THE IMPRESSIONS OF A WOMAN

What a Woman Says About Western Canada.

Although many men have written to this paper regarding the prospects of Western Canada, and its great possibilities, it may not be uninteresting to give the experience of a woman settler, written to Mr. M. V. McInnes, the agent of the Government at Detroit, Mich. If the reader wishes to get further information regarding Western Canada it may be obtained by writing any of the agents of the Government whose name is attached to the advertisement appearing elsewhere in this paper.

Hilldown, Alberta, Feb'y. 5, 1903.

Dear Sir:

I have been here now nearly five years, and thought I would write you a woman's impression of Western Canada—in Alberta. There are several ranchers in this district who, in addition to taking care of their cattle, carry on farming as well. Their herds of cattle number from 100 to 200 or 300 heads, and live out all winter without any shelter than the poplar bluffs and they come in in the spring in good order. Most of the ranchers feed their cattle part of the time, about this time of the year, but I have seen the finest fat cattle I ever saw that never got a peck of grain—only fattened on the grass. You see I have learned to talk farm since I came here—farming is the great business here. I know several in this district who never worked a day on the farm, till they came here, and have done well and are getting well off.

I think this will be the garden of the Northwest some day, and that day not very far distant. There has been a great change since we came here, and there will be a greater change in the next five years. The winters are all anyone could wish for. We have very little snow, and the climate is fine and healthy. Last summer was wet, but not to an extent to damage crops, which were a large average yield, and the hay was immense—and farmers wore a broad smile accordingly.

We have good schools, the Government pays 70 per cent. of the expense of education, which is a great boon in a new country. Of course, churches of different denominations follow the settlements. Summer picnics and winter concerts are all well attended, and as much, or more, enjoyed as in the East. Who would not prefer the pure air of this climate with its broad acres of fine farms, its rippling streams, its beautiful lakes, its millions of wild flowers, its groves of wild fruit of exquisite flavor, its streams and lakes teeming with fish and its prairies and bluffs with game, to the crowded and stiff state of society in the East. I would like to go home for a visit sometime, but not to go there to live, even if presented with the best farm in Michigan. Beautiful Alberta, I will never leave it. And my verdict is only a repetition of all who have settled in this country. This year, I believe, will add many thousands to our population. And if the young men and old men also, knew how easy they could make a home free of all incumbrance in this country, thousands more would have settled here. I would sooner have 160 acres here than any farm where I came from in Michigan; but the people in the East are coming to a knowledge of this country, and as they do, they will come West in thousands. All winter, people have been arriving in Alberta, and I suppose in other parts as well, which is unusual, so we expect a great rush when the weather gets warmer.

We have no coal famine here, coal can be bought in the towns for $2 to $3, according to distance from the mines, and many haul their own coal from the mines—getting it there for 50 cents to a dollar a ton.

Very truly yours,

(Signed) Mrs. John McLachlan.

It has been specially decorated and equipped for the trip. It consists of six cars, manned by a picked crew with Conductor William H. Chicago, April 3.—President Roosevelt's 60-day tour of the west began in earnest here Thursday when he stepped from the Pennsylvania special at 8:45 o'clock and was received by Mayor Harrison and a special reception committee. The program prepared for the president's 15-hour stay in this city was repeated to him by Charles S. Deneen, chairman of the reception committee. The program was for an immediate run to Evanston, 17 miles to the northward, and a brief address there to the students of the Northwestern university; luncheon at 12:30 at the Auditorium annex; a trip in the afternoon to the University of Chicago, where the president received the degree of LL. D.; a banquet at 6:30 at the Auditorium, he being the guest of 110 citizens, and a meeting in the evening, at which the president delivered one of the most significant addresses of his tour on "The Monroe doctrine."

Milwaukee, Wis., April 4.—President Roosevelt Friday visited the soldiers' home. After leaving the institution he was driven to the exposition building where the president was welcomed on behalf of the city. Ten thousand people greeted the chief magistrate.

Next the presidential party was driven to the Deutscher club, where a reception was tendered. Later they went to the Milwaukee Press club, where a half hour was spent. During the president's stay he inscribed his autograph in chalk on one of the panels of the wainscoting where are inscribed the names of many other noted men. On this occasion, too, the president was presented with a beautiful certificate of honorary membership in the Milwaukee Press club.

President Roosevelt Friday night was the guest of the Milwaukee Merchants' and Manufacturers' association at a banquet at the Plankinton house.

Sioux Falls, S. D., April 6.—President Roosevelt was the guest of Sioux Falls Sunday and remained so until Monday morning. His special train arrived Sunday morning, and he was met by a delegation headed by Mayor G. W. Burnale and State Senator A. H. Stitts. Senator Kittredge also greeted him. The president was escorted to the Cataract house by detachments of two militia companies and enjoyed a day of comparative rest.

He attended church in the morning and in the evening. During the afternoon he went for a horse-back ride, accompanied by Seth Bullock, superintendent of the Black Hills Forest reserves.

A pickpocket tried to work among the persons gathered in front of the Lutheran church Sunday morning, just as the president was about to enter the edifice a man, who gave the name of G. W. Earl, abstracted $23 from the pocket of A. Dockstader. Earl was detected, but before he could be seized he handed the money to a confederate, who disappeared. Earl was arrested.

San Francisco, April 6.—In the Yosemite valley, President Roosevelt will be given a salute by a battery of dynamite cartridges. The walls of the valley are 3,000 feet high, and the report of a toy pistol within them reverberates like a series of volleys by heavy artilery. An enormous bonfire will be built on the overhanging rock of Glacier Point. The great mass of fire will be thrown over the side of the projecting rocks to the bottom of the valley, 3,000 feet below.

Business Failures.

THE ASIATIC SQUADRON.

It Will Be Increased By Vessels That Are on the Way.

Washington, April 6.—The United States naval representation in the Orient will be increased materially as soon as the vessels now under orders to proceed to those waters arrive there. The navy department in making this increase contemplates squadrons in Asiatic and Philippine waters under three general heads, viz.: vessels of the line of battle, made up of the battleships Kentucky, Oregon and Wisconsin, and the monitors Monterey and Monadnock, all of which are now there except the Wisconsin, which sails from Puget sound about May 1; second, the cruisers' squadron, made up of the New Orleans, which is already on the Asiatic station, and the Raleigh, now in the Caribbean sea, and the Albany and the Cincinnati; and the third squadron made up of gunboats and small craft designed especially for service in the smaller bodies of water where the larger ships because of their draft are unable to go. The idea of the three squadron formation is a favorite one with many naval officers, who, to some extent, have arrayed its counterpart with the vessels of the Atlantic fleet.

It is said here that the change in the character of the Asiatic squadron is due primarily to what naval experts consider the proper division of our navy and was decided on some time ago. It also is felt to be a good precautionary measure to have a strong representation in the far east ready for service should the occasion unexpectedly arise.

Peking, April 6.—The report received here that the action of the United States in increasing her Asiatic squadron is on account of "Alarming reports on the situation in China" excites surprise in Peking. Such reports were not sent by the United States or British legations which possess good facilities for judging the situation in China. The only disturbances considered serious are those in the Kwang Si province, the southern province of China bordering Tonkin, where 100,000 rebels are said to be under arms, which were never directed against foreigners. The latest reports regarding Gen. Tung Fuh Siang, the "Boxer" leader, and Prince Tuan, the exiled anti-foreigner, who are at the head of the insurgent forces in the northwestern province of Kansu are reassuring. The government claims to have come to an understanding with them whereby they agree to refrain from hostilities. It is believed that the government is supplying them with funds on condition that they remain quiet.

The officials promise the foreign ministers that the indemnity bonds will soon be signed. The officials apparently have concluded that it will be impossible to obtain any concessions in the terms of the indemnity until that formality is fulfilled.

The United States consul at Canton telegraphs that the famine in the Kwangsi province, resulting from the rebellion there, is serious. Thousands will die unless assistance is forthcoming. He recommends that relief funds be started abroad.

The Enlisted Men Will Be Given a Net Leave of Ten Days.

Washington, April 6.—The enlisted men of the ships of the battleship squadron are to be given a net leave of ten days when the vessels are docked for repairs in about a month and a half. This squadron is made up of the Kearsarge, Alabama, Illinois, Massachusetts, Indiana and Iowa. The men on the Maine also will be given similar leave. When the vessels of the squadron reach the month of Chesapeake bay from the south, where they have been during the winter, they are to be reviewed by Adm. Dewey and Rr. Adm. Taylor, the chief of the bureau of navigation, after which most of them will proceed to the Northern navy yards for docking and repairs.

REVOLT OF REPUBLICANS.

Grosvenor of Ohio and His Get-Rich-Quick Schemes Creating Discord in the State.

The majority of the people of the Eleventh congressional district of Ohio have for the past 16 years looked upon Gen. Grosvenor as one of the great lights in their political firmament. He has succeeded in placing on the pension rolls the relatives and friends of all the leading local republicans and has succeeded in forcing more of his constituents into federal offices than perhaps any other congressman. They point to him with pride as the man who gets there. That is the class of statesman the Ohio republicans are proud of, for political graft is the highest ambition of most of them, and Grosvenor fills the bill. His vote for ship subsidies and protection and other propositions that the robber trusts are continually demanding of congress are looked upon as further marks of his political genius. The "leading citizens" of Grosvenor's district no doubt argue that they get their share of the swag that the trusts furnish to run campaigns and thus see that the vote of their representative is really in their interest, if the balance of the people do suffer by trust exactions.

There are, however, a good many old-fashioned voters even in the Grosvenor district that have not bowed the knee to Baal and still believe that common honesty is necessary to good government; these people of course have not belonged to the Grosvenor gang. The developments of the last month or two of the Grosvenor way of doing business must have confirmed these old-fashioned people in their opposition to the popular idol. The exposure by the New York Post of the way Grosvenor and his pals had made the trust magnates come down in the book-subscription business has been now followed by another exposure of even a more serious scandal. The local newspapers have taken the matter up and describe how Count von Muegge, the degenerate son of a German nobleman, was disowned and disinherited and sent to America. He was promised by his father that if he succeeded in obtaining and holding a government position in this country, it would be taken as proof that he had turned over a new leaf. After a long time without succeeding, his case was brought to the attention of Gen. Grosvenor and the latter had him appointed United States marshal for that district. In return for this appointment Von Muegge, it is said, has promised to pay Grosvenor a large sum as soon as his father consents to take him back. Grosvenor has just had Von Muegge reappointed for four years more, in spite of the protests of the citizens of Chillicothe, for he has by no means endeared himself to that municipality during his residence there. The Chillicothe newspapers are again calling attention, says the Times-Star, to the bargain which Von Muegge made with Grosvenor, and by the terms of which he has managed to stick in the United States. All this makes an object lesson of the kind of representative a strong republican district will sent to congress if he is only audacious enough, and able to "shake the plum tree" often enough, all of which Grosvenor is to perfection.

POINTS AND OPINIONS.

——The Fifty-seventh congress appropriated $1,554,108,514.48, not because there was any need of appropriating that much, but because it was a republican congress.—The Commoner.

——Well, congress is all through and the trusts have not suffered from legislation enacted by that republican body. They are all doing business at the old stand, unmolested and not afraid.—St. Paul Globe.

——A Massachusetts democrat is under arrest, charged with perjury for swearing in his vote at a republican primary. The charge should be changed to lack of self-respect.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

——The republicans who favored loaning government money to banks on any old kind of bonds are the same men who denounced the populist idea of loaning money on non-perishable products raised by the farmers.—The Commoner.

KNOCKED OUT BEEF COMBINE.

An Illustration of the Difference Between Democrats and Republicans in Fighting Trusts.

There is a great difference between republican and democratic trust busting. President Roosevelt and his attorney general have been for over a year trying to bring the beef trust to time, but so far all that has been accomplished is the granting of a temporary injunction to restrain the members of the combine from organizing to control prices. It is needless to say this proceeding has had no effect in curbing the rapacity of the beef trust and the members continue to bid their own price for stock. The democratic trust-busters have been more expeditious, for the attorney general of the state of Missouri has forced the fight against the beef combine and obtained judgment against them in the highest court of the state.

The dispatch which contains the information says: The principal members of the beef combine, the Armour, the Cudahy, the Swift, the Hammond and the Schwarzchild and Sulzberger packing companies were fined $5,000 each in the Missouri supreme court on March 20 and ordered to pay the costs of the cases which amounted to $3,000. Unless the fines and costs are paid within 30 days the defendants will be ousted from the state.

"WRIGHT OR WRONG."

Wright—"My dear man, your real wages are 80 per cent. higher now than they were in 1860. You never saw such prosperity before."

Carpenter—"Well, I'll be darned. How surprised my wife will be when I tell her."

STATE ITEMS OF INTEREST.

DOOMED TO DIE.

J. W. Bess Laughed as He Heard the Verdict Announced.

Lexington, Ky., April 2.—J. W. Bess has been convicted of the murder of his paramour, Mrs. Martha Martin, and his punishment fixed at death. The case was given into the hands of the jury at 7 o'clock Wednesday night, and the verdict was read in court at 9:12 o'clock. The closing scenes of the trial were one sensation after another, in that the culprit fell into a trap that had been laid for him by the prosecution, and he was practically convicted on his own testimony.

While the jury was deliberating the prisoner sat in the courtroom with his son and some intimate friends. With these he talked and laughed incessantly, as if enjoying the situation. When the verdict was read a smile crossed his face, and when told by his counsel not to worry, as they would do all they could to save him, he replied laughingly, and in a tone of voice loud enough to be heard all over the courtroom: "That verdict don't worry me. I am an innocent man, and you can bet I'll sleep as sound to-night as any of you will."

THE BUILDING COLLAPSED.

Two Negroes Killed, Two Seriously and Others Slightly Hurt.

Louisville, Ky., April 3.—Two Negroes were killed, two seriously hurt and nine slightly injured by falling walls in a brick tenement house at 313 Lafayette street Thursday morning.

The collapse caught the inmates asleep in their beds. John Vaughn, colored, was the first to reach the scene. Fannie Taylor, one of the dead women, was found moaning for help. When Vaughn with the assistance of Columbus Ferguson, made their way to her, she begged piteously that her old mother be helped first. Mandy Taylor, the mother, was found lying in bed, and was the first one taken out. As the old woman was lifted through a window the daughter raised herself sufficiently to say a word of thanks to the rescuers and fell back dead.

The Contract Price Was Less Than Was Authorized.

Russellville, Ky., April 2.—The contract for the new courthouse was Wednesday finally let to Robert P. Manley, of Atlanta, Ga., at $38,000. The court had authorized $40,500. The contractor, by bond, guarantees that the house will be completed by January 1, 1904. The new structure is to be of Logan county stone, heated with [illegible] lighted with electricity [illegible] to be perfectly fire-proof. There will be an office for each county official, including spacious vaults for the records.

The old courthouse was sold at auction to Contractor Manley for $220, Mr. Manley agreeing to remove it before April 20. Work will begin Saturday on the new building.

NO TRACES OF ARSENIC.

Mercury, However, Was Found in the Alleged Poisoning Case.

Lexington, Ky., April 4.—An incomplete analysis of the stomach of Mrs. Wilson, who died from the effects of poison in Olive Hill, Ky., and which was made Friday by Prof. M. A. Scoville, of the Kentucky state college, has failed to reveal the slightest trace of arsenic. Small quantities of mercury have been found, but the analysis does not show whether this was administered at one time or in intermittent doses. Further tests will be applied.

Dr. J. W. Strother, of Olive Hill, who brought the stomach here Thursday, suggested that the traces of mercury found might have come from taking doses of calomel.

A LIVELY ENCOUNTER.

Owensboro, Ky., April 4.—News has just reached the city of a fight between an officer and his prisoner at Horse Branch. Marshal Alford had arrested Levi Allen, who was drunk, and was taking him to jail. The prisoner drew a knife and stabbed the marshal in the breast. When Alford found that he was wounded he pushed Allen from him and fired two shops at him. One took effect in the neck and the other in the abdomen. Allen fell to the ground and was carried to a near-by house. The wounds were pronounced dangerous by the physician.

The fusion campaign in Cincinnati was all wind.

THE fiscal court was in session yesterday, and disposed of considerable business.

THE candidates are very busy preparing for the grand round-up on the ninth of may.

FOR Secretary of State McChesney has a clear field. Harry Tandy, his only opponent, withdrew last week.

CHICAGO people gave President Roosevelt a tremendous ovation upon the occasion of his visit there last week.

TEN thousand miners are idle in the Indiana bituminous field waiting for operators and committee to agree on wages.

HENDRICK and Breckinridge are still contending that Beckham is not eligible to the office of Governor. The court of appeals was silent on that point.

THE Carrollton News suggests that the county committeemen go down into their pockets and pay the officials of the State primary, if they want it held free of cost to the candidates.

Fiscal Courts in about seventy-five counties in Kentucky will be asked in the next thirty days to make reasonable appropriations to assist in giving Kentucky a creditable exhibit at the World's Fair next year in St. Louis.

ONE hundred and sixty importers, wholesalers and retailers of tea throughout the United States have united to form the National Tea Association, with the avowed purpose of preventing the importation of impure teas into this country.

It must be said of Jack Chinn that he exercises good judgment in his contemplated personal encounter. He always picks a man in whom there is not much fight, and tackles him at a place where if he should display any inclination to call Jack's bluff, there are those who will interfere and prevent a collision.

THE third trial of James B. Howard for the murder of Gov. Goebel will be called in the Franklin Circuit Court this week. It is said that Henry Youtsey will testify for the prosecution in the case. Howard was first sentenced to hang and at the second trial was given a life term in the penitentiary. Howard's attorneys will ask for a change of venue.

THE Grange Bulletin says: "The business feature of the Grange is assuming proportions, and the Patrons of Boone county should come together in the next Pomona meeting prepared to decide upon a plan of action, that will prove to the members—and those who are without—that the Grange is for the help of the farmer, socially, morally, mentally, and financially."

State bonds to the amount of $973,050 were destroyed by burning at Frankfort last week. These bonds had been redeemed with a portion of the funds recently collected from the Federal government on the State's old war claim. This leaves Kentucky's bonded indebtedness only $48,000, and this will be wiped out as soon as the bonds can be secured.

SENSATIONAL charges as to the conduct of General Wood while he was on duty in Cuba were recently brought by Estes G. Rathbone, who will be remembered for his connection with the Cuba postal frauds. When the matter was brought to the attention of the war department, Secretary Root refused to take any action on the charges, which he declares are without foundation.

BEN WATT.

(Candidate for Superintendent of Public Instruction.)

The above is said to be a good likeness of one of the most popular candidates now before the Democrats of Kentucky, and unless many favorable signs fail he will be one of the winners in the May primary.

Mr. Watt is about thirty-five years of age and an experienced teacher, for years the Superintendent of his County Schools, and their present high state of prosperity and efficiency is greatly owing to his energy and faithfulness in that office.

During the last year he has visited and addressed many of the County Teachers' Institutes, and in every instance won golden opinions and enlisted many sincere and active supporters among the class of people having the most intimate and direct interest in the prompt and efficient management of the affairs of the office of Superintendent. The teachers, wherever they know him, are said to be for him.

He is at present the efficient First Assistant State Superintendent under appointment by Hon. H. V. McChesney, and is therefore thoroughly informed as to the duties and requirements of the office he seeks. He was the first candidate to announce for this office and has been making an active and growing canvass ever since, and has the advantage here of a good local organization in the county, and his friends think his prospects flattering.

THE editor of the Recorder is in receipt of an official invitation to the celebration of the Louisiana Purchase centennial, to be held at the World's Fair grounds April 30th. The invitation is in the form of a souvenir and is a beautiful piece of engraving. It bears the facsimile of Ex-Gov. David R. Francis, who is president of the World's Fair and is a native of Kentucky.

URGENT appeals have been made to the war department on behalf of the Eskimo and Indian inhabitants of northern Alaska, who are represented to be in an extremely destitute condition as a consequence of the strict enforcement of the laws prohibiting the taking or killing of fur-bearing animals in that territory. Instructions have been sent to the department commander to investigate the situation and in his discretion to distribute rations in cases of emergency.

The government is engaged in the purchase of silver bullion to be used in coining pesos under the Philippine coinage act to the amount of $2,000,000 worth. This amount of bullion will produce 5,000,000 pesos which are to be delivered in the Philippine islands within four months. It is also announced that arrangements have been completed for the issue of the Philippine certificates, which will bear the portrait of Washington. A suggestion has been made that the small notes for the Philippines shall bear the protraits of McKinley, General Lawton and Jose Rizal.

JACK CHINN visited Cincinnati last week, accompanied by his brace of magazine pistols and a vicious bowie knife. He had not been in the city long when he met Theodore Hallam, whom he would have used up badly had bystanders not interrupted the conflict. The next scene was in Chinn's room at the Gibson House, where a couple of constables called to levy on Chinn's personal effects for a debt he owed a Cincinnati firm. The officers were routed but they carried away with them one of Chinn's pieces of artillery. Chinn is determined to sustain his reputation as a terror.

Mayor Fleschman was reelected mayor of Cincinnati, last Monday, over M. E. Ingalls, the fusion candidate by about 17,000 votes. Tom Johnson won out in Cleveland by between 8,000 and 10,000.

SENATOR HANNA was unable to land Cleveland in the Republican column, last Monday, although he believed himself able to turn the trick.

JOSH GRIFFITH.

The above is a picture of Josh Griffith, candidate for the Democratic nomination for State Treasurer. He has made a very active canvass, and feels certain of success. He was in town Monday, and made a good impression on the Democratic voters.

UNDER a revision of the civil service rules to take effect April 15th, the classified service is extended to all positions which are subjected to classification under the civil service act. The number of places excepted from examination has been extended omitting a large number of private secretaries and confidential clerks, although two private secretaries are allowed to all heads of departments.

HON. W. B. HAWKINS

COMMISSIONER OF AGRICULTURE—The name implies a man to further the interest of the farmer and agriculturist, and one who knows his needs and will devote his time. He should be a man who is a practical farmer, and one of the sons of toil whom the farmer delights to honor—"One of us" It gives me pleasure to say that in my opinion we have such a man in the aspirant for the place, Capt. T. T. Hedger of Scott county, a man whose heart and soul is in sympathy with every movement to better his fellow farmers. A tobacco grower, he is one of the first men to enlist himself in the cause of the tobacco growers of his State, a man conversant with the needs of the agriculturist and one in whom the farmers can place implicit confidence and feel assured that if elected their welfare will not suffer.

Crop and Stock.

Two quarts of seed potatoes were kept by one of our Minnesota readers on a shelf in the kitchen, where they could get the light from end window and the heat and moisture of the room April 1 to May 8, when they had made sprouts four to six inches, stocky and green, and roots one or two inches long. They were cut to two eyes and carefully set eighteen inches apart in rows. Commenced using July 7 and had four quarts per day until October. All large, smooth and mealy.—American Cultivator.

Never have plants of the same kind, or even of the same family follow on the same land. Beans should not follow peas nor melons come after pumpkins. A plant that produces above the ground, such as cabbage, should be followed by root crops, such as potatoes, beets, turnips or carrots. Clover, however, being entirely distinct from grain, may be followed by wheat, oats or corn, and potatoes or turnips may follow grain. The seed of clover is really a small bean, hence it is of no advantage to follow clover with beans or peas, all being legumes. There are no "fixed" rules, as the fertility of the soil and the climate are to be considered. Some farmers by the liberal use of manure and fertilizer, grow the same crops on the same land every year, but it is not safe to do so except under favorable conditions.

So long as the trusts are allowed to cut, shuffle and deal they will continue to win out in this country.

The Burlington Dramatic Club appeared before a large and appreciative audience at the court house again last Saturday night. The first play, "Diamonds and Hearts," was fairly well presented, four or five of the characters being represented in almost a faultless manner. This play was followed by "Topsy Turvey or the Courtship of a Deacon," "Topsy Turvey and Dutch Jake," are the best plays the club presented and will entertain an audience from the raising of the curtain until the conclusion of the last act.

Mrs. Sarah Jane Dickey, wife of Fielding Dickey, died at their home near Kensington, this county, on Saturday the 4th inst, after many months' illness. She was born at the old Kennedy homstead on the Lexington 'pike, 79 years ago last October. She and Fielding were united in marriage before either was of age, and enjoyed a long, happy and prosperous married life. To them were born eight children, two of whom died in infancy, and the third, Fielding, jr., not long since. Mrs. Dickey had been a member of the Presbytersan church for many years, and was a consistent christian lady. She was a daughter of Thos. and Nancy Kennedy, and a granddaughter of Joseph Kennedy, who served with distinction in the war of 1812. Her great grandfather, Thomas Kennedy, was a Covington pioneer, and the stone manson which he built more than one hundred years ago is yet a landmark on Garrad street.

HORATIO.'

Mrs. Whitney waited a reasonable period, then spoke [illegible] degree louder.

"Horatio!"

"Why! why, yes, Martha, did you speak?"

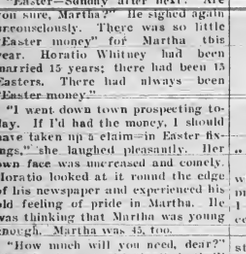
"I did. I believe you're getting hard of hearing, Horatio. I suppose it's nothing but what we can expect. Your father was deaf, and your grandfather before him."

"Oh, but, Martha, they were old. I'm not old." Horatio Whitney's care-worn face was eager and wistful. It seemed to be struggling to put on its rightful mask of youth—a man at 45 is not old—but to be painfully conscious that it no longer fitted. Almost at once it settled back to its lines of care. With a sigh Horatio Whitney gave up his youth.

"Maybe I am old," he said, quietly. "Well, I'm not!" laughed his wife. "When I'm old, I won't ask you for my Easter money. I suppose you know Sunday after next is Easter, Horatio?"

"Easter—Sunday after next? Are you sure, Martha?" He sighed again unconsciously. There was so little "Easter money" for Martha this year. Horatio Whitney had been married 15 years; there had been 15 Easters. There had always been "Easter money."

"I went down town prospecting to-day. If I'd had the money, I should have taken up a claim—in Easter fixings," she laughed pleasantly. Her own face was unpleasant and comely. Horatio looked at it round the edge of his newspaper and experienced his old feeling of pride in Martha. He was thinking that Martha was young enough. Martha was 45, too.



"How much will you need, dear?" The "dear" went with the little thrill of admiration.

"Merey, Horatio, as if you didn't know how much it always takes! Easter bonnets don't vary much from one year to another. The market is always 'firm!' You've always given me $20; that includes gloves and what-nots, of course."

"Would—er—fifteen do, do you think?" hesitatingly. The difference between $20 and $15 took on preposterous value to-night. Horatio Whitney was a little more tired than usual. The care lines were deeper in his plain face.

Mrs. Whitney dropped her work into her lap and peered round the drop-lamp at her husband. Horatio might be growing old and deaf, but she did not like to think he was growing stingy. Fifteen?—why, she had always had to stretch the $20!

"You need not give me any, Horatio," she said, stiffly. "I'll stay at home Easter Sunday and look through the slats at other people's Easter bonnets. If you imagine I am going up the broad aisle of Canaan church in my last year's bonnet, you are laboring under a delusion. It would be bad enough if our pew was behind, but when it's the third from the front—!" She gathered up her sewing and set swift, perturbed stitches in the soft stuff. Horatio was conscious that she looked even prettier with that red tinge in her cheeks. On the instant he put aside anxious thoughts of unpaid bills and bills to come. Martha must have her "Easter money." He took it out of his worn old pocket-book, and moistened his finger-tip to count it and make sure it was all there.

"Sixteen — two's eighteen — two's twenty, dear, I'm sorry the bills ain't all clean—I know you like 'em better that way—"

"Don't worry about their being clean!" she laughed. The stiffness was all gone from her voice. "I guess Mme. Jacque will be willing to take them in exchange for a bonnet. Oh, Horatio, you must see that little beauty in the window! It's the one I mean to get—the one on the left of the window, as you look in from the outside. It has apple-blossom buds on it—you know you always liked apple-blossom buds, Horatio!" She nodded across to him archly and her full face reminded him of the Martha's of 15 years ago. He conjured up that other beautiful little bonnet with apple-blossom buds in it, and set it on her smooth brown hair—Martha had not grown gray at all.

"That one was beautiful," he smiled.

"Well, this one is. I shouldn't wonder if it made me look 10 years younger!" she laughed. "But I don't want to decide on it till you see it. You always did have excellent taste in bonnets, dear." She fell into the "dear" naturally enough, as if the soft halo of 15 years ago were over her, too. She had always called him "dear," then how many years was it she had called him Horatio?

"I wish you'd go to the office through Jermyn street to-morrow morning—no, I'll go with you. That will be better. You can pass judgment on the little gem bonnet, and I shall go in and buy it!—for I'm certain you'll like it."

They had not walked through the streets together for a good while—not even to church. Horatio Whitney was keenly sensitive to the fact that his overcoat and hat were shabby. He did not care to remember how long it was since he had bought new ones, and he did not want Martha to remember. So he stayed at home quietly, and grew a little grayer and a little older every day.

So he had stayed at home Sunday after Sunday. He was always tired; it was a good enough excuse. Martha gave up urging him after awhile.

The next morning Martha walked down town with Horatio, through Jermyn street. It was a beautiful day.

Down the street a little way progress was temporarily blocked, and Horatio and Martha came to a standstill. A heavy dray was being backed across the sidewalk.

They were abreast of a splendid plate-glass show-window, and Martha turned to it for entertainment. What woman was ever at loss for amusement with a show-window at her elbow? But this one—Martha turned away a little disgusted. It was only a men's furnishing store.

The drayman took his time. Martha was driven back to the window in self-defense, and it was this time that she saw the coat that reminded her. A little thrill ran over her, for it was the exact shade—the soft, deep gray—of that other coat. It was not distinguishably different, either, in style—queer that 15 years should make so little change!

Martha glanced at Horatio's shabby overcoat. The pitiless sun gave it no quarter. She saw all its fadedness and meanness, and the listless, dejected sag of it. It gave her a start of surprise that she had not noticed it before. She scarcely ever noticed Horatio's clothes. They were always a whole—Horatio had always been "easy" on his things. There was rarely anything to mend.

But now—the contrast between the spruce, new coats in the window and Horatio's coat! Between the sleek hats set jauntily on the staring painted heads of the window-dummies and the faded, worn one planted squarely on Horatio's gray hair! Martha's heart misgave her at the contrast. She did not want to look, but looked on steadily.

Horatio was looking at the dray-man. His bent shabby shoulders were "back to" the great window. Horatio never looked in show windows.

It was Horatio's voice in her ear and Martha started with an odd sense of confusion and guilt. She went on down the street trying to joke herself at ease again, but her thoughts ran on persistently in a perturbed undercurrent. The gray overcoat that had reminded her—she could not get it out of her sight. Gray had been so becoming to Horatio 15 years ago—Martha had chosen that color herself for his "wedding overcoat." And she had had apple-buds in her wedding bonnet because pink and gray were so beautiful together.

Martha roused herself at madame's. "There," she cried, "that little beauty on the extreme left—don't tell me you don't like it!" She was laughing a trifle breathlessly. Her eyes were on his face.

"Isn't it a little gem, Horatio?"

"Yes, oh, yes, Martha, I like it," he said, warmly. "You go right in and buy it. Don't you wait, or somebody else will get in ahead. The posies on it are beautiful. Martha, it reminds me!"

After a little he went on alone, down the street.

Easter Sunday dawned clear and perfect. Martha woke to the trill of Easter carols outside her window. A myriad of little birds seemed vying with each other to celebrate His rising. The jubilant chorus filled all the air.

"I'm thankful it's pleasant," thought Martha. "I want it to be pleasant to-day." She went about [illegible] duties [illegible] heart. At breakfast she chattered like a girl.

"Horatio, you're going to church with me to-day—I thought you might like to know!"

"No, no, Martha," he said, hastily. "I guess I won't go to-day—not to-day."

"I said you were going!" she laughed. "Didn't you promise to love, honor and obey 15 years ago? I'm through marching off to church alone every Sunday morning."

"But I'm tired, Martha. I'm going to stay at home and get rested up for to-morrow."

"Yes, I know—I guess I'm always tired, Martha."

"Then you must go to church and rest. Horatio Whitney, do you know how long ago it was that you went to church with me?"

"No, I don't. Don't reckon, Martha."

"Well, I won't if you'll turn over a new leaf to-day. I've set my heart on your going to meeting with me, dear."

He flushed painfully. Martha was making it very hard. If she hadn't said "dear!"

"But I—I can't, Martha. I'd like to if I could."

"Say: 'But I can, dear'—say it, Horatio!" She was round on his side of the table, with her hand on his arm. "Come upstairs and get ready. We don't want to be late on Easter. I've got your things all out on the bed."

"I—I haven't any things, Martha. You mustn't ask me—I can't go."

"Well, I've got my things all out on the bed, then. I want you to come up and see my things, dear. Come!"

He could not resist her. She was like the old girl Martha—persistent and irresistible. He yielded weakly and followed her up the stairs. The Easter things were spread out on the bed. Horatio Whitney uttered a queer sound at the sight of them.

"Martha!"

"Well, don't you like them? Don't you like my Easter bonnet, dear? I like it better than any I ever had before, all the Easters of my life. Now I will try it on and let you see how becoming it is."

She set the soft gray felt hat on his head and whirled him round to the mirror. Then she threw the handsome gray overcoat across his shoulders and laid the gloves against his sleeve.

"See how they match!" she cried. "And they all match you. You great stupid boy, to stand there as if you didn't recognize yourself!"

"I don't," he gasped. Suddenly he faced about. "But, Martha—"

"Say 'dear.'"

"But, dear, I don't understand. You were going to get the one with apple-blossom buds on it—"

"What do you call that?" She had caught up a little thing in lace and flowers from the table, and was whirling it round on her fingers before his astonished eyes. "Aren't those apple-blossom buds? Can't you smell 'em? You ought to, for they're the very ones you declared you could smell 15 years ago! The very ones, Horatio! I got out the little old bonnet, and there were the flowers as fresh as ever—not withered at all! Snip, snip—I had cut them off and there they were on my Easter bonnet! Now, we'll go to church, dear."

He walked along the sunny street beside her as if in a pleasant dream. Unconsciously, he held himself straight and walked briskly.

They seemed to get ahead of everybody. Once Martha gave him a little push.

"Go on ahead a little way," she whispered, "there's no one now to notice, and I want to look at you as a whole!"

When she caught up with him, she squeezed his arm gently. "You look handsome, Horatio Whitney—don't tell me you don't! Now tell me I look handsome."

"Martha, Martha—dear—you look good enough to eat!" It was a homely compliment, but it suited Martha. They went on together through the sweet Easter sunshine. At the church door she stopped him.

"Wait! We're going to walk up the broad aisle slowly, Horatio—don't you go to hurrying. I want the people to have plenty of time to see my new Easter things! Now, ready!"

The altar was heaped with Easter lilies, and their sweet breath filled the church. Martha drew in long whiffs of it.

"How good they smell, dear," she whispered. "Is there anything sweeter than Easter lilies?"

He smiled down at her. Martha was short and plump, and he was tall to-day.

"I don't smell any Easter lilies," he said; "I don't smell anything but apple blossoms."—Country Gentleman

The humor of the remark will be apparent when it is remembered that James Gibbons is but a year older than Joachim Pecci was when he was elected pope.

Kaid Maclean, commander in chief of the Moorish army, draws the comfortable salary of $35,000 a year—quite a change from the time when, as lieutenant in the British army, his pay was less than $650 a year. As the sultan's right-hand man he has conducted many campaigns in the Sahara and is the only Christian who has openly crossed the Glania pass and visited the sacred tomb of Mulai Ali Sherref, in the Tafflet district. FOUND HIM OUT.

Thought He Had the Grocer Thrown Off the Track, But Was Mistaken.

"Mind, I was in a strange town dealing with a strange man, and I tried not to act strange, and still the fellow found me out," said the newly married man, according to the New York Times. "My intended wife and I had a sentiment about spending our wedding night in our own home. The honeymoon trip was not to begin till the following morning. That required laying in a stock of provisions for breakfast.

"On the morning of the wedding day I called at the nearest grocery store and ordered a supply. There was butter and salt and eggs and sugar and—well, everybody knows the string! Underwand, I did everything a bridegroom is not expected to do to throw the fellow off the track. I ordered things off-hand, not from a fool slip of paper, but from memory. I talked to the pretty cashier and ate an apple out of a barrel as if I had been born in the place, like the store cat. [illegible] I did, and thought I had the grocer completely fooled when, on handing me the packages, he said:

"'Well, sir, I hope you'll give us your trade when you get settled.'"

A Farmer's Good Story.

Velpen, Ind., April 6th:—Wm. O'B. Sullivan, a highly respected farmer of this place, tells a personal experience to show that there is still some genuineness and honest worth to be met with in this age in which so many frauds are reported.

"Yes, I have been humbugged," said Mr. Sullivan, "and when I was so ill with the Rheumatism, Kidney and Heart Trouble, I used a good deal of stuff that claimed to be remedies for these diseases only to find them worthless.

"But, as you know, I did find the genuine remedy after all and I had not been taking Dodd's Kidney Pills very long before I knew that they were an honest remedy that would do all and more than was claimed for them. They cured me, made a well man of me and I am now as sound as I ever was.

He'd Been to Market.

Arthur was one of the little unfortunate army of five year olds that lives on Fifth avenue, where he has everything to his heart's content except mud pies and things a boy's heart really craves. Not long ago one of Arthur's uncles bought a country seat on Long Island—barns, horses, cows, chickens, and other rural couveniences included. Recently Arthur was allowed to visit the "farm" and to inspect the same at his leisure. One of the first things he saw was a strange creature on two legs, with wings and a mania for scratching gravel.

"What's that thing?" he asked.

"That's a chicken," was explained.

"Oh, no," he said incredulously, "you can't fool me; that thing's got feathers on it."—N. Y. Times.

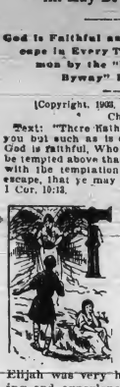
TEMPTED AND TESTED



None May Escape Temptation, But All May Be Victorious.

God Is Faithful and Sets Door of Escape in Every Temptation—Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

Chicago, April 5, 1903.

Text: "There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man: but God is faithful, Who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it."—1 Cor. 10:13.

HE prophet of God, unnerved and discouraged by his sense of loneliness, fled from Israel to Mount Horeb with the cry on his lips that all of the Lord's servants had been slain and that he alone was left. Elijah was very human in this feeling and experience. He felt utterly undone when he thought he stood alone. The human heart craves human sympathy and companionship, and when God assured him that there were seven thousand in Israel who stood with him in their loyalty to God he was comforted. Sometimes tempted and buffeted man feels such a sense of loneliness in his experiences that he imagines that he dwells apart in a world of misery all his own and that there are none who stand with him or can understand the peculiar nature of his trouble. But God comes when the soul is sick and discouraged and longing for death and whispers comfortingly: "Thou are not alone in thy experience, oh, soul, for 'there hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man.'" And then pointing to His victorious and glorified Son He goes on to say, "for ye have not an high priest which cannot be touched with a feeling of your infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as ye are, yet without sin."

It is true that misery likes company, but not misery to make its own misery more miserable, but companionship in suffering and temptation, which is reassuring and helpful because it is able to point the way out. The wife and children of Bunyan's Christian found not a little encouragement and comfort in the thought that the trials and difficulties which beset them on their journey to the celestial city were similar to those through which Christian had passed. It is comforting to know that other saints have traveled over the same pathway which our feet are treading, have stumbled over the same hard, rocky ground, have met with the same pitfalls and snares by the roadside, have been drawn off into the sam bypaths of alluring sins. We are glad that in the history of the human race which God has written for our contemplation He has included man's failures as well as his victories. And by the way, this is one of the sure evidences that God is the author of the Bible, for where man covers up and excuses God boldly tells the truth and points the moral. The hundred years which Noah faithfully spent in building the ark for the Lord were not sufficient to make God forget that once Noah got drunk. All the faithfulness and loyalty of David, "the man after God's own heart," could not stay the finger of God as he recorded the temptation, the sin, the evil consequences and the repentance of King David.

LET the empted soul turn to God's Word if it would dispel its sense of loneliness in its trying experience. Instead of walking in solitude it would hear the tread of other feet, it would feel the presence of other tried souls, it would see that the temptation against which its feet had stumbled bore the marks of other feet. It would learn that no temptation had overtaken it which was not common to man. Yea, it would learn more. It would find that the print of the Saviour's feet had pressed every inch of the way of the experiences of life, and that where the stumbling rocks, the pitfalls and the enticing bypaths of sin occurred, filling the pathway with danger, His strong, unfailing feet led safely around and over the perilous places.

When Columbus had pushed the prow of his boat across the unknown sea until the green shores of the new continent opened to his vision others were quick and bold to attempt the voyage, and soon the sea was filled with the westward moving ships. When Stanley penetrated the heart of Africa and at last emerged on the other side of the continent others were ready to follow, and the dark continent is fast filling with the white man's feet as he follows the pathway blazed by the intrepid explorer. When Jesus Christ journeyed over the pathway of life which was filled with the wrecks and failures of human life, He blazed a new way which avoided every pitfall of sin, every bypath, every stumbling block set by Satan, so that Paul could write for you and for me of God's faithfulness, and declare that God would not suffer us to be tempted above that we are able, but would with the temptation also make a way of escape.

HAVING positively assured the soul that it is not alone in the kind nor degree of temptation which assails it, Paul goes on to speak of the faithful God Who prevents the soul from being tested beyond its strength to bear, and Who sets a door of escape at the side of every temptation, which even the hand of Satan cannot close. A faithful God! Faithless man! God and His Son Jesus Christ alone have a right to be called faithful. The saint falls heir to the title as he lives the life of victory in Christ Jesus. A faithful God has done two things for the sinner: He has put a restraining hand upon Satan so that he has been unable throughout the centuries, since the tragedy in the garden when he gained the victory over man, to utterly destroy him, and He has made a way of escape in Christ Jesus so that the soul can pass from death in sin to life in Christ Jesus. A faithful God has done two things for the saint: He has placed bounds to Satan's power over him, and has fitted every temptation with a convenient door of escape. Satan with fiendish ingenuity devises manifold temptations which he places along the pathway of life to ensnare unwary feet, but God with skillful and omnipotent hand fits into every one of the temptations the door of escape.

IN THE heroic days of old when might was right and every man was a law unto himself, houses and castles were fitted with secret stairways and secret chambers and closets into which the persons whose lives were threatened might withdraw and escape the enemy. The doors of entrance to these hidden recesses were so skillfully and ingeniously placed that the eye could not detect their presence without the closest and most careful scrutiny, and then the door would not open until the hidden spring was pressed. This may serve to illustrate the truth in regard to temptation which is presented to us in our text. Temptation may be likened unto a beautiful palace which Satan with ready hand rears and into which he may entice the souls of the saints. Satan learned long, long ago how to gild his wares with tinsel and make them look like real gold; he found out away back in Eden that man would take his bitter doses of sin if the pellets were sugar-coated. And so he embellishes his temptations with an outside appearance of beauty and wholesomeness. He depends altogether upon outside appearances. The palace of temptation is a place that appears goodly to the eye and gives every outward token of being full of comfort and pleasure and unending satisfaction. It is into this place that Satan draws the soul, and if he can prevent that soul from looking for the door of escape and touching the spring which will open it, he will trip that soul up every time.

Every temptation known to man has, according to the plain declaration of our text, its door of escape, so let us consider that point settled and devote our effort to learning where to look for the hidden door and how to touch the spring which controls its opening. God has so contrived that the door of escape shall always be on the side of hardest pressure. That is, the direction from which the temptation presses on the soul the strongest will be found to be the exact point at which God has skillfully hung His little door. Take for illustration of this point the temptations of Jesus in the wilderness, which cover the whole possible range of human temptation from the lust of the flesh, through the lust of the eye, to that of the pride of life.

JESUS fasted forty days and forty nights and was afterward an hungered. Satan suggested that inasmuch as He was famishing for food that He test His power as the Son of God by making the stones at His feet bread and eating thereof. And it was right at that point that Jesus found the door of escape, for He replied: "It is written, Man shall not live by bread alone but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." Again the Devil taketh Him up into the holy city and setteth Him on a pinnacle of the temple and suggested a miraculous way of His presenting Himself to the Jews as their Messiah. Surely if He cast Himself into their midst from the dizzy height where He stood they would believe on Him and receive Him. And it was at this point that the way of escape was discovered, for He said: "It is written again, thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God," for presumption is never faith. "Again the Devil taketh Him up into an exceeding high mountain and showeth Him all the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them, and saith unto Him, All of these will I give thee if thou will fall down and worship me." And again Jesus found that His Father had placed the door of escape at exactly the place where the temptation pressed the hardest, and He said: "Get thee hence, Satan: for it is written, thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and Him only shalt thou serve."

The soul that is tempted must look straight ahead in faith, if he would find the door of escape. The soul that begins to waver to the right hand or the left, or who turns his back to flee, will find himself stretched at the feet of Satan as he trips upon the temptation which has assailed him. Is it some temptation which is appealing to you through the varied avenues of the lust of the flesh? Then do not try to deny the fact that the senses and appetites are appealing for gratification, do not try to cry them down and hold them by main force. If you do you will surely fall in an unguarded moment. But face the temptation squarely, admit that the flesh is crying out for gratification of its desires, and then declare that perfect gratification and feeding can only be found in God, and the door of escape will open for you and let you into the presence of Him Who can feed you on Heavenly manna and thrill your senses with the joy and sweet peace which pass understanding.

IS IT temptation through the lust of the eye? Are the things of the world, its beauties, its attractions, so pressing and crowding upon you for attention that you are forgetting all else? Do not shut your eyes and try to keep out the vision. Admit the beauties of all you behold, but bravely declare that God has better things than even these for you, and the door of escape will open before you and the glories of the eternal riches in Christ Jesus will stream through into your soul.

Is it temptation which comes through the many forms of the pride of life? Admit its presence, [illegible]2. Again face the temptation honestly. The Devil being such a liar himself would like nothing better than to get you to lying about the temptation which is pressing so sorely upon you. He would like to make you believe it was no temptation at all, only a silly delusion. Or he would like to get you to dodging the main point at issue and to have you slip around to the rear and look for the door of escape there. And he would have you sure if you did, just as he got poor Peter while the words of his boast that he would not deny Jesus were still warm upon his lips. But face the issue squarely and honestly. Admit that ambition for world influence, power, wealth is luring you on, if the temptation comes to you from that direction, and then say, you must not crowd God out. He must worship God alone, and behold the door of escape swings open and the soul realizes how little the world had to offer after all and how worthy of worship and praise God is. Yes, the door of escape from every temptation is found straight ahead as the soul faces the temptation. The spring which will make it swing wide is the magic touch of Jesus Christ, for He who has been tempted in all points like as we knows how to succor them which are tempted.

TEMPTATION comes to all. It serves the purpose of testing. A piece of steel is tested to see how much strain it will bear. It proves its capacity for service by the amount of strain it sustains without breaking. The Christian is tested to prove his capacity for service in the Lord's work. If he stands the pressure of the temptation he proves himself capable of a larger service. If he fails it proves unfitness. Temptation serves to strengthen his faith, if the temptation is overcome, for the trying of his faith worketh patience, and when patience hath had her perfect work he is entire and wanteth nothing to make his character a full-rounded and symmetrical one.

"Blessed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord has promised to them that love Him." The tested steel is valued according to its strength. The tested Christian is declared blessed in the estimation of God according to the degree of his endurance and when the testing of this life is finished he bows before his King to receive the crown of life.

Temptation is not sin, else would not James admonish the brethren to "count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations," and Christ would not have been subjected to the wilderness experience. Sin leaves its disfiguring mark only at the point where temptation has given place to the commission of the deed.

"Yield not to temptation, for yielding is sin."

The testing did not put the weak spot in the bar of steel and cause it to break. The testing only served to reveal the flaw and prevent that bar of steel being put into the engine and thus exerting certain disaster and possible loss of life. The testing of the Christian does not put the weakness into his life which causes him to yield and stain his life with sin. The testing revealed to him the weakness in his character and prevented a possible greater disaster at a later time, through that weakness, if it had not been discovered.

God does not tempt, but He permits temptation. The warning of Scripture on this point is: "Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God; for God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth He any man." God did not tempt Job, but He permitted Satan to test Him. Satan is made to furnish the fire which tries out God's gold. He is made to sweat in the service of the Almighty, for every blow he strikes against the Christian who overcomes hardens his muscles and steadies his nerve to strike back the telling blow. The hissing serpent on the ground that is watching a favored opportunity to strike its poison fangs into human flesh becomes the chastening rod of righteousness in the overcoming hand of man.

It certainly is reassuring and a great comfort to Christian hearts to know that Satan is a chained lion after all, and that while he may reach them with his claws and wound them sore as they travel in forbidden paths of sin where his chain admits of his roaming, still he cannot crush the life out and devour utterly. I say this knowledge is reassuring and comforting, but the Christian who would wantonly presume on this knowledge to go to unlimited lengths in sin, would give the unmistakable evidences of being among the Judases who never really belonged to the Lord. Oh, our faithful God, who will not suffer us to be tempted above that we are able to bear! Oh, our all-wise God, who has set a door of escape in every temptation which may assail the soul o

MISS HELEN WHITMAN.

"There is nothing like Peruna for that tired feeling, which gives you no ambition for work or play. After a prolonged illness, about a year ago I felt unable to regain my health, but four bottles of Peruna made a wonderful change and restored me to perfect health. As long as you keep your blood in good condition you are all right, and Peruna seems to fill the veins with pure, healthful blood. I thoroughly endorse it." MISS HELEN WHITMAN.

Have you got nerves? Well, you ought to have nerves. But they ought to be strong nerves, good nerves. Does your hand tremble? You are living too fast. Does your heart flutter at times? You had better call a halt. Americans live too fast. They crowd too much into a single day. They have too little leisure. The hospitals and insane asylums are filling up. The quiet, pastoral scenes of yore are becoming rare. It's time that we quit this sort of business.

How to Get Strong Nerves.

First, repair the injury already done to your nerves. The way to do this is to do exactly as did Mattie B. Curtis, Secretary of Legion of Loyal Women, Hotel Salem, Boston, Mass. She said in a recent letter: "I suffered for over a year with general weakness and debility manifested in severe headache and backache. I took four bottles of Peruna, and for two months have been entirely free from these maladies."

Nervous Prostration.

Thousands of cases might be quoted in which Peruna has been used to rescue people from the perdition of deranged nerves, and put them on the good, solid foundation of health. The County Auditor of Erie county, New York, Hon. John W. Neff, in a recent letter written at Buffalo, New York, stated: "I was persuaded by a friend to try a bottle of your great nerve tonic, Peruna, and the results were so gratifying that I am more than pleased to recommend it."

A Spring Tonic.

Almost everybody needs a tonic in the spring. Something to brace the nerves, invigorate the brain and cleanse the blood. That Peruna will do this is beyond all question. Everyone who has tried it has had the same experience as Mrs. D. W. Timberlake, of Lynchburg, Va., who, in a recent letter, made use of the following words: "I always take a dose of Peruna after business hours, as it is a great thing for the nerves. There is no better spring tonic, and I have used about all of them."

Catarrh in Spring.

The spring is the best time to treat catarrh. Nature renews herself every spring. The system is rejuvenated by spring weather. This renders medicines more effective. A short course of Peruna, assisted by the balmy air of spring, will cure old, stubborn cases of catarrh that have resisted treatment for years. Everybody should have a copy of Dr. Hartman's latest book on catarrh. Address The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

Mrs. Lulu Larmer, Stoughton, Wis., says:

Mrs. Lulu Larmer.

"For two years I suffered with nervous trouble and stomach disorders until it seemed that there was nothing to me but a bundle of nerves. I was very irritable, could not sleep, rest or compose myself, and was certainly unfit to take care of a household. I took nerve tonics and pills without benefit. When I began taking Peruna I grew steadily better, my nerves grew stronger, my rest was no longer fitful, and to-day I consider myself in perfect health and strength. My recovery was slow but sure, but I persevered and was rewarded by perfect health."—Mrs. Lulu Larmer.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

WHO WILL BE WINNERS?

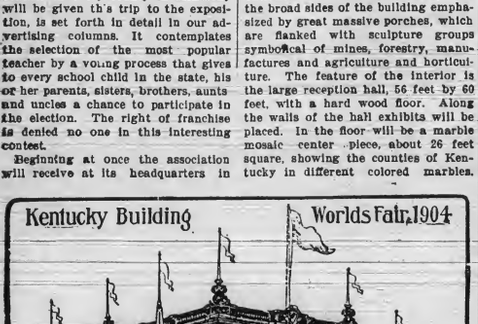
EXHIBIT ASSOCIATION'S BIG OFFER.



One to Be Elected From Every County In the State—Full Details of the Plan—Description of the Kentucky Building to Be Erected at Exposition.

Who is the most popular school teacher in this county?

The Kentucky Exhibit association wants to know, and this week puts on foot a plan for finding out. Whoever it may be, he or she will be given a free tripto the Louisiana Purchase Exposition in St. Louis next year, the association paying every expense, including railroad transportation to and from St. Louis, six days' board at one of the best hotels in the Mound City and admission six days to the World's Fair. This is an opportunity that should appeal to every educator in the state. The exposition will be the greatest international event of the kind ever held, the World's Fair at Chicago in 1893 not excepted. One entire building is devoted to education, and in it Kentucky will have 2,500 square feet of space. This alone is a sufficient attraction for school teachers, but every building will hold out an inducement to all visitors, so the entire six days to be spent on the grounds will be one valuable series of lessons that could not be learned elsewhere.

The plan of the Exhibit association, by which the most popular school teacher in every county in Kentucky will be given this trip to the exposition, is set forth in detail in our advertising columns. It contemplates the selection of the most popular teacher by a voting process that gives to every school child in the state, his or her parents, sisters, brothers, aunts and uncles a chance to participate in the election. The right of franchise is denied no one in this interesting contest.

Beginning at once the association will receive at its headquarters in Louisville votes in ballots of ten each. Everybody is invited to vote on the ballot to be clipped from the plan in another column of this issue. There ten spaces for votes, each vote representing ten cents. School children may form clubs of ten each and send one dollar to the association, and thereby cast ten votes for their favorite teacher. This privilege is also offered to the public in general. It is possible, in fact desirable, for one person to cast ten votes at a time by writing his or her name across the ten spaces and forwarding one dollar to the association.

The association does not require the signature of any voter, but is especially anxious to have all school children sign their names plainly, so they may make therefrom a list of thousands and thousands of the coming men and women of Kentucky for enrollment in the Kentucky building to be erected at the exposition.

All of the money derived from this plan, over and above the expense of the most popular teachers of the state, will go towards the erection of the Kentucky building at the fair. Those voting in this contest will thus have the satisfaction of knowing that they have not only assisted in the election of their favorite teacher, but have contributed no little to the movement that will result in the most successful representation ever given the state at an exposition of this kind.

The Kentucky building at the fair will cost about $30,000, and if the interest hoped for by the association is displayed in this school teachers' popularity contest, there will be no trouble in erecting the handsome structure out of the dimes and dollars of the school children and the public in general. There is no school child in the state that is not able to cast one vote in the contest, and many doubtless will cast scores of votes.

The contest is under the immediate supervision of the educational committee of the association, of which Professor H. C. Brownell of Louisville is chairman. Associated with Professor Brownell on the committee are some of the state's best known educators. None of them, however, will be eligible to election in this contest.

It should be borne in mind that every county selects its own favorite teacher. To stimulate interest, however, the association has determined to give to the county casting the largest number of votes—Jefferson excepted—the privilege of sending two teachers to the fair at its expense, the most popular teacher and the second most popular teacher.

The association has mailed to every teacher in the state, whose name it was possible to obtain, the plan in detail, and it will be read to his or her school, if in session now, or when opened during the summer. The contest will not close until every school in the state has had a chance to vote. Professor H. V. McChesney, state superintendent of public instruction, has given his hearty endorsement to this contest, and has issued a letter to the public school teachers of the state suggesting that they read to their schools the details of the plan and help in the contest.

The contest is not confined to the public school teachers of the state, however. Every educator is eligible to vote, whether teaching in private school or public school, or whether a member of the faculty of an academy, college or university. The medical, dental and theological institutions may also enter their teachers in the contest. The Catholic schools of the state are also expected to vote, and in this way the contest will prove one of the most interesting perhaps ever conducted in the commonwealth.

To give the public and school children an idea of the building, into the erection of which their dimes and dollars will go, after the school teachers' expenses are paid, the association herewith presents a cut of the Kentucky building. It will cover an area of 138 feet by 108 feet, including porches and verandas, the building proper being 97 feet by 62 feet. The exterior is symmetrical and well-balanced, in the classic style of architecture, and is richly decorated. Entirely surrounded by porches and verandas, entrances are on all four sides, with the broad sides of the building emphasized by great massive porches, which are flanked with sculpture groups symbolical of mines, forestry, manufactures and agriculture and horticulture. The feature of the interior is the large reception hall, 56 feet by 60 feet, with a hard wood floor. Along the walls of the hall exhibits will be placed. In the floor will be a marble mosaic center piece, about 26 feet square, showing the counties of Kentucky in different colored marbles.

A border design will give this a rug effect, as beautiful when viewed through the light-well from the second floor as from the first. The stairway leading to the second floor and four smaller rooms in the four corners used for gentlemen's reception and retiring room, check and custodian's rooms, take up the balance of the first floor. The second floor is similar to the first and will be for ladies, with the exception of having the rooms arranged at one end, so that they can be used as one large banqueting room. An attractive balustrade encircles the light-well in the center. Over the large reception hall will be a third floor level with the roof of the second story. A small space on this floor will be reserved for a serving room, which communicates with the first and second floors by a dumb waiter. The remainder of the floor will be used as a roof garden, and will be made as open as possible, to connect with the outer galleries formed of the roofs of the porches. The roof above the third floor, the main roof, will also be accessible. For neighbors the Kentucky building will have California on one side and Minnesota on the other, facing Iowa and New Mexico.

SKY FULL OF WONDERS.

One is fairly dazzled by the incomparable splendors of the ceremonies planned for Thursday, April 30, at the World's Fair, St. Louis. When congress postponed the exposition to 1904 provision was made for a celebration of the 100th anniversary of the Louisiana Purchase and the dedication of the World's Fair buildings. The ceremonies on April 30 and May 1 and 2 of this year are planned in obedience to that law. President Roosevelt and cabinet, the judges of the supreme court, the diplomatic corps, governors of states, three famous bishops and many other distinguished men are to be present. Former President Cleveland will deliver the principal address. There will be monster parades of the military, numbering 15,000 men, and civic parades of 30,000 or more. The glorious festivities of each day will be followed by the grandest fireworks spectacles ever set off. Seats for 30,000 people in a grandstand 500 feet long have been arranged, and the fireworks display will cover a stretch of ground over half a mile long. The display is to be one of splendor.

SEVERE ATTACK OF GRIP

"When I had an attack of the grip last winter (the second one) I actually cured myself with one bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says Frank W. Perry, Editor of the Enterprise, Shortsville, N. Y. "This is the honest truth. At times kept from coughing myself to pieces by taking a teaspoonful of this remedy, and when the coughing spell would come on at night I would take a dose and it seemed that the briefest interval the cough would pass off and I would go to sleep perfectly free from cough and its accompanying pains. To say the remedy acted as a most agreeable surprise is putting it very mildly. I had no idea that it could or would knock out the grip; simply because I had never tried it for such a purpose, but it did, and it seemed with the second attack of coughing the remedy caused it to not only be of less duration, but the pains were far less severe, and I had not used the contents of one bottle before Mr. Grip had bid me adieu." The trouble had been brewing for weeks, and the captain wanted to discharge the man, but there was some delay. The Christian Church Lunch Box Social at the I. O. O. F. Hall in Belleview on Saturday night, the 11th inst., was the most entertaining and instructive affair your correspondent has had the pleasure of attending for many days. Before the lunch boxes were disposed of the audience was treated to an address by the pastor, Rev. Nooe, and recitations by the following Sunday school pupils: Cecil Snelling, Mary L. Rowland, Neva Rice, Emil Cook, Robert McGuire, Everett West, Pearl McGuire, Grace Louden, Addie G. West, Julia Louden, Omer McGuire, Pearl Stephens, Mazella Flick, Blanche Zelma, Lucy Kelly, Clara Smith and Clara Staly. After the close of the recitations the lunch boxes were readily disposed of at 10 cents each, the proceeds amounting to nearly $10. The officers and pupils of the school deserve great credit, for they left nothing undone to make those present enjoy themselves. The members of the church and officers of the school extend their thanks and appreciation for the aid of friends and of members of sister churches, who so kindly assisted in making the social a success, and especially do they thank the Odd Fellows for the use of their magnificent hall. We wish to say to those ladies who wanted Commissary to get their boxes so that their names would appear in the paper, and had one beau given one, her name would have appeared, and her intelligence, beauty and good qualities of mind and heart would have been praised as never before.

Dangers of Colds and Grip.

The greatest danger from colds and grip is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for this disease we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous disease. It will cure a cold or an attack of the grip in less time than any other treatmeut. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

Chas. McFee's house, one of the oldest and best preserved houses in the county, burnt to the ground on Friday the 10th inst., from a defective flue. The school bell was rung and some of the neighbors gathered in and helped save most everything. Most of the silverware and china were destroyed. The school children rendered valuable service. They moved into a tenant house on the piece until they can do better. There was some insurance on the house.

Contractor J. T. Hinton, of Florence, has built about 200 rods of fence for William Weber.

We see in last week's issue that the Richwood correspondent had a little misunderstanding with an unruly stove pipe, and he intimates that on that occasion there was some language used. We are not prepared to state the effect that refractory stove-pipes have on one's vocabulary, but Bert Worthington says, "to cause a rapid flow of good, strong unadulterated English, just start to walk across an ice-covered porch, lose your footing and have the United States, Mexico and Central America to fly up and strike your head."

Mr. Ed., our magistrate reports that the roads in this district have been worked in a good manner, except that one bridge needed raising some. Now it is a known fact that some of the roads in this district have had nothing done to them, to amount to anything, inside of five years, and they are now dangerous to travel. But the tax has been collected all the time, and it is a perplexing question to know what has been done with the money. I don't want to be known as a kicker, but I think everybody should be interested in good roads, and the only way to have them is to see that the roads are properly worked. If any one takes exceptions to this article it can be substantiated by 20 of our best citizens.

SEVERE ATTACK OF GRIP

"When I had an attack of the grip last winter (the second one) I actually cured myself with one bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says Frank W. Perry, Editor of the Enterprise, Shortsville, N Y. "This is the honest truth. I at times kept from coughing myself to pieces by taking a teaspoonful of this remedy, and when the coughing spell would come on at night I would take a dose and it seemed that in the briefest interval the cough would pass off and I would go to sleep perfectly free from cough and its accompanying pains. To say the remedy acted as a most agreeable surprise is putting it very mildly. I had no idea that it could or would knock out the grip, simply because I had never tried it for such a purpose, but it did, and it seemed with the second attack of coughing the remedy caused it to not only be of less duration, but the pains were far less severe, and I had not used the contents of one bottle before Mr. Grip had bid me adieu." For sale by all druggists.

Bids for the construction of the Belleview Baptist Church building will be opened and passed upon by the building committee on Saturday, May 2nd, 1903. Plans and specifications may be seen at Corbin's store in Belleview, Ky., or will be furnished to bona fide bidders on application.

Aberdeen, S. D., April 7.—President Roosevelt Monday traversed South Dakota and made more speeches than on any other day during his present trip. In all his speeches Monday he followed closely the lines of his former addresses on these subjects. The president Roosevelt received the assurance of the friendship and support of the great Sioux Indian tribe and similar assurances from the chiefs of the Mandans and Grosventres. Twenty of the most distinguished chieftains of the tribes had come from their agencies to see the "Great Father" and assure him of their support and good will. There were many famous Indians in the assemblage. John Grass, the orator and chief justice of the Sioux, made the presentation of the tribes' good will, in a translation of the address which had been agreed upon in council of the chiefs. ALMOST INCINERATED.

His Nephew Also Burned to Death—Mother, Two Daughters, a Son and the Governess Were More or Less Injured.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 13.—Nathan Morris, one of the best-known attorneys of Indiana, and Frank Haas, the 12-year-old son of Dr. Joseph Haas, were burned to death Sunday morning, and Mrs. Joseph Haas, Miss Belle Haas, Miss Rose Haas, Louis Haas and Grace Lemon, a governess, were injured more or less seriously. The residence of Dr. Joseph Haas, [illegible] North Alabama street, was nearly burned to the ground. The fire started at 3 o'clock from the furnace.

The family was asleep on the second floor. Mr. Morris was a brother of Mrs. Haas. From the position of his charred body when found it was evident he was endeavoring to get the family out of the rooms when overcome by smoke and flames. The firemen succeeded in saving the other members of the family after heroic work, so rapidly did the flames spread. The body of Frank Haas and the unconscious governess were found on the back stairs. Louis Hass broke his leg jumping from a second-story window.

Mr. Morris was the senior member of the well-known commercial law firm of Morris & Newberger. He was born in California in 1857 and has practiced here since 1877.

The injured members of the Haas family are still in a serious condition, though it is believed all will recover. Mrs. Haas and one of her daughters are suffering, and it was feared at first that they had inhaled flames. Dr. Haas, one of the best-known physicians in the city, was at Lima, Ind., visiting his son at military school.

FLOODING A BURNING MINE.

Sydney, N. S., April 13.—Through a sluice cut from a dam made on the shore of the Atlantic ocean and opening into the old working, water is now pouring into the burning colliery No. 1, of the Dominion Coal Co. at the rate of nearly three and a half million gallons an hour. The pit is flooded up to the seventh level and there are four more levels to be flooded before the fire is reached. This will require an estimated 450,000,000 gallons of water. The depth of the water Sunday at the lower end of the pit was about 170 feet and it is backed up toward the shaft to a distance of over 2,500 feet. It will take five more days to flood the mine to such an extent that the entire fire area is submerged.

SECURE A FREE HOME IN THE FERTILE WHEAT FIELDS OF WESTERN CANADA.

To the Editor:

The emigration of well-to-do farmers from the United States to the Canadian Northwest has assumed such proportions that organized efforts are now being made by interested persons and corporations to stem the tide. The efforts are being initiated chiefly by railway and real estate interests in the States from which the bulk of the emigration takes place. The movement of population has taken from numerous states thousands of persons whose presence along railways in those states made business for the transportation companies. The movement has also become so widely known that it has prevented the settlement of vacant lands along these lines, lands who might have located there, being attracted to the free and more fertile lands of Canada. The result of the movement has been that the railway companies not only see the vacant lands along their lines remain vacant, but they also see hundreds of substantial farmers who have helped provide business for these railways move away and so cease their contributions. The farmers have moved to Canada because they were convinced that it would be to their financial interest to do so. In moving they have been inconsiderate enough to place their own financial interests before those of the financial interests of the railway corporations.

In addition to the railway corporations, real estate dealers are working to stem the flow of emigrants. Of course every emigrant who goes to Canada means the loss of commissions on land deals by real estate dealers. Now a person has but to know what the interests are that are trying to stop the flow to know what motive is influencing their course. The emigration means financial loss to railway corporations and to real estate men. These interests therefore are not directing their opposition efforts out of any love for the departing emigrants or out of any high patriotic motives either. They are doing so purely from selfish interests. It is a matter of dollars and cents with them. They are so patriotic, they are so consumed by love for their fellow citizens that they want to prevent these fellow citizens going to Canada and getting free farms of the best wheat land in the world, and instead they want to make them stay on high priced farms in the United States where they will continue to pour money into the pockets of these railways and real estate men.

One of the methods employed by these interests to stem the tide is the distribution of matter to newspapers, painting Canada in the darkest colors. These articles emanate chiefly from a bureau in St. Louis. They are sent out at frequent intervals for simultaneous publication. A writer is employed at a high salary to prepare the matter.

Moreover, statements absolutely at variance with the truth have lately been published broad cast. These appear chiefly in what purport to be letters from persons who are alleged to have gone to Canada and become disgusted with it. Only a few of such have been published and they contain statements that are absurd in their falsity. Whether the parties whose names appeur in connection with these letters have ever been in Canada and if so, their history while there, is to be thoroughly looked into. The discovery of their motive, like the discovery of the motive of the interests who are engineering the opposition, may prove illumining. In the meantime, however, it may be pointed out that only a few of such letters have appeared, but since 1897 over 87,000 American settlers have gone to the Canadian West. Can any reasonable person suppose for a moment that if Canada was one-quarter as bad as represented in these letters the 87,000 Americans now there would remain in the country; or, if the Canadian West had not proved the truth of all that was claimed for it, the papers of every State in the American Northwest would not be filled with letters saying so? Imagine 87,000 aggressive Americans deceived and not making short shift of their deceivers. The fact in the 87,000 are well satisfied and are encouraging their friends to follow them.

Anyone who sees any of these disparaging letters should remember that it is railway and real estate interests who have from purely selfish reasons organized a campaign to stem the flow to Canada. If Canada were half as bad as represented there would be no need of such an organization. The fact that such exists is of itself a magnificent tribute to Canada. Finally it should not be forgotten that the letters published are brimful of falsehoods and that 87,000 satisfied Americans in the Canadian West constitute a living proof that such is the case.

GOVERNOR BECKHAM

An Able and Effective Answer To His Opponents.

Clearly Eligible or He Would Not Make the Race.

Gov. Beckham opened his campaign for the democratic nomination for governor at Owensboro on Monday and was greeted by a large and enthusiastic audience. His speech in full was as follows:

I announced myself a candidate for the democratic nomination for governor last December, after receiving a large number of flattering assurances of support from friends all over the state. It was urged by those unfriendly to me that, under the constitution of the state, I was not eligible to succeed myself in the office of governor, even though I was filling only the unexpired term for which Gov. Goebel was elected. I consulted with a great many of the ablest lawyers in the state, and, without exception, they advised me that there was no violation of either the letter or the spirit of the constitution in my being elected for the next term of the office.

GOV. BECKHAM.

Judge Pryor, Judge Hazelrigg,—two ex-chief justices of the court of appeals,—ex-Gov. Knott, Capt. W. T. Ellis and Mr. Lewis McQuown, all of them ranking in the front of the legal profession, wrote an able and unanswerable opinion declaring that I was eligible. Very many other lawyers of no less ability took the same view. Under such circumstances I decided to become a candidate before the people for re-election, and I now say, without the fear of successful contradiction, that this so-called question of eligibility would never be heard of in this campaign except for its political effect, and because my enemies admit that the only hope they have of defeating me is to create a doubt in the minds of the people upon that question. I have always been frank and honest with the people of Kentucky, who have so generously honored me, and the high office of governor is not sufficient temptation to me to ever deal unfairly or selfishly with them. I can, therefore, say in all truth and candor that I would not be a candidate one minute for this office if there was the slightest doubt of my eligibility, or the least danger of controversy about my election; nor would the court of appeals have ordered my name placed upon the ballots for the primary, if that court had believed me ineligible. If I had been under the required age, or if I had not been a citizen of the state, or if I had been a woman, they would never have granted a mandamus upon the state committee ordering my name placed upon the ballots. That honorable court, composed of able and upright judges, with a deep knowledge of the law and with a patriotic love for the peace and welfare of their state, would never have compelled the democratic state committee to place my name on the ballots, in a primary called under the law, if they had considered me ineligible and that a contest and turmoil might result from my election.

My two opponents opened this issue before the people with the purpose of raising confusion and doubt in their minds about it. It was a legal question, and not one for the people to decide, so I proceeded to get the matter before a tribunal which could pass upon it. I filed a suit in the Woodford circuit court, before Judge Cantrill, that the question might be properly passed upon. My opponents, through their attorneys, asked to be made parties to the suit, and alleged that they did not want to delay or obstruct a decision upon it. It was argued before Judge Cantrill, and that learned and able judge decided in unmistakable terms that I was eligible and was entitled to run in the primary. The case was taken to the court of appeals, and there before that court my opponents, through their attorneys, begged, insisted and demanded that the court should not pass upon this question, but leave it open, that these opponents might further agitate it before the people. They did not want their only campaign issue against me taken from them, and they believed that if the court decided it at all it would be in my favor. They did exactly as they had promised not to do in their pleadings before Judge Cantrill—that was, not to obstruct or delay a decision of the question.

The court of appeals, in its wisdom, affirmed Judge Cantrill's opinion, and granted the mandamus. I did not fear a decision; I wanted it. But my opponents were afraid of one, and begged that the court say nothing of the matter. If I was not eligible, there is not a member of that court that, in justice to himself, in friendship to me, and in his love for the peace and quiet of our beloved commonwealth, would not oppose my candidacy for this office. But, as a matter of fact, there are several of the democratic judges of that court who are earnestly for me for the nomination.

The mistake made by my opponents is the same made by a host of others who have sought public office. The political highway is strewn with the corpses of men who have not given the people credit for having as much sense as they have. Many a bright career has been suddenly ended, many a brilliant star in the gorgeous firmament of political hope, and as ambitious statesman on the high tide of success, have sunk into the outer darkness, all because they thought that it was an easy thing to fool the people,—yes, the plain, common people,—whenever it suited their purpose to do so.

I have an abiding and unshaken faith in the intelligence and honesty of the great body of our people. I have never lost confidence in them, and in this matter I know they have sense enough to see the plain proposition,—it does not take a lawyer to see it,—that the court of appeals would never have ordered the name of an ineligible candidate placed upon legal ballots, and that no member of that court would favor the nomination of such a candidate if the court considered him ineligible.

The talk about another contest is merely a bug-a-boo to frighten children, merely a political trick to alarm the voters. I have borne the brunt of one contest, when our state was in grave danger, and I did not shirk my duty. I would not now, for any office or honor within the gift of the people, put in hazard the peace and welfare of my state. There is not the slightest danger of such a contest, except in the fervid imagination of some of those who are trying to defeat me in this primary.

My opponents charge that I am afraid to meet them in joint debate. I charge that they are afraid to meet me at the polls in the primary on May 9th, and that they are doing everything in their power, by litigation and by denunciation, to block the holding of that primary, because they know they can not defeat me in a fair contest before the voters. Their only hope is a convention, where the power of money and the power of political combinations can often thwart the will of the people. The cry about a "machine primary" is so absurd that it is not entitled to a serious notice. Who ever heard of a real "political machine" wanting a primary? Why, "machine" ever sought to take the people into its confidence by giving them a chance to vote? A "machine" always wants conventions, and is better able to carry out its plans in that way than in primaries. But the people are not deceived by this talk, and they know it is simply a "stop-thief" cry. There is a "machine," a strong, active and alert one,—trying to get control of the state offices, and fighting me because it can not control me, and that is the "machine" which is so much opposed to this primary. That machine can not stand up in a fair fight before the people. Its methods and its purposes can not risk the light of public view. It has assailed the democratic organization of Kentucky, because it can not control that organization, and could not force it to call a convention. It has denounced the members of that organization, and charged them with being my friends. I am proud of the fact that a large majority of the democratic committee are my friends. They are the men who make the party's fights, and who have been honored by their people in being elevated to the councils of the party's welfare. If they favor my nomination and election, it is a compliment to me. The charge that I have tried to influence their action by official favors is so baseless and untrue that I shall treat it with the contempt it deserves. The men of that committee who have been attacked are men of the highest character and standing—men who have at heart the best interests of their party, and who would never let their friendship for any man put in danger the success of the party. They believed that a primary was the fairest and best means of nominating candidates for state offices, and for that reason they called it. The court of appeals has decided that they had a right to call it, under the law, and the action of the committee has been fully vindicated.

These members of that committee compose the sub-committee which has in charge the conduct of the primary. The names of these men are a guarantee of fairness and impartiality. The chairman of the committee is the Hon. A. W. Young, who within the last year has been nominated without opposition by the democrats of his district to be their circuit judge. Another member is Judge J. M. Lassing, the present circuit judge of his district, and the nominee for the next term without opposition. The other member is Mr. Mott Ayres, the editor of a leading democratic paper in Western Kentucky. No one will dare assail the character and integrity of these gentlemen among the people where they live and who know them. As far as it is in their power, they will see that every candidate for every office will have absolutely fair treatment. The attacks made upon these men come only from the brutality of hopeless rage, and the man who says they will not give him fair treatment knows that he has no chance to win fairly, and is seeking to make capital for the republican party.

It has been, and is now, my desire to conduct this campaign upon the high grounds befitting the dignity of the office of governor. I have refrained from all personal abuse or attacks upon my opponents and those who have been against me. I shall not now allow myself to be dragged down to the low level of demagogy and charlatanism, in a race for the highest office in the gift of the people of the state. I have been patient and forbearing under a fight made upon me by my enemies so vicious, so corrupt, and so full of falsehoods, that it has not been equaled since the desperate and slanderous campaign waged upon my lamented predecessor, William Goebel, who was charged at times even with the crime of beating his wife! I have not myself escaped calumny and misrepresentation from disappointed office-seekers, from disappointed pardon-brokers, and from those grafters who met with no cheer in my office, and whose presence in politics is for the purpose of plundering a campaign fund or sandbagging a corporation under some threat of legislative or franchise-tax punishment. They could not control me, and they are therefore fighting me with a malevolence born of hate and despair.

I have no word of criticism for the majority of those who oppose my nomination. If they doubt the wisdom of my election I accord to them every possible respect for their views, and I know that just as a great many good democrats thought at best not to nominate me then, so there are some good democrats who now oppose my candidacy. I have no quarrel with them, and I would not for any consideration utter a harsh word against them. I have respect for the man who honestly differs from me, and all I ask is that he accord me the same respect.

I have always had feelings of kindness and friendship for my two opponents—Judge Breckinridge and Mr. Hendrick. For Judge Breckinridge I must say, that while he seems to have joined in with my other opponent in the general fight on me, his campaign so far has been dignified and courteous towards me, and that he has refrained from any cowardly personal attacks upon me or upon my administration. I have no word of criticism against him, however, except that I must say I do not think the judge seriously wants the office of governor, except to put himself in line for higher honors. If he should be nominated and elected governor, he would let some fellow come along and take the office away from him and then run as a martyr candidate for the presidency of the United States.

Mr. Hendrick has made personal attacks upon me, which I shall not let pass without showing that he has grossly misrepresented me and shown a reckless disregard for the truth unworthy of any man who aspires to a public office. It has been my desire to let him make his race on his own merits, without ever making the slightest attack on him, but as he has seen fit to pitch his campaign on the one issue of abusing me, and has sought by various statements and insinuations to reflect upon my honor, I propose to lift him up before the eyes of the people of Kentucky, that they may have a good look at him and see if they think he is the man to be trusted with the banner of democracy in the coming state campaign:

From the character of the speeches Mr. Hendrick is making, it is evident that he has not the slightest hope of winning the nomination, and it is evident that it is his purpose to bolt the party's ticket just as he has done before. Beginning in 1894, he served one term in congress from the First district, and he was overwhelmingly defeated for renomination by a democratic primary, in 1896, by Hon. Charles K. Wheeler. He refused to make any speeches for the ticket or his successful opponent, and if he supported the democratic ticket at all that year he is the only living man who knows it, for no word of aid or comfort ever came from his mouth in that campaign, and his vote was protected by the sanctity of the secret ballot. In the following year (1897) he bolted the ticket openly, and was the leader in his (Livingston) county convention, which selected delegates to the state convention at Louisville to nominate a candidate for clerk of the court of appeals, against the regular democratic nominee for that office. Mr. Hendrick was made a delegate to that convention. In his county convention he was the chairman of the committee on resolutions, and drew up those resolutions himself. Let us see what he said of the democratic party. Here is one of them, written by Mr. Hendrick. It is not necessary to give them all:

"Resolved, That we unqualifiedly condemn the Chicago platform and the resolutions of the so-called democratic state convention held at Frankfort in 1897 as being undemocratic, revolutionary and inimical to the interest of the American people, and fraught with evil to the principles of republican government, and as being promulgated by designing men for the purpose of securing the spoils of office without regard to the rights and interest of the people.

Resolved, That we reindorse the Indianapolis platform of 1896 and point to it as the only refuge of patriotic men who desire the welfare of our common country."

Notwithstanding he admitted having written these resolutions and having been selected a delegate to the Hindman convention, he made the statement in his speech at Georgetown a short time ago that he had never failed to vote the democratic ticket but once in his life, and that was in 1897, when he said he was "too ill to go to the polls." A few days afterward he was confronted with the record, which showed beyond contradiction that he had voted in that year (1897), and that stub No. 21 on the poll-book in his precinct proved that he had voted. Now, how did he vote? If he voted in accordance with the principles he announced in these resolutions which he wrote,—and any one would suppose he did,—then he voted for Hindman, and is now trying to practice a deception upon the people of Kentucky when he says he "never scratched a democratic ticket." If he voted for the democratic nominee, then he was guilty of gross hypocrisy in writing those resolutions, denouncing in bitter terms the democratic organization, just as he is now denouncing the same organization. Which horn of the dilemma will Mr. Hendrick take? He is compelled to choose between them, for even the benevolence of the secret ballot can not protect him from his predicament. If he voted as he talked and wrote, then he voted for Mr. Hindman, and if he voted as he now talks and writes, he voted for the democratic nominee. What a wonderful invention the secret ballot is! The genius which conceived its beauties and perfections must have had in mind Mr. Hendrick, and was trying to relieve him, if possible, from the embarrassment of some of his political contortions.

I do not like to open the skeleton closet of this political acrobat any further, but as he is now posing about the state seeking to take from me that which I value above everything else,—my good name,—I must proceed in showing the people what manner of man he is, and how little credit he is entitled to when he attempts to defame honest men. He has written a letter and sent it broadcast over the state, saying that he was my attorney during the contest here three years ago, and that he acted without fee or reward from me. The statement is very unfair. Mr. Hendrick was not my attorney. My attorneys were McQuown and Bradburn, of Bowling Green, and Mr. Maxwell, of Cincinnati. I paid them for their services. Mr. Hendrick was employed by the candidates for the minor offices, and he was paid for his few weeks' service during that time about which he now talks so much, the substantial fee of $2,500. He now tries to make it appear that his services then were purely "disinterested and unremunerated." But he was well paid for all he did by this sum. I have gone into these matters solely for the purpose of showing the methods he has used in attacking me everywhere he has been.

I am not criticising those who saw fit to leave our party in 1896 and in subsequent years. I know that many good men left us in those years, because they did not agree with us upon some matters of party policy. Most of those who left then have come back, and no one extends to them a more cordial hand than I do upon their return to the party ranks. I am glad to see them with us again, and I cheerfully accord to them sincere respect for the honesty of their views. But I do criticise those who seek to deny their position then and now ask for the highest honors within the gift of the party.

While my opponents have been out abusing me, I have been faithfully attending to the duties of my office, and since they began their attacks upon me I have succeeded in having paid into the state treasury $1,323,393.35, collected from the national government upon claims arising from money furnished by the state to the government of the United States during the civil war. Within the last two weeks, we have used some of that money in paying off the state debt and burning up its bonds. Our debt when I came into office was $1,000,000. We have already paid off $954,000, leaving a debt of only $46,000, which will soon be paid off with some of the same money, and still leave us out of the fund about $300,000. My work in the matter has been one of the reasons why I have not been able to meet unworthy opponents on the stump, and explains why I could not show a more active interest in my campaign.

Some complaint has been made about the fee paid the state agent, Capt. Calhoun, for the collection of these claims. No such complaint would ever be heard of if it was not for the fact that I am a candidate, and political capital is sought to be made out of it. My enemies do not want me to have the slightest credit for this collection, although no attempt had been made to collect it in 25 years, until I undertook it. They say it was only a piece of clerical work, and any of our representatives in congress could have gotten it. Mr. Hendrick was in congress two years from the First district of Kentucky. Why didn't he collect it while he was in Washington? Or, at least, why didn't he tell something about it, so that others could undertake it? The claim was due while he was there. He criticises Capt. Calhoun's fee, and yet it is a matter of fact which he can not dispute that Kentucky has collected this vast sum from the government at less cost than ever paid by any state for such claims. Capt. Calhoun's fee was less than 5½ per cent. of the amount collected, his fee amounting to about $71,000. He would have received nothing if he had failed to collect it. Most of the other states have paid their attorney twenty or twenty-five per cent. for collection. Connecticut collected a similar claim $604,000, less than half what we collected, and paid her agent 25 per cent., or $151,000—more than twice as much as we paid our agent. Numerous other instances could be given, but it is unnecessary. In 1872, the state of Kentucky paid Pike and Johnson, lawyers, $25,000 for legal services in trying to collect part of its claim, in an effort which failed. The records of the sinking fund commission at Frankfort show that, in 1875, Gov. Leslie contracted with William Tomlinson for the collection of $101,755 from the federal government and paid him fifty per cent., or $50,560.50, for his services. Several other cases of a similar nature show that the state agent was always paid more than what was allowed Capt. Calhoun.

Some effort is made to show that I did wrong in making two contracts with Capt. Calhoun. The statement made that I employed him under the first contract and limited his entire fee to $3,000 is a deliberate misrepresentation. There is not a reputable lawyer in Kentucky, after looking at these contracts, who will not say that Calhoun could have collected as much under the first contract as he could under the second, the only reason for the second contract was because of the fact that I thought the matter was of such consequence it should be submitted to the general assembly and let that body pass upon the question of the fee. The whole case was laid before the committees of the two houses. I quote from Calhoun's statement about it, for it exactly relates the facts:

"As to my contracts, there was no secret whatever about them. The terms of the first contract were made known to the committees of the legislature and hundreds of others, and it was generally agreed that the fee was most reasonable, many claiming that it was not half enough. I was called before these committees several times, to make reports upon this and other matters which I was looking after for the state in Washington."

The general assembly passed a bill, with scarcely any opposition, fixing a fee in accordance with this contract, and their action was a complete ratification of the contract—the second contract being only a formal proceeding under this act. The general assembly therefore approved and confirmed the contract under which this fee was paid.

It is, therefore, surprising that my enemies should stoop so low as to try to make political capital out of this matter, and I know that there is not a good citizen in Kentucky who begrudges Capt. Calhoun one cent of his reward for his splendid achievement in bringing in this vast sum to our treasury, and enabling us to wipe out our entire state debt. Long after the names of these men who misrepresent and criticise this matter have passed into merited oblivion, the name of Capt. Calhoun will still be honored and admired by all Kentuckians for his brilliant work for the state.

In coming before the people of my state at this time, seeking at their hands an indorsement and a re-election to the power to [illegible] hold, I hope I may be pardoned for any seeming immodesty in referring to my record and services as a public official. I shall not do so in any spirit of vanity or egotism, for I am profoundly conscious of the fact that if my conduct in office has been worthy of approval, or the source of benefit in any way to the state, the credit is due not to me, but to the splendid and noble people of Kentucky, who have stood by me in all my trials and strengthened my arm in the performance of difficult and arduous duties. I do not wish to go into an account of the events in our state's history during the time I have held the office of governor. I much prefer to leave that to others. Our people, too, are familiar with it all, and I shall only briefly refer to what has happened.

Over three years ago, by the cruel and tragic assassination of William Goebel, Kentucky's elected governor, I was suddenly and unexpectedly invested with the duties and solemn responsibilities of the highest office in the commonwealth, at the most critical time in its history. The condition of affairs was one of anarchy and revolution. The capital of the state was in the hands of an armed mob. William Goebel had been shot down on the State House square by an assassin concealed in the executive building. The republican usurper, W. S. Taylor, was in the building at the time, only a few feet from the man who fired the shot. He surrounded the building with his armed retainers, and refused to allow the officers of the law to enter and search for the murderers. The lives of the democratic judges of the court of appeals, and of other democratic officials and leaders were threatened. Taylor refused to recognize a writ of habeas corpus, the most sacred bulwark of English and American liberty. He adjourned the general assembly without authority of law, and ordered it to meet in London, Ky. When the members of that body attempted to meet in their halls in the capital building, they were resisted and chased through the streets of Frankfort by bayonets in the hands of Taylor's mob. They were driven also from the court house, the opera house and other places where they tried to meet. Every act of lawlessness and crime was committed by this man and his confederates. Confusion and excitement reigned not only at the capital, but throughout the bounds of the commonwealth. Our people were never before wrought up to such a pitch of desperation and gloom.

Under such conditions I became governor of Kentucky and notified in an unwavering faith in the providence of an All-wise God, and a perfect confidence in the ultimate supremacy of the law and the sterling good sense of the Kentucky people, could nerve and support me in facing such grave and dangerous responsibilities. I knew that our cause was just. I believed that it would triumph without a resort to force, and that the courts of the land would uphold us. Many of my advisers and friends wanted radical and forcible measures used to get possession of our rights. I refused to do so. I knew the strength of our position, and I knew that if the law could not vindicate our position then we were not entitled to success. It was a critical moment; it was a supreme test; but out of it all came a light which will forever shine in brilliant effulgence, illuminating the fact that the Kentucky people are the noblest and most law abiding on earth. It was their victory, not mine. I was but an humble agent in the work accomplished. There never was a time in the history of the world when a people showed more forbearance, more love of order, and more patriotism, than was shown by our people during that critical period. Without that support my hand would have been powerless. The people of Kentucky owe me nothing for what little I may have done. I owe them life-long gratitude for what they have done for me. There is no obligation upon them to elect me to the governorship, and they should not do so unless they think I have made them an honest and capable official, and would continue to do so if re-elected. I have devoted every energy of my body and mind to a faithful performance of my public duties. I have tried with all the power I could use to restore peace, harmony and contentment among the people of the state. While a democrat of the strictest school, I have done all I could to show our republican brethren that my administration was fair and just to all citizens alike, regardless of their political affiliation. I have done what little I could to reconcile all sections of the state, and to bring about a new era of industrial and commercial development in our state.

I want to see less politics and more business in Kentucky. I have attended to the work of my office in a plain, business-like way, and have not sought to exalt myself by attempts at meteoric and pyrotechnic displays of brilliant politics. I may be a "little man," as some of my excellent critics call me, but I had rather burn a bond of the state's indebtedness than make a great speech or write a fervid and brilliant article upon the political situation.

Gibbon, in his history of the Roman empire, says: "If a man were called to fix the period in the history of the world during which the human race was most happy and prosperous, he would without hesitation name that which elapsed from the death of Domitian to the accession of Commodus." He also says that less history was made during that period than in any other time since the world began, and speaks of history as being "little more than the register of the crimes, follies and misfortunes of mankind." My ambition as governor of Kentucky is, not to make history, but to see our people peaceful, prosperous and happy. If I can contribute in the smallest degree to such a condition, then the cup of my youthful aspiration will be filled, and I will be content to go to my humble grave with no glowing tribute inscribed upon my tomb, and with no song or story to hand down my name to posterity.

I love Kentucky with the fondness that a child loves its parent. I am proud of her splendid history, and I glory in her generous and chivalric people. Her misfortune is my misfortune, and her happiness is my happiness. From the mountains to the Mississippi, with her variegated soil and productions, she has the greatest and noblest citizenship the world ever saw; all—whether mountaineer or lowlander—all Kentuckians; brave, generous and kindhearted.

Can you blame a man for wanting to be governor of such a people and such a state? I ask that honor at your hand. If my record and services in office deserve your support, I believe you will give it. If you do not, I shall bow to your decision with the grace and submission becoming a true democrat. If you grant it and nominate me as your candidate, I promise to carry the honored banner of my party through the campaign to a triumphant victory in the November election.

Whatever may be your verdict, remember that I belong to that class of democrats who never bolt their party ticket or refuse to support the party's candidate.

A Skinned For Bites.

A story is being told in Bangor, Me., to show the great vitality of the fox. In the town of Lubec one night a party of three men were chasing a chicken thief that had a den near the village. The dogs started the fox and dropped him past one of the hunters, when a quick shot seemed to have killed the animal. All hands came up, and the man who did the shooting began to skin the fox. The skin had been removed up to the shoulders, when the animal's jaws suddenly opened and then closed with a vicious snap on the hand of the hunter. With a hunting knife the fox's jaws were pried apart and the bleeding hand was released. It bore the teeth marks, which the hunter will always carry as evidence of what a Maine fox can do when supposedly dead and more than half skinned.—Albany Argus.

He Knew His Luck.

"No, sir, I don't want any accident insurance!" exclaimed the irritable party. "It would be just my luck not to have a blamed thing happen to me if I was carrying an accident policy."

"A life insurance, then?" suggested the agent.

"Worse and worse," was the reply. "Why, I wouldn't have one chance in a thousand of dying in time to make anything out of the company, if I had a policy. Oh, I know my luck."—Chicago Post.

A Veritable Sensation.

"Oh! there goes Mildred and that duke to whom she has engaged herself. And there is the greatest sensation about it in to-day's papers."

"Mercy!—What do they say?"

"That he is a real duke."—Detroit Free Press.

BOONE CO., RECORDER
Wednesday, - - April 15 1903.
W. L. RIDDELL, - - Publisher.

We are authorized to announce J. W. Kennedy, of Union, as a candidate for the legislature, subject to the action of the Democratic Party.

We are authorized to announce Jas. H. Craven, of Verona, as a candidate for Clerk of the Boone Circuit Court. Subject to the action of the Democratic party.

We are authorized to announce T. T. HEDGER, of Georgetown, Scott county, as a candidate for Commissioner of Agriculture. Subject to the action of the Democratic party. Primary election, May 9th, 1903.

We are authorized to announce Ben Watt, of Warren county, as a candidate for Superintendent of Public Instruction, subject to the action of the Democratic party. Primary election, May 9, 1903.

THE Sunday School Institute which closed its session here last night was not larely attended, but the exercises throughout were quite interesting.

ON an inside page of this issue you will find Governor Beckham's address to the Democratic voters of the State. In these political times it makes good reading.

IN the death of ex-Lieutenant Governor J. W. Bryan, of Covington, Kentucky loses one of her most brilliant sons and ablest lawyers. To know Gov. Bryan was to admire him. He was a courageous gentleman, true to his friends and abhored anything having the appearance of deception on the part of his fellowman.

MR. HENDRICK has cancelled all his appointments to speak so that he can follow Gov. Beckham in his tour of the State. That action may, and again it may not, be good politics on the part of Mr. Hendrick. Some times a candidate may become too aggressive, and it looks like his tendency is in that direction.

THE commissions of Commonwealth's Attorney M. D. Gray, at this term of the Boone Circuit Court, will amount to the magnificent sum of $12 50. This is a good showing for Boone county—a flattering testimonial as to the morals of her people, but it does not provide any food and raiment for Mr. Gray.

Gus. W. Richardson, of Meade county, candidate for the Democratic nomination for State Treasurer, was in town Monday, forming the acquaintances of the voters. He made a strong race for Clerk of the Court of Appeals a few years ago, and is very much in the race for the nomination he is now seeking. He is known as the red fox, so wise is he in laying his plans.

IN closing his speech before the Hamilton Club of Chicago, Mr. Watterson said: "Long ago the South, forgiving all, accepted the verdict in perfect faith. It is for the North, forgetting all, to seal that verdict in perfect love." Five hundred members of the club arose from their chairs and cheered the veteran journalist until he was forced to make acknowledgment. The subject of the address was "Peace Between the Sections" and it was handled in Mr. Watterson's most captivating and eloquent manner.

THE Boone County Telephone Company has about closed a contract with the Bell Telephone Company, by the terms of which all pay stations of the Boone County Telephone Company will have direct connection with Cincinnati, Covington, Newport and all other points reached by the lines of the Bell Telephone Company. This connection will be of great benefit to the Boone County Telephone Company.

Since the above was put in type the agreement has been signed, and the Boone County Company expects to have the long distance service at all its pay stations by the first of next month.

A large number of German farmers will come to the United States to study our farming methods, making a three months' tour through the States to the Pacific coast and investigating general farming, live-stock raising, horse breeding, tobacco raising, sugar-beet culture, irrigation, the stock yards, experiment station work and the work of the United States Department of Agriculture, which will furnish a guide for the trip. It will be under the auspices of the German Agricultural Society, which has just completed a building at Berlin, in which will be installed a bureau modeled after that at Washington.

A HUSTLING CANDIDATE.

The "Red Fox" Making Hay While the Sun Shines.

State Senator Gus. W. Richardson, Meade County's candidate for the nomination for State Treasurer was in Brandenburg, Saturday and says he has been out in the state interviewing the boys in the trenches and reports his prospects "rosy." The "Red Fox" is a hustler, and without doubt the best campaigner in the state. He can hold his own on the stump and when it comes to "bushwhacking" and personal work, he is the winner. When Gus strikes a town every man or boy there knows it. Gives a town every man has felt his warm clasp and every voter has received his card, smilingly presented. And that smile is a winner. He can interview more voters in a miuute than most candidates. He doesn't let any slip. We know but little of the strength of the candidate opposing "The Red Fox," but one fact is evident, the candidate who beats him will have to get up early in the morning and hustle for votes until late at night.—Meade County Messenger.

Expert poultrymen claim that after a hen has passed her second year she is no longer fit for laying purposes, and should be sent to the carcass market. This may be so in many cases, and no one will question the fact that the best egg results come from fowls two years old and under. On the other hand one frequently finds individual hens that lay better at three and four years old than when younger, and when such is the case it would be folly to kill such a bird. Before deciding to send all of the hens over two years old to the carcass market, ascertain what each of them is doing in the way of egg production. Then, too, these old hens, many of them, are extremely useful at hatching season, even though the main dependence is placed on an incubator. Be sure the old hen has lost her usefulness before you sentence her to the block.

It is not strange that in every county and in almost every precinct that you may visit there is at least one farmer known as corn grower? He rarely or never fails. The dry and wet seasons come and go, but he "makes corn" and "sells corn." So in every county there is found the man "who grows his own meat" and regardless of cholera and bad crops keeps his smokehouse on his own farm. This peculiar man is, sometimes, a successful truck grower or fruit raiser. He may assume one of several forms, but we may safely call him "Mr. Know How." The average farmer often looks upon him as somewhat of a conjurer, but at bottom we find his success due to intelligent effort. Intelligence can insure crops in the face of disease, chinch bug, boll weevil, bollworm, drought—yes, and floods, too.—Farm and Ranch.

The most essential portion of the garnder work is the making of the soil as fine as possible. The manure should be evenly spread over the ground and then well incorporated with the soil. This is done with a harrow in large gardens, but the spade hoe, and rake are used on small plots. One mistake made with gardens is in using manure that is not well decomposed. The seeds of vegetables are very small, and where the manure is coarse, and containing portions of cornstalks, many of the seeds are covered in a manner to destroy them. When the rake is used the little remaining on the surface should be raked off and thrown back on the manure heap. Another advantage in using fine and thoroughly decomposed manure is that seeds of weeds and grass are usually destroyed during the process of decomposition, and less work will thus be required in the garden. The plowing or spading should be deep, which will be a partial protection against drought, and the spaces between the rows should be hoed after every rain, which not only destroys weeds, but serves to prevent loss of moisture from the soil. Many gardens now have onions and peas up and growing, but it is not too late to put more onions in. Use the sets and lay off the rows two feet apart as the sets are usually worked with the garden hoe or wheel hoe. The sets may be placed six inches apart in the rows. Make the soil deep and fine, and use well-rotted manure, as coarse manure will be an obstruction. Keep the ground between the rows worked and always clean.

When they have been measured most heroes are found to come in half sizes.

The April term of the Boone Circuit Court convened Monday morning with Judge John M. Lassing presiding. The following grand jury was organized: John L. Jones, foreman; Noah Barlow; John W Crigler, Clyde Berkshire, Lum Kennedy, W. W. Grant, Geo. E. McGlasson, Whitmill Ryle, Jas. Botts, James Cleek, C. C. Sleet, Perry Clore. The Judge gave the jury about the usual charge, and called attention especially to newspaper guessing contests that have become so popular in recent years, telling the jury that they are contrary to the laws of Kentucky against lotteries.

Gaunt for the contestants, and M. D. Gray for the propounderr, consuming the entire afternoon session, each putting in his best efforts in behalf of his clients. At the conclusion of Mr. Gray's speech the jury was adjourned until Friday morning. The arguments of S. W. Tolin and W. W. Dickerson were not concluded until about noon, Friday, when the jury took the case, and in about an hour returned a verdict against the will and thus ended the fourth long and tedious trial of the case.

The will was made July 3, 1889, and the testator, Jeffry Powers, died in 1891, and the will was admitted to probate by the county court, and the contest was instituted in the circuit court in November, 1894, by John and Jeffrey Powers, the two sons who were cut off by the provisions of the will. There has been two mistrials of the contest and two trials in which verdicts against the will were returned. Upon the return of the first verdict against the will an appeal was taken to the court of appeals which reversed the Boone circuit court, and it is said that a second appeal will be taken.

The late Judge Greene tried the contest twice, and the trial concluded last Friday was the second before Judge Lindsay as a special Judge. Considerable property is involved and each side is making a hard fight.

NOTES.

Overton Hogan, of Williamstown, took down the testimony in short hand.

W. M. Whitson came down early in the week and remained until all the testimony was in.

Chas. Waller was, apparently, the best contented of the several Verona people, who were here.

Dr. Finnell had not been in Burlington for several years, and his stay here was enjoyed by him.

The propounders' headquarters were at Mrs. Cowen's, while those of the contestants were at the Boone House.

Judge Lindsay is a fair and impartial Judge, and is very prompt in his rulings. He was complimented by all who visited his court last week.

One of the witnesses for the contestants, Mr. Lonagan, is in his 91st or 92nd year. He and old man Powers were born and raised in the same parish in Ireland.

R. Q. Sleet watched the progress of the trial closely. Only on the occasion of the trial of this contest has he visited Burlington for several years. He use to be a familiar figure here during the terms of circuit court, when he was engaged in the practice of law.

It is said that there was a very interesting and animated theological discussion at the propounders' headquarters one night, in which R. Q. Sleet and Dr. Finnell were the principals, the Doctor arguing in favor of universal salvation while Mr. Sleet controverted his position in a lengthy and well delivered speech.

Thomas Garrison, one of the jurors, who lived across Gunpowder creek did not show up on Wednesday until afternoon, on account of the creek being too high to cross. About 11:30 a. m. the sherift started to see what had become of the missing juror, some fearing that he had attempted to cross the creek and was drowned, but he came in.

L. N. Jenkins, Jno. O'Neal, C. W. Lewis and James Callahan, had a jolly time, as did also Frank Cleek. John O'Neal came very near starving one morning. He heard the exhausts of the Recorder's gasoline engine, and having listened about an hour he became impatient and swore, "it takes that fellow a long time to get his wood split." John thought he was splitting wood with which to cook breakfast.

This week the RECORDER prints the ballot and the plan for determining the most popular school teacher in Boone county, which teacher will be given a free trip, including transportation to and from, admission to the World's Fair and board while in St. Louis. Bear in mind this contest is entirely between Boone county teachers. Read the conditions and select the teacher for whom you will vote. A nice trip is in store for some one of Boone's teachers. Go to work for your favorite.

Fred Birkle, 22, son of Joseph Birkle, of Hebron, and Miss Lelia D. McMullen, 18, daughter of Marion McMullen, of McVille, were married at the residence of the groom's brother, Charles, of this place, last Wednesday, Rev. Sproles officiating.

Prayer meeting at the Baptist church has been changed Wednesday nights.

FISCAL COURT.

The fiscal court was in session on the 7th inst., and besides allowing several small claims, the following business was transacted:

Esquires Watson and Walton filed reports in regard to the roads in the precincts composing their districts.

The order made last year requiring the justices to inspect and report on condition of roads, was entered for 1903.

The court directed the jailer to open the court house for use of any person or persons resident or residents of this county, for the use of entertainments, religious meetings, &c., upon being paid a reasonable amount for his services in attending to the building while being so used.

The salary of the janitor of the court house was fixed at $150 for the year 1903.

The following justices reported the collection of delinquent taxes, which they had paid over to the sheriff: Norman, $11; Early, $20 82; Scott, $4; Watson, $3.

B. B. Allphin was appointed a committee to send Willis Parsons to the Confederate Home at Peewee. Mr. Parsons was a confederate soldier, and lost one of his legs in the service. He is about 70 years old.

The superintendent's report shows that the county infirmary has been operated for the first quarter of 1903 at a cost of $340 53. It does not give the average number of inmates for the time.

Dr. H. H. Hays, of Bullittsville, presented a bill for $100 for amputating the arm of Frank Estes in March, 1902. The court allowed $10 of the bill. Dr. Frank Sayre presented a bill for $10 for assisting in the operation, and he was allowed $2 50.

Joseph Myers, overseer of roads, presented a statement showing that cost of opening the Stevenson mill road was $151. The cost of the land required for the road was $339, making total cost of the road $490.

Esquires Early and Gaines and County Attorney Castleman were appointed a committee to erect a barn on the county farm, and to make such repairs on the buildings as are necessary.

Destroyed By Fire.

A telephone message was received at this office Friday morning from C. S. Balsly, of Bullittsville, announcing the burning of C. W. McFee's residence near Francesville on Friday morning about 8 o'clock. No one was at home but Mrs. McFee and her mother-in-law, and the fire on the roof had gained considerable headway when discovered, and is supposed to have been caused by a spark falling on the roof. The neighbors gathered in and by their heroic efforts they succeeded in saving about half of the contents. The building was an old landmark in that neighborhood, having been built over 100 years ago. Mr. McFee carried about $500 insurance in the Boone County Company.

The Republicans of Boone County will meet in mass convention in the Court House, Burlington, Saturday May 2nd 2. p. m., for the purpose of selecting delegates to the Railroad District Convention, which meets at Paris Wednesday, May 6th at 2 p. m. o'clock. The time for holding this convention is ordered by the Railroad District Committee.

T. B. MATHEWS,
Chairman Rep. Com.

Hon. R. J. Breckinridge addressed a small crowd here last Thursday afternoon in the interest of his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Governor. He devoted most of his time to the argument that Gov. Beckham is not eligible to succeed himself, and urged that someone should be nominated about whose eligibility there is no question. His speech was brief, and was concluded by the time he was advertised to begin, and several persons from the country arrived too late to hear him.

Last Friday afternoon as Ezra Aylor's little son was returning home from school, he was assaulted and terribly beaten with switches and sticks in the hands of three of the children of Frank Scales, colored, who lives on the pike near the I. O. O. F. cemetery. Either of the colored children was larger than the little Aylor boy, who showed plainly the marks of violence by his assailants. The colored children were brought before county judge Cason, who fined them one cent and 5 days imprisonment, the imprisonment to be suspended at the option of the judge. They were allowed to remain in jail until about 8 o'clock Saturday night when they were released.

The Burlington horse market was quite brisk last week, the firm of Allphin & Hume being the principal buyers.

Milk absorbs ordor from the moment it is drawn from the cow until the time it is churned. When ever milk reaches the temperature of 100 it is claimed to be in an active state of decomposition. But, while milk is easily affected by outside influences, the adherents to strict rules of cleanliness will greatly aid the dairyman to avoid the changes that often occur. Cooling the milk renders the germs inactive and prevents decomposition for a while, but it should not be overlooked that milk absorbs odors very rapidly when cool. Exposure to odors, gases or violate matter of any kind should, therefore, be avoided, and every utensil used in the dairy should be scalded with boiling water and thoroughly scoured.—Ex.

THE JURY SELECTED.

Testimony Is Being Taken in the Jim Howard Case.

Frankfort, Ky., April 9.—The case of James Howard, charged with killing Gov. William Goebel, opened here Wednesday. The defense filed affidavit as to absent witnesses in seeking a continuance. The commonwealth objected and the court heard in chambers the objection. The affidavit of the defense was later admitted, and a special venire [illegible] citizens of Woodford and adjoining counties were ordered to be present in court Thursday.

Frankfort, Ky., April 11.—The selection of the jury in the Jim Howard murder case was completed Friday afternoon and the opening statements of what the commonwealth and defense expect to prove by witnesses were placed before the court. Judge Ben Williams, of the side of the commonwealth, stated that the prosecution would show to the jury that Gov. W. S. Taylor had the defendant brought here in January, 1900, for the purpose of killing Goebel, and that on Howard's arrival on the morning of January 30, he reported to Youtsey and that Youtsey took him to the private office of the secretary of state and pointed Goebel out to him as he came up to the capitol, and that Howard's reward was to be a pardon for a murder previously committed.

Attorney J. A. Scott, for the defense, stated that the defendant would be able to show the jury that Youtsey, and not he, killed Goebel. The introduction of evidence was begun Saturday morning.

DEATH OF REV. W. H. MILBURN.

He Was the Blind Chaplain of the United States Senate.

Washington, April 11.—Rev. William Henry Milburn, the venerable blind chaplain of the United States senate, died Friday in Santa Barbara, Cal. Word to this effect was received Friday night by Col. D. A. Ransdell, the sergeant-at-arms of the senate. Mr. Milburn, accompanied by his two nieces, the Misses Tinley, left Washington for the Pacific coast about a year ago. The chaplain was in poor health. The change brought no great change in his condition and when congress met in December he forwarded his resignation to Washington, but it was never acted on. The decedent was born in Philadelphia in 1823.

When he was [illegible] years old a playfellow accidentally struck him in the left eye with a piece of glass. For two years he was confined to a dark room under treatment, and when he came out the sight of one of his eyes was entirely gone and little sight was left in the other. He, however, pursued his studies at school and college for about 20 years, the sight growing dimmer until he became totally blind. In the spring of 1838 he went with his father's family to Jacksonville, Ill., and in 1843 he became a traveling preacher of the Methodist Episcopal church, serving in various states.

Mr. Milburn was twice elected chaplain of congress, the first time in 1845, when a little over 22 years of age; was twice chaplain of the house of representatives and lastly chaplain of the senate, to which office he was elected in 1893.

The exciting incident was witnessed by a large number of members of the Reading room, Newport's swell club, but, not satisfied with this audience, young Vanderbilt subsequently brought his fiancee to the scene of the affair and jubilantly rehearsed for her benefit how he had triumphed over the photographer.

It was on stylish Bellevue avenue, just in front of the Reading room that the affair occurred.

TWO SIGNALS.

There are two serious signals of kidney ills. The first signal comes from the back with numerous aches and pains. The second signal comes in the kidney secretions, the urine is thin and pale or too highly colored and showing "brick-dust-like" deposit. Urination is infrequent, too frequent or excessive. You should [illegible] these danger signals before chronic complications set in—Diabetes, Dropsy, Bright's disease. Take Doan's Kidney Pills in time and the cure is simple.

J. F. Wainwright, of the firm of Bones & Wainwright, painters and contractors, Pulaski, Va., says: "Four or five times a year for the past few years I have suffered with severe attacks of pain in my back, caused from kidney trouble. During these spells I was in such misery from the constant pain and aching that it was almost impossible for me to stoop or straighten, and it really seemed as if the whole small of my back had given away. At times I also had difficulty with the kidney secretions which were discolored, irregular and scalding, and I was also greatly distressed with headaches and dizziness. I used a number of recommended remedies but I never found anything so successful as Doan's Kidney Pills. When I heard of them I had an attack and procured a box of them. In a few days the pain and lameness disappeared, the trouble with the kidney secretions was corrected and my system was improved generally. I have every confidence in Doan's Kidney Pills."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Wainwright will be mailed to any part of the United States on application. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents per box.

A Genuine Cinch.

"You cannot possibly escape me," he said lastlessly, and with folded arms, as she looked at him with disdainful defiance in her glance. "I know you are beautiful and I am poor; that you are wealthy and I am homely; that you are good and I am as bad as any one could imagine. Yet as there is a really decent, deserving fellow after you, and as we are characters in a decadent novel, he shall be thrown over and his heart shattered, and I shall win you at the last. There is no help for it—there is no help for it. I am the real hero, though it is all a huge farce to me." Seeing the force of his logic, and wishing to save the author a lot of agony and the readers a lot of suspense and hard work, she surrendered, hateful as the task appeared to her—Baltimore American.

"What do you put on your face after shaving?" asked the man who smelled of bay rum. "Court plaster, usually," replied the nervous chap, gloomily.—Cincinnati Commerical Gazette.

THE WINTER BUG'S REVENGE.

Retaliates Upon a Prying Entomologist Who Pokes Into Its Family History.

An alarming state of affairs exists in a Michigan town, where a scientist—and an entomologist at that—has been bitten by a bug. If there is any one whom one would imagie a bug would respect it would be an entomologist, for he spends his life in the uplifting of the bug species; but it seems not, says the St. Paul Globe. This, however, was an exaggerated case, as the scientist in question went all the way to Michigan from Washington to study into the habits and haunts of the winter bug, and it was the winter bug that bit him. He was bitten on the chin and soon lapsed into a semi-conscious condition, and it is exceedingly doubtful whether he will ever be able again to engage in the pleasant occupation of chasing bugs. It was undoubtedly a bug that was not inoculated with the modern spirit of scientific investigation that bit the professor; it resented [illegible] its manner of living and feared no assistance until it was asked for. It can be fairly said that it was the very best bite of the winter bug, and it is to be hoped that the summer bug is of a kindlier nature and knows a little more about modern science as she is now worked.

A SOCIETY PAIL.

Mary is an humble, but none the less indispensable, servitor in an uptown restaurant. In the small hours of the morning she comes in and cleans the woodwork and the bar floor, so that they will be presentable to the patrons of the next day. Recently she waited after her usual hours in the morning until the steward came in, relates the New York Times.

"Please, sir, may I speak to you?" she asked.

"What is it, Mary?" he said.

"I have a complaint to make," she continued. "It's about that Annie, who cleans up the place above. I had a nice pail, sir, a new one, and I put it in the cellar, and Annie's come along and took it."

"Well, you've got another one, haven't you?" he asked.

"Yes, sir; but look at it. You wouldn't expect a lady to come up where there may be guests and have a pail like that, would you, sir?"

And, appreciating Mary's feelings, which were indicated by the tears that were glistening in her eyes, the steward said he wouldn't.

A Veteran's Story.

Bath, N. Y., April 13th.—The first consideration of the Commandant and Officers in the conduct of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Home here, in the health of the Veterans. Kidney Troubles are the most common cause of ailment, very few of the old men escaping these in some form or other. Of course the comrades do as much as possible to themselves and one of the most popular and useful remedies employed is Dodd's Kidney Pills which seem to be almost infallible in cases of Kidney derangements. Indeed, there are among the veterans, several who claim to owe their lives to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

For instance, A. E. Ayers, who came to the home from Minneapolis, Minn., was given up by four doctors in that city. He had Bright's Disease and never expected to live through it, but his life was saved and his health restored by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

His experience has made the remedy very popular among the men and no one who has used Dodd's Kidney Pills for any Kidney Trouble has been disappointed.

I suffered for months with general weakness and felt so weary that I had hard work to keep up. I had shooting pains and was utterly miserable. In my distress I was advised to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it was a red letter day to me when I took the first dose, for at that time my restauration began. It is clearly shown in this young lady's letter that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will surely cure the sufferings of women; and when one considers that Miss Gannon's letter is only one of hundreds which we have, the great virtue of Mrs. Pinkham's medicine must be admitted by all.

Knowledge of What Is Best More Important Than Wealth Without It.

It must be apparent to every one that qualities of the highest order are necessary to enable the best of the products of modern commerce to attain permanently to universal acceptance. However loudly heralded, they may not hope for world-wide preeminence unless they meet with the general approval, not of individuals only, but of the many who have the happy faculty of selecting, enjoying and learning the real worth of the choicest products. Their commendation, consequently, becomes important to others, since to meet the requirements of the well informed of all countries the method of manufacture must be of the most perfect order and the combination the most excellent of its kind. The above is true not of food products only, but is especially applicable to medicinal agents and after nearly a quarter of a century of growth and general use the excellent remedy, Syrup of Figs, is everywhere accepted, throughout the world, as the best of family laxatives. Its quality is duo not only to the excellence of the combination of the laxative and carminative principles of plants known to act most beneficially on the system and presented in the form of a pleasant and refreshing liquid, but also to the method of manufacture of the California Fig Syrup Co., which ensures that uniformity and purity essential in a remedy intended for family use. Ask any physician who is well informed and he will answer at once that it is an excellent laxativo. If at all eminent in his profession and has made a special study of laxatives and their effects upon the system he will tell you that it is the best of family laxatives, because it is simple and wholesome and cleanses and sweetens the system effectually, when a laxative is needed, without any unpleasant after-effects. Every well-informed druggist of reputable standing knows that Syrup of Figs is an excellent laxativo and is glad to sell it, at the regular price of fifty cents per bottle, because it gives general satisfaction, but one should remember that in order to get the beneficial effects of Syrup of Figs it is necessary to buy the genuine, which is sold in original packages only; the name of the remedy—Syrup of Figs and also the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co. printed on the front of every package.

THE LIVING LORD.

Greatest Fact in the World To-Day is the Resurrection of Christ—The Mockery of the Unsaved Joining in Easter Celebration.

Text:—"But ye...killed the Prince of Life, Whom God hath raised from the dead; whereof we are witnesses."—Acts 3:14, 15.

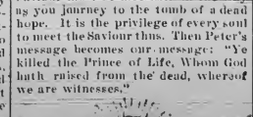
THE Living Lord.—The greatest fact in the world to-day is the fact of the resurrection of Jesus Christ. ... brightest hope of the human race streams from the empty tomb around which the angels hovered. The most potent message which ever fell upon the ear of man was that spoken by the Heavenly messengers who gladly declared that the crucified Saviour had become the Living Lord. It was a dead Lord Whom Joseph had laid sorrowfully away in his own new tomb, but it was a Living Lord Whom God brought forth triumphantly. It was a dead and despised Nazarene Whom the Roman soldiers guarded at the behest of the Jewish leaders who had crucified Him, but it was a Living King Who, treading under foot the dread enemy Death, stepped forth bringing to His subjects the gift of eternal life. The hand of man could seal the tomb in which rested the dead body; the mighty arm of the powerful Roman government could confidently set its watch, but when atonement for sin had been fully paid and God's mighty angel descended from Heaven, his tread shook the earth and broke the seal of man's power and the flashing brightness of his countenance cast man's rule into the dust of utter helplessness. It was a dead Lord to Whom the sad-hearted disciples came to minister, and they found a Living Lord awaiting them Who quickly turned their tears into glad streams of joy, and their needless offering of embalming spices into the living message of, "Go tell!" It was a Living Lord Who during those wonderful 40 days appeared to His disciples and talked with them. It was the same Living Lord, with His resurrected body of flesh and blood, Who in triumph returned to Heaven and took His place at the right hand of the Father. It was the Living Lord Who poured forth upon His waiting disciples on the day of Pentecost the power of the Holy Spirit, and it was the Living Lord Whom Peter held up before that vast assembly of people that day and won three thousand converts. It was the Living Lord around Whom every sermon of the disciples of the early church was builded. Take your Bibles and see how repeatedly and persistently the great fact of Christ's resurrection is referred to. It was the Living Lord to Whose mighty power the miracles wrought were credited, and in the scene which our text brings before us we see the lame man who sat at the Beautiful gate with strengthened anklebones leaping and praising God for the Living Christ; we hear the voices of Peter and John declaring to the amazed multitudes that God had raised up from the dead the Prince of Life, Whom they had slain, and that it was faith in Him which had healed the man whom they all knew, and, midst the rejoicing of the Heavenly hosts and while the recording angel is busy entering the names of the new-born souls, we see five thousand men accept the truth of the message and bow allegiance to the Living Christ.

THE Easter Message.—In the small compass of our text we find crowded the indictment of man, the triumph of God and the mission of the disciples of Christ. Easter's message is of this three-fold character. Out of the blackness and death of man's sin was wrought the resurrection glory of a crucified Lord, and the one command of the risen Lord to His disciples was: Go ye and tell all the world of the Living Christ. If the Easter light shines not through this Divinely-ordered prism its full beauty and its full meaning are lost to the soul. Man's sin that placed Christ upon the cross on one side, the triumph of the resurrection morn with the Living Lord on a second side, and the sensitive, responsive soul of the disciple on the third side reflecting the glory of it all as he sends the light far out into the world. If the glad music of Easter morn has not in it the minor strains of man's need upon which the Heavenly strains of Salvation's song may rest, and it does not set the heart-strings of the disciples to vibrating with the sweet message for others, that Easter music has not in it the full harmony that can satisfy. The world is familiar with the resurrection story, it marks the advent of the day upon its calendar, it prepares in plans and in dress for its coming, it is ready to raise its voice to join in the strain of Easter music, it bows before the empty tomb, it looks upon the risen Christ, it knows the day as one of glad rejoicing in the churches, and with the last grand burst of music of the evening service sounding in its ear it goes back to its activities and its pleasures and forgets, until another Easter day dawns. At Easter time the story of a Living Lord is on everybody's lips, but the transforming power of the Living Lord is not felt because the message is no longer the full resurrection truth which starts with man's sin: "Ye have killed the Prince of Life," and ends with the clear testimony of personal experience of the risen Lord, which can say: "Whereof we are witnesses."

THE Indictment.—The fact of a Living Lord writes deep and black the indictment of the world. "Ye have killed the Prince of Life," is the charge. Your sins and my sins, and the sin of the world nailed Him on the cross. The Easter message of a risen Christ brings condemnation to the world while it makes glad with hope the believing heart. How can the voice of the world be lifted to swell the glad Easter song of a Living Lord, while the indictment of sin stands against it unsatisfied? No song of rejoicing escapes from the prisoner in the dock while the indictment declares his crime and the guilt of lawlessness rests against him. Rather does he plead for mercy. But let some one step before the judge and offer to take the punishment and let the prisoner go free, and hope springs anew in his heart and gives birth to the glad song which bursts from his lips as he goes out of that court-room a free man. The world until it is reconciled through Christ Jesus is at enmity against God. The guilt of sin rests against it until wiped out by the pardoning power of Jesus' blood. That pardon must be accepted before it becomes efficacious to save from the penalty of sin. How is it possible for the prisoner to gain his liberty if he refuses to accept the pardon which is offered him? How is it possible for the world to escape the penalty of sin if it either thoughtlessly or wilfully refuses to receive the pardon which God offers through the sacrifice of His Son Jesus Christ? God says: "He that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God." And He also declares that "there is no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus."

LET us go back to that first Easter morning as it broke in all its beauty and hope over Jerusalem and consider the contrasts between the song sung then and the Easter music as it swells throughout the world today. Then custom had not come to claim the day and plan its celebration as it has to-day, but only the believing hearts echoed the Heaven-born music of a Saviour risen. The angels came singing of the Living Lord and the disciples quickly caught up the refrain and went speeding everywhere with the glad message. But the world could not join in that song. With the bursting of the tomb and the stepping forth of the Living Lord, the soldiers "did shake and became as dead men." And the world shared in that fear and dreadful apprehension. Sin, unforgiven sin, always awakens in the human heart deadly fear when it is brought face to face with God. Then the world had not learned to look the facts of Christianity in the face without meeting God face to face, but when Constantine popularized the religion of Jesus Christ, "the Kingdom of Heaven suffered violence, and the violent took it by force." Pagan festivals were rehabilitated in Christian garb, and the world soon was celebrating with the true believers the birth and the resurrection of Christ. The very name Easter is of pagan origin, and is derived undoubtedly from Eastre, the Saxon goddess, whose festival was annually kept about the same time as Easter. The customs which have grown up around Easter are of secular and heathen origin. The song which the world has learned to sing is about the risen and Living Lord, but He is not allowed to enter. He is not enthroned in the hearts of multitudes of those whose lips sing His praises.

SURELY there is no sweeter music in the ears of Heaven than that which bursts from the heart which has been cleansed from all sin by Christ's blood and which has enthroned the Living Lord therein, but what think you it must be to God to hear human voices raised in praise of the risen Lord when the hearts are closed tight against Him in unbelief? Oh, if we could only hear as God hears, if we could only see as His all-searching eye beholds, much of the rich, full, magnificent Easter music would be turned to a funeral dirge over a dying world which is talking of a living Christ while it is perishing in its sins. Easter flowers would wither and fade at the touch of the unregenerate hand of man, and the popular celebration of the day would become the darkness of paganism. Only the regenerate heart can catch the strains of Heavenly music and send back a song which will mingle with the Celestial harmony. The unregenerate heart can ponder over the truths of God's matchless redemptive work, but there is no light or hope there unless the Living Christ is allowed to come in. The voice, be it cultivated to the richness and scope of the prima donna, may rise and fall with the strains of the glad melody of the Easter anthem, but the sound thereof will reach no nearer Heaven than the gilded dome of the church, unless the heart behind the voice has felt the power and presence of the Living Christ.



SATAN'S Easter.—Think of Satan celebrating the resurrection of Jesus Christ. We do not want to appear irreverent. We do not wish to shock the sensibilities of the human heart. We know that many, many people are not really Christians because of carelessness and thoughtlessness, and because they fail to realize their true attitude toward God. Comparatively few, perhaps, have deliberately and finally rejected God's claim upon them. We suggest the thought of Satan's joining in the Easter rejoicing and festivities so as to bring out forcibly what Easter celebration may mean. God declares that man must either take his stand with Satan or God, that he cannot serve two masters. This being true, which position do you occupy? You are not standing with God until you have accepted His Son as Saviour, and been reconciled to God by Him. You are standing with Satan if you are not standing with God. What does Easter mean to Satan? The Living Lord is the sign of his utter and final defeat. It was Satan in the human heart which moved human hands to place Christ upon the cross. The darkness which settled around the cross in that dying hour was filled with Satan's hellish glee for he believed he had triumphed at last in the death of the Son of God. And if he could, he would have kept the Christ shut up in the tomb, and Roman seal and Roman guard would have held, but the Prince of Life Whom wicked hands had slain could not be holden of death, for God raised Him up. Satan's power and work were broken completely. Could he join in the rejoicing which filled the hearts of the disciples of Jesus? Nay, verily, that song struck the death knell of his hopes. Can he unite today in the Easter celebration? Not more than can the imps of hell play on the golden harps of the angels, or the lost soul of the rich Dives cross over the great fixed gulf and share with saved Lazarus the haven of rest in Abraham's bosom. But the world has learned how to sing the songs of Christian faith, it has made bold to share in Christmas joy and Easter rejoicing, and Satan cares naught for this outward acceptance of Christian truth and share in its observance, while he holds sway in the heart. He does not fear the Easter message which is freighted with the perfume of flowers, the swelling anthems, the plaudits of men and thoughtless rejoicing in the risen Lord. But let the soul be awakened to a sense of its position and its peril as God's indictment is heard declaring: "Ye have killed the Prince of Life, Whom God hath raised from the dead," and Satan begins to tremble and fear the loss of an obedient subject.

THE Triumph of God.—Let us look at another side of our Easter prism and see the Living Lord as the crowning triumph and glory of God. Satan's power was manifested in the death of Christ. The power of God was revealed as He burst the bars of death and brought forth His Son triumphant. The submission on the cross which stilled for sin must be followed by the glory of the resurrection morning, for "if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. But now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept." A triumph means a foe and opposition which are overcome. Satan set himself to the task of alienating the human race from God, and as God throughout the ages moved steadily to work out His plan of redemption He came to the moment of final triumph when Christ rose from the dead.

The triumph of God in the resurrection of Christ is a beautiful linking of the human and the Divine. The successive steps which led to the final triumph through Christ were taken upon the faith of the human heart as it reached out towards God and was obedient to His will. And God has never been without witnesses in the world.

The triumph of God involves three great facts: The final and utter defeat of Satan, the punishment of sin and the salvation of the sinner, and these were wrought out through the Son. Satan met with successive defeats in the wilderness temptation, in Gethsemane and on Calvary, but the overwhelming defeat was accomplished at the tomb where the dead Christ was laid when He had offered a final sacrifice for sin, and where the Living Christ came forth the Prince of Life, indeed, able to give eternal life to all who believed on Him.

WITNESSES.—No wonder Peter, after telling of the wonderful triumph of God in the resurrection of Christ, adds, "whereof we are witnesses." Did you ever notice that the apostles and disciples never testified of anything of which they did not have personal and practical knowledge? They were true witness bearers for Christ. They had a positive message. They knew Christ was risen from the dead because they had seen Him, had handled Him, and tracing out the prophecy of God's Word found that it was all fulfilled in the Christ. The third side of our Easter prism is the "Go tell," which falls upon the ear of every disciple after he has met and talked with the Lord. That Easter morning commission did not involve a theological training. They were not to saturate themselves with a lot of theories, and doctrines, and ologies and isms. They were simply to go tell what they knew of the Christ. We need trained teachers and preachers. Those who are intellectually as well as spiritually equipped for service. But preachers and teachers realize better than do others, perhaps, that their efforts are well-nigh powerless unless the individual Christians take up the message and "Go tell." And their message is simple. They must know man is a lost sinner, and that there is a Living Lord to save. The awfulness of sin must be felt as a personal condition of guilt, and under the burden of sin the Living Saviour must be met with in the way as you journey to the tomb of a dead hope. It is the privilege of every soul to meet the Saviour thus. Then Peter's message becomes our message: "Ye killed the Prince of Life, Whom God hath raised from the dead, whereof we are witnesses."

MATTERS MUNICIPAL.

The greatest shoe manufacturing towns are Lynn, Haverhill and Brockton, Mass., and the great hat producing towns are Bethel and Danbury, Conn., and Orange, N. J.

Out of a population of 60,000 in Waterbury, Conn., from 27,000 to 30,000 are Irish or of Irish descent. They predominate in municipal affairs and their societies are the strongest in the city. It is one of the few cities in the country where Gaelic is taught in night schools.

Prof. W. T. Hand, of the Mississippi agricultural college, has been on a visit to New York. While there an acquaintance said to him: "You do not find much of an agricultural nature here, do you?" "Oh, I am picking up a few hints," answered the professor. "For instance, W. Street can give me points for a lecture on watering stock; your 'tenderloin' seems to be given over to the sowing of wild oats and your street cars bear hay pressers and cotton gins as compressers."

Joseph Battell, a millionaire land owner of Middlebury, Vt., has offered to rebuild the business portion of that town, which was recently destroyed by fire. The proposition of Mr. Battell is to buy sites of all the buildings burned and to erect on each a fireproof building. Mr. Battell will also assist the concerns to resume business. The only restriction that he makes is that the voters of the village must guarantee in a mass meeting that no saloons shall ever be opened in the village.

WOMEN IN BUSINESS.

Mrs. Laura B. Alderman is a successful apple grower in North Dakota. When she started her orchards the neighbors all prophesied failure. But her apples now have a reputation of their own.

A Chicago girl, Miss Elinor C. Clapp, has won reputation as a designer of odd jewelry. An apt student of arts and crafts she creates distinctive effects with metals and the semi-precious stones for material. Her work is so much admired that many have sought to imitate it, but with indifferent success.

Miss Mabel Hay Barrows is a Greek scholar who not only writes the Greek plays, which are performed by the students in various women's colleges, but coaches the actors in the parts and is an all-round stage manager and scene suggester. Her work is praised by lifelong students of Greek life and movement.

Mrs. Zimmerman, of Minneapolis, runs a hospital for injured wax figures. The lame, halt, blind and seedy images that have seen too much life at the milliner's, the hairdresser's and the dry goods shop are restored to wholeness and beauty under her skillful ministrations. Mrs. Zimmerman employs industriously under a capable wax figure maker until she had mastered the details of the business and for several years now has practised successfully in her peculiar field.

OVER COPPER WIRES.

The earth itself is negatively electrified.

Paris is supplied with electricity by seven different companies.

The pole mileage of telegraphs in Kansas amounts to 9,249 miles and its assessed value is $851,828.

Hitherto Tyndall's theory that the azure tint of the sky is due to minute corpuscles in the air has been accepted. Prof. Springer, of Liege, has proved that the blue of the sky is purely electrical in origin, and an essential quality of the air.

Congressman D. F. Wilber, of Oneonta, N. Y., writes:

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio:

Gentlemen:—"Persuaded by a friend I have tried your remedy and I have almost fully recovered after the use of a few bottles. I am fully convinced that Peruna is all you claim for it, and I cheerfully recommend your medicine to all who are afflicted with catarrhal trouble."—David F. Wilber.

"Whenever the cold weather sets in I have for years past been very sure to catch a severe cold which was hard to throw off, and which would leave after-effects on my constitution the most of the winter.

"Last winter I was advised to try Peruna, and within five days the cold was broken up and in five days more I was a well man. I recommended it to several of my friends and all speak the highest praise for it. There is nothing like Peruna for catarrhal afflictions. It is well nigh infallible as a cure, and I gladly endorse it."—C. F. Given.

A Prominent Singer Saved From Loss of Voice.

Mr. Julian Weisslitz, 175 Seneca street, Buffalo, N. Y., is corresponding secretary of The Sangerlust, of New York; is the leading second bass of the Sangerlust, the largest German singing society of New York, and also the oldest.

"About two years ago I caught a severe cold while traveling and which settled into catarrh of the bronchial tubes, and so affected my voice that I was obliged to cancel my engagements. In distress I was advised to try Peruna, and although I had never used a patent medicine before, I sent for a bottle.

"Words but ill describe my surprise to find that within a few days I was greatly relieved, and within three weeks I was entirely recovered. I am never without it now, and take an occasional dose when I feel run down."—Julian Weisslitz.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

FRANCIS' QUICK TRIP.

Meteoric Journey of the World's Fair President Abroad.

EFFORTS CROWNED WITH SUCCESS.

He Shook Hands With Three Monarchs and a President—Caused Increased Interest In the Exposition Project—President Francis a Former Kentuckian.

European nations have frequently been amazed at the manner in which North Americans do things. Their latest cause for wonderment is the meteoric trip of David R. Francis, President of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition company, a former Kentuckian, who recently visited five capitals in the old world. A cabled invitation asked President Francis to be present at a banquet to be given by Americans in London on Washington's birthday. The governor's associates on the World's fair management urged him to attend and make a tour of Europe in the interest of the fair.

The return voyage was made in even better time than the outward journey, the German steamship reaching New York March 17. Many entertainments had been planned for President Francis in the metropolis, the most pretentious of which was a banquet tendered by the Missouri society at the Waldorf-Astoria on the evening of March 19th.

On Monday, February 9, Governor Francis decided to make the trip. The next day he left St. Louis for New York, where he arrived the following evening at 6 o'clock. Early on the day following, which was February 12, he took passage on the La Bretagne, of the French line, and arrived in Havre eight days later, the trans-Atlantic journey being made in excellent time, considering the heavy seas into which the boat continually pounded. The governor left Havre immediately for London, going by way of Southampton, and reached the British capital on the morning of February 21. He had barely time to make a change of raiment when he was hurried to a luncheon given by Joseph H. Choate, United States ambassador, and other prominent men. The next day was Sunday. Monday morning, February 23, he was presented to King Edward, who invited him to a private conference on the day following, and in the evening he attended the banquet at Hotel Cecil, which had been the initial cause of his making the journey abroad. February 24 he met King Edward in private and conversed with him for half an hour, securing a promise that his majesty would send to the St. Louis World's Fair the Jubilee presents of his late mother, Queen Victoria. On February 26 Mr. Francis met a number of Englishmen prominent in commercial life, and on the following day he attended a dinner given by Lord Lansdowne.

On March 1 the start was made for Paris, which was reached the next morning, and before the sun had time to set Governor Francis had been received by President Loubet and had held several conferences with other prominent Frenchmen. Retiring late he arose early March 3 and took a train to Madrid, which was reached on March 4, and after a conference with the prime minister of Spain and the ministers of state and agriculture, the exposition company's president started back to the French capital, reaching there the evening of March 6. The next day he met other Parisians who were interested in the coming great exposition, left there in the evening and arrived at Berlin March 8 in time for dinner with Ambassador Charlemagne Tower. The day following, March 9, he was granted a private interview with Emperor William, who conversed long and earnestly concerning the World's Fair and promised to do all in his power that Germany might be well represented at St. Louis in 1904.

That very night he departed for Belgium, and was received by King Leopold at the palace at Brussels. From this monarch he secured a promise of a personal visit to St. Louis next year. This audience at an end he left immediately for Cherbourg, France, and sailed from that port the following day, March 11, on the Kron Prinz Wilhelm.

BIG SALE SOUVENIR BUTTONS.

The Kentucky building souvenir button is bringing hundreds of dollars to the Kentucky Exhibit association fund. County agencies have been established throughout the state and many labels are now adorned with this attractive little souvenir. The cut shown herewith is an exact reproduction, so far as is possible in black and white. It gives little idea, however, of the beauty of the button. The button is one and a fourth inches in diameter and has seven colors harmoniously worked out in its design.

THE ATOMIC THEORY.

The Atomic Theory is a true one. The grandest whole is resolvable to fractions. The universe is but an infinite attraction of particles, or as the poet has it:

"Little drops of water—
Little grains of sand.
Make the mighty ocean
And the beauteous land."

Acorns cover the earth with oaks, and the ocean with Navies. The atmosphere, the great ocean surrounding our earth, is but a mighty accumulation of infintesimal atoms of oxygen and hydrogen. Human knowledge is but an aggregation of small facts made by successive generations. The little bits carefully treasured, growing at length into a mighty pyramid.

Inventions are principally due to little things. Pendulum clocks were invented from Gallileo's observing the lamp of a church swinging to and fro. Printing owes its origin to an old man, who cut the alphabet out of bark for his grandchildren, and wrapping them in parchment the sap made the impression of the letters on the parchment.

The universal law of gravitation was discovered by the falling of an apple. The lightning of a spark on some material mixed in a mortar gave us gunpowder. The stupendous results of the steam engine may be attributed to an individual observing the movements of the lid upon a boiling tea-kittle. Some children of a spectacle maker placing several lenses in opposition observed that distant objects appeared nearer. This was followed up by older heads, the result being the telescope.

Dr. Sam Brown got his idea of a suspension bridge from a spider's web, which he saw hanging from the bushes on a dewy morning; and Brunel took his first lesson in boring the Thames tunnel from a little ship-worm that he observed cutting its way through a piece of wood.

Electricity was discovered by a person noticing that a piece of rubbed glass, attracted small bits of paper. Observation of the nerves of our common frog, when placed in contact with different metals, was the germ of the electric telegraph, which binds the intelligence of continents together, and has put a girdle around the globe.

What seems a trifle often turns the scale of fate and decides the destiny of nations. The cackling of a goose once saved Rome from the Gauls. The pain produced by a thistle warned a Scotch army of the approach of the Danes. The tears of Virgilia and Volumnia saved Rome from the Volscians, when nothing else could move the vengeful heart of Cariolanus. Anne Boleyn's fascinating smile split the great church of Rome in twain, and gave a nation an altered destiny. A floating branch of berries enabled Columbus to quell the mutiny of his sailors, and thus became a factor in the discovery of America; and the common house-fly hastened the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

We recognize the importance of little things in nature. Bits of stone and fossils of minute animals in teligiously interpreted have solved the science of Geology, and brought about the practical operations of mining, in which large capitals are invested and vast numbers of persons are profitably employed.

It is by the work of the coral insect that the world is ever changing and rebuilding. Islands are made for trees to grow upon, and living men to gather into cities and kingdoms.

They have built up a breakwater more than one thousand miles long to keep the sea from devouring the shores of Australia. No skill or toil of man could have raised so strong a barrier against the ceaseless onset of the waves. The sands of Sahara are but an ocean of fossil shells that were once inhabited by living beings so small that eight million could live in the hollow shell of a grain of mustard seed.

It is the little things of earth that impress us most with the great power of God, when He would send the most terrible scourge upon disobedient nations, he does not need to shake the heavens with mighty thunder-bolts, or to call forth fountains and cataracts of fire from the bosom of the earth. The rust, the mildew, and the weevil, are among the least of living things, and, yet, God needs no mightier ministers of vengeance to destroy the food of nations and cause millions to mourn.

In the minute attention to things that are least the Divine Architect teaches us the great secret of all successful work. He makes a leaf or blade of grass with as much care as he makes a world. He polishes the scaly coat of the tiniest insect as perfectly as he feathers the wings of the cloud-cleaving eagle.

The beautiful structure of a strong well-built, symmetrical character, is built out of individual acts of duty. Little acts of selfdenial a grateful use of little blessings, a wise improvement of little opportunities, a diligent cultivation of little talents, patient continuance in well doing under little encouragement—these things make men great in the sight of God.

"True worth is in being, not seeing;
In doing each day that goes by
Some little good; not in dreaming
Of great things to do by and by."

FREE TRIPS TO ST. LOUIS WORLD'S FAIR.
ALL EXPENSES OF THE 120 MOST POPULAR SCHOOL TEACHERS IN THE STATE PAID.

School children and public generally invited to vote to determine the most popular teacher in every county. Votes ten cents each, ten cast at one time. All money over and above trip expenses of teachers to go into erection of the Kentucky Building at the Exposition. Every voter thus given the satisfaction of knowing a worthy cause and important object have been aided, at the same time a favorite teacher has received recognition. Contest conducted under auspices of Educational Exhibit Committee of Kentucky Exhibit Association, the organization formed to raise $100,000 for a Kentucky Building and full display of the state's products and resources at the Fair, the Legislature having failed to make an appropriation. Every educator in the State, whether teacher in public or private schools, or professor of faculty in ... college or university, school, county or the ... institution, Exhibit Committee alone excepted.

Names of all school children voting to be enrolled in the Kentucky Building at the Exposition. Kentucky will have an educational exhibit occupying 2,500 square feet of space in the Palace of Education. The Exposition is to be the greatest international event in the world's history. The 120 teachers chosen will be lucky indeed in being tendered this trip to the Fair. Every county state is its own best popular educator. The county outside of Jefferson casting the largest number of votes will be allowed to send two teachers—the most popular and the second most popular.

THE VOTES WILL BE TEN CENTS EACH, TEN CONSTITUTING A BALLOT.

At ten cents each every school child in the State will be able to cast at least one vote for his or her favorite teacher. But the voting will not be confined to school children.

PARENTS OF PUPILS OR ANY OF THEIR FRIENDS MAY VOTE. The purpose of the Association being to elect the most popular school teacher in each county, as so considered by the public generally, as well as by the school children. Ballots contain ten spaces, so one dime of ten pupils may be arranged and each giving ten cents be credited with his or her vote. If one prefers to cast ten votes, it may be done by writing his or her name on one of the spaces and remitting one dollar. It is not required that the name of the person voting be given and several spaces for voters' names may be left blank. The Association wants, however, to enroll in the Kentucky Building at St. Louis next year the name of every child who cast one or more votes in the contest. Pupils are asked therefore to align their names plainly to the ballots cast.

ALL EXPENSES OF THE TEACHERS WILL BE PAID by the Association. This will include railroad transportation from Louisville to St. Louis and return, board at one of the best hotels in the city for six days and admission to the exposition grounds for six days.

THREE PARTIES WILL BE MADE UP FROM THE MOST POPULAR TEACHERS to make the trip more profitable and more enjoyable. Each of these parties will consist of forty (40) teachers. This would make a total of 120 teachers, but as there are only 119 counties in Kentucky, the Association has decided to allow two teachers—the most popular and the second most popular—to go from that county—Jefferson excepted—which casts the greatest number of votes in the contest.

ALL TEACHERS IN THE STATE STAND ON AN EQUAL FOOTING in this contest. The teacher with only twenty pupils may receive more votes than the teacher with five or six times as many enrolled in his or her school, because the voting is not confined to children. The public will be an important factor.

Votes may be cast for any person who taught school during 1902 or is teaching now. This gives the teacher of a five months' school, which closed in November or December, the opportunity to be voted for during the vacation period.

ANY NUMBER OF BALLOTS MAY BE CAST AT ONE TIME. There is no limit. The more dollars sent in for any one teacher the more votes he or she will be credited with.

ONE DOLLAR CASTS TEN VOTES; TWO DOLLARS CASTS TWENTY VOTES; THREE DOLLARS CASTS THIRTY VOTES; FOUR DOLLARS CASTS FORTY VOTES; FIVE DOLLARS CASTS FIFTY VOTES; TEN DOLLARS CASTS A HUNDRED VOTES; ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS CASTS ONE THOUSAND VOTES.

All of the money received in this contest, over and above that used in defraying expenses of the 120 most popular teachers of the State on their trips to the World's Fair, will go for the erection of a Kentucky Building at the exposition; so every voter in this contest may have the additional satisfaction of knowing that he has aided a worthy cause.

THE STANDING OF THE CONTESTANTS WILL BE PRINTED FREQUENTLY in each county to show his or her friends how the race is being run. Begin voting NOW for your favorite school teacher. The votes will be counted under the supervision of the Educational Exhibit Committee of the Association. The personnel of this committee is as follows: Prof. H. G. Brownell, Louisville, Chairman; Prof. H. V. McChesney, Frankfort; Prof. R. P. Halleck, Louisville; Prof. W. H. Bartholomew, Louisville; Prof. F. Paul Anderson, Lexington; Dr. Chas Palmer, Danville; President William Dinwiddie, Jackson; Dr. W. O. Frost, Berea; Dr. B. B. Huntoon, Louisville; Dr. R. V. Mullins, Louisville; Dr. Arthur Yager, Georgetown; Superintendent M. Cassidy, Lexington; Superintendent S. L. Frogge, Frankfort; Prof. C. J. Crabbe, Ashland; Prof. McHenry Rhoads, Owensboro; Prof. T. R. Alley, Bellevue; Prof. C. C. Cherry, Bowling Green; Prof. Enos Spence, Louisville; Miss Pattie S. Hill, Louisville; Mrs. Fenlly H. Bracken, Louisville, and Mrs. M. B. Tucker, Louisville. Members of the Educational Committee are not eligible to election in this contest.

REMEMBER EVERY COUNTY ELECTS ITS OWN FAVORITE TEACHER. Competition between counties only applies to the race for the 120th trip, the county, outside of Jefferson, casting the largest total number of votes being granted the distinction of sending two teachers.

The result will be announced in every paper in the state, and, in addition to this, a congratulatory message will go to the teacher elected in each county. Later the details of the trip will be arranged, each teacher chosen being given the privilege of selecting the month—June, July or August, 1904—in which he or she wants to make the trip.

Bro. Hathaway, what am I doing in the watch contest that is unfair? I have been informed that you accuse me of unfairness. The editor receives the same amount from a subscription from me as from you. I have a right to dictate to you what you should do with your commission; neither have you the right to say what I should do with mine. You are an agent, why? for the money there is in it. I, for the good of the Recorder and the people.

The contest I have in mind if I am winner in the watch contest is this: If the editor buys me what I desire—a good gold fountain pen, I will leave the difference between pen and watch in his hands, then the present correspondents of the Recorder within the county to place an equal amount in his hands, to be given to the correspondent sending the best items, beginning at the close of the watch contest, and close January 1, 1904, length of items not to be considered. To be decided by vote of the readers of the paper.

SEVERE ATTACK OF GRIP

"When I had an attack of the grip last winter (the second one) I actually cured myself with one bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says Frank W. Perry, Editor of the Enterprise, Shortsville, N. Y. "This is the honest truth. I at times kept from coughing myself to pieces by taking a teaspoonful of this remedy, and when the coughing spell would come on at night I would take a dose and it seemed that in the briefest interval the cough would pass off and I would go to sleep perfectly free from cough and its accompanying pains. To say the remedy acted as a most agreeable surprise is putting it very mildly. I had no idea that it could or would knock out the grip, simply because I had never tried it for such a purpose, but it did, and it seemed with the second attack of coughing the remedy caused it to not only be of less duration, but the pains were far less severe, and I had not used the contents of one bottle before Mr. Grip had hid me adieu." For sale by all druggists.

AT FORT YELLOWSTONE.

The President Arrives There in Splendid Condition.

Cinnabar, Mont., April 17.—President Roosevelt came into Fort Yellowstone Thursday looking to be in splendid condition and enthusiastic over the good time he has had. Secretary Loeb met him at Maj. Pitcher's headquarters and the two transacted some routine business, the first work the president has done with his secretary since going into the park. After his return from the president, Secretary Loeb issued the following statement:

"Cinnabar, Mont., April 16.—Maj. Pitcher reports that the president and his party have returned from their eight days' horseback trip in the north of the park and to Yellowstone. The party consisted of the president, Maj. Pitcher, John Burroughs, an orderly, the scouts and the packers with the mule train. All of the party are in excellent health and not an accident of any kind occurred. On entering the park, the president informed Maj. Pitcher that he would not under any circumstances fire a shot at anything while in the park and he took neither rifle nor shotgun with him. The party had some good fishing and the president and Mr. Burroughs spent a large part of their time in following and watching at close quarters the great herds of game, chiefly elk, but also mountain sheep, deer and antelope. The party starts to-morrow for the interior of the park to visit the geysers and perhaps the falls of the Yellowstone. They will go in sleighs, on horseback, or on skiis, according to the condition of the snow.

The Strangler's Spouse Says She Is in Love With Another Man.

Mrs. Knapp said Thursday that she will file suit for divorce from her husband because, she says, she is in love with another man. "I have thought for the last two weeks that a divorce wasn't necessary," she said, "because Alfred wasn't where I could get to him and that I therefore didn't have to pay any attention to him, but a lawyer told me that if I wanted to go with another man, or, perhaps, marry him, I'd better get a divorce. So I will. I know Alfred Knapp is a bad man and I'm ashamed to bear his name."

YOUTSEY TESTIFIES.

Tells How Howard Made Ready to Shoot Gov. Goebel.

Every Available Inch of the Space in the Court Room Was Filled, Many Women Gracing the Row of Seats.

Frankfort, Ky., April 17.—In the trial of Jim Howard, charged with killing Goebel, Henry Youtsey went on the witness stand at 11 o'clock Thursday.

Youtsey said he met Howard January 20, a few minutes before the shooting. Howard came into his (Youtsey's) office and handed him a letter, written by Youtsey at Taylor's dictation. Howard said he wanted a pardon for killing Geo. Baker. I told him he could get this and more. About that time Goebel entered the gate. I was just in the act of describing Goebel, when Howard said: "Never mind; I see him."

"I left the room, and as I got half way down the steps I heard the crack of the rifle. It was followed by the pistol shots. I told Howard he had better go and see Taylor. Howard said he did not want to see Taylor then. I took Howard into Caleb Powers' office and explained it to him how Goebel was to be killed. I showed him the window he was to shoot from, showed him the Marlin rifle and the cartridges containing steel bullets and smokeless powder."

On cross-examination Youtsey said that he and those acting with him followed Gov. Taylor implicitly.

"We knew," said he, "that Goebel was to be killed, and that we had the governor and the pardoning power behind us in all we did. So we were not afraid. Taylor was legally and morally responsible for all we expected to do."

In answer to a question as to why he decided to tell what he knew, Youtsey said that up till Yerkes was defeated for governor he had hopes of a pardon. Yerkes was defeated, however, and that about a year after he decided to talk.

"I was made a cat's-paw and a scapegoat by Taylor, Powers and all of my so-called co-conspirators," said Youtsey, "and I determined that they, as well as me, should bear part of the punishment."

When Youtsey resumed the witness box Thursday afternoon every available inch of the space in the court room was filled, many women gracing the rows of seats outside the railing. Attorney Violett continued the cross-examination for the defense and tried to extract from the witness an admission that he was hopeful of receiving a reward either in the way of a reduction of his sentence or lighter work in the prison. Youtsey said no inducement of that kind had been held out to him. The only man who ever talked to him about any kind of reward was James A. Scott, one of the counsel for Howard. "This was just before I was arrested," said he, "and Scott told me if I would tell enough to bring about seven convictions he would get me $35,000." He admitted having sent for Gov. Beckham and asking his advice. The governor held a conference with him and he said that Beckham told him he should tell everything but that he was offered no kind of inducement. Attorney Violett asked a number of questions, the evident purpose of which was to show that Dr. Johnson and not Howard shot Goebel. Youtsey admitted that he and Johnson had planned to kill Goebel and that Johnson would do the shooting. Witness, however, did not approve of Johnson's plans for the killing and discarded him. He did not see him after January 25.

ATTEMPT TO ROB A SALESMAN.

Cincinnati, April 18.—E. C. Sullivan, an Indianapolis (Ind.) art student, sandbagged and attempted to rob Col. Ed Lovell, a jewelry salesman, in the former's room at the Burnet house Friday afternoon. The young man in the forenoon went to the jewelry store of George Newstedt, where Lovell is employed, and picked out a diamond ring worth $120. He made a deposit on it and requested Lovell to bring it to his room in the Burnet house at 4 o'clock.

The salesman arrived promptly on time and had hardly seated himself when Sullivan struck him on the head with a stocking full of wet sand, which, however, failed to knock him senseless. The assault with his assailant and a desperate encounter occurred, in which Lovell finally triumphed and Sullivan was arrested. The latter characterized the affair as a "darn fool kid trick."

Earl M. Sullivan is the son of D. H. Sullivan, a traveling salesman in Indianapolis, and the boy bore a good reputation in that city and the family is highly respected.

O'HARA FOUND GUILTY.

Fifteen Minutes Was Required By the Jury to Make Up Its Mind.

Cincinnati, April 18.—It took the jury in the United States court Friday just 15 minutes to find that Turf Commissioner W. W. O'Hara was guilty, as charged, of using the United States mail to defraud the persons who invested their money with him. The suddenness with which the verdict was returned surprised both the defense and the government officials. There was an immense array of accounts, documents, letters and books in the evidence offered, and it was expected the jurors would spend some time looking over parts of them. Nothing of the kind occurred, however, for the jurors had their minds made up from the moment of leaving the courtroom as to what had been shown and proved on both sides and they were in no need of talking over details. In fact, all they did was to sit down and take a ballot. It showed that all 12 were for conviction and the verdict was made accordingly.

THE CUP CHALLENGER.

Dismantled by a Gust of Wind and Rendered Helpless.

The Accident Will Cause a Delay of a Month or Probably More in the Challenger's Sailing For the United States.

Weymouth, April 18.—Misfortune which seems to have pursued Shamrock III. culminated Friday in a gust of wind which dismasted the yacht and left the challenger a helpless wreck in Portland harbor. The accident will cause a delay of a month, and probably more in the challenger's sailing for America, but Sir Thomas Lipton said to a press correspondent Friday night that the accident would not be allowed to interfere with the yacht's reaching New York in time for the cup races. "My injuries," added Sir Thomas, "are painful. I was severely shaken up by the fall and have a smashed hand, but everything is insignificant compared with the loss of poor Collier, a brother-in-law of Capt. Wringe, who was killed in the accident. Collier has been continuously in my service since the time of the first Shamrock. You can rebuild a yacht but you can't replace a man."

The loss of the seman, Collier, cast a gloom over those on board Sir Thomas Lipton's steam yacht Erin, but the sentiment of the crew was unanimous in expressing relief that it was not "the governor."

Sir Thomas Lipton is the recipient of over 200 telegrams of sympathy. King Edward wired his regret at the injury to Sir Thomas Lipton and his grief at the loss of life. Messages were also received from the prince of Wales, Baron Knollys, C. Oliver Iselin, Lewis Case Ledyard, Clement A. Griscom, Commodore Bourne, Commodore Adams, Countess of Shaftesbury, who christened the Shamrock III., the American society in London and many others.

The prince of Wales telegraphed from Sandringham that he was distressed by the news and honed that the injured were doing well. The king sent a message of sympathy to Collier's family.

The story of the disaster shows that when the boats started in the morning there was nothing to scare the most cautious skipper. Club topsails were accordingly set on both yachts. The challenger looked fit to race for a man's life. Outside the breeze was steady while beating in shore it was more squally, but the challenger carried it handsomely. When making a tack on the port a hard squall struck the boat; Capt. Wringe gave it a few spokes of the wheel to luff but, finding it stood the wind well, he paid off and raced the yacht at a pace it never before had attained. The Shamrock III. went half a mile at this record pace and then hove about to come to the starting line on the starboard. A lighter squall took it as it paid off. The boat filled, gathered way and shot forward. The catastrophe was so sudden that it was over before those aboard realized that there was the slightest danger. Spectators whose eyes had been momentarily turned away looked again to find instead of the queenly racer, a helpless wreck. The mast snapped off. It fell clear or there might have been a heavy loss of life.

It is surmised that Collier was crossing the deck at the time and lost his balance with the lurch of the boat.

NEVER SAW SUCH LARGE YIELDS.

The Climate Is Healthy—The Winters Are Pleasant In Western Canada.

Writing from Stirling, Alberta, to one of the agents representing the Canadian Government Free Homestead Lands, Mr. M. Pickrell, formerly of Beechwood, Kentucky, says of Western Canada:

"In the first place we will say that the summer season is just lovely indeed. As to the winter, well we never experienced finer weather than we are now enjoying. We have just returned from Northern Alberta and will say that we found the weather to be very mild, the air dry, fresh and invigorating. Considering everything we can say that the winters here are most pleasant, healthy and enjoyable to what they are in the States. Here it gets cold and continues so till Spring—there are no disagreeable winds. In South Alberta it is some warmer—two to four inches of snow may fall and in a few hours a Chinook wind come along, evaporating the entire snow, leaving terra-firma perfectly dry, in fact, we did not believe this part until we came and saw for ourselves and we now know what we herein write to be just as we write it. There has not been a day this winter that I could not work out doors. Farmers here are calculating on starting the plough the first of March.

"As to farm wages, we would not advise a man to come here with the expectation of living by his days' work, but all who do want a home I advise to have nerve enough to get up and come for there never has been, and may never be again, such a grand opportunity for a man to get a home almost free.

"As to the crops. I have been in the fields before harvest, saw the grass put up and the grain harvested, and I never saw such large yields. I saw oats near Edmonton over six feet tall that yielded 80 bushels per acre, and I talked to a farmer near St. Albert who had a field year before last that averaged 110 bushels per acre, and weighed 43 pounds to the bushel. All other crops would run in proportion—as to potatoes and vegetables, the turnout was enormous. I have such reports as the above from all sections that I have visited, and that has been every community between the Edmonton district and Raymond in the Lethbridge district.

"As to stock raising, I would advise a man to locate in this place, or any place, in South Alberta, but for mixed farming, I would say go up farther north, say near Lacombe, Wetaskiwin or Edmonton, where it is not quite so dry and where there is some timber to be had. I will say that nowhere have I ever seen a better opportunity for a man, whether he has money or not, to obtain a home. Nowhere can be found a more productive soil, better water and a better governed country than Western Canada affords. Inducements to the homeseeker are unexcelled. I met two men near Ponoka on the G. & E. R. R., who borrowed the money to pay for their homestead and in four years those two men sold their farms—one for $2,500, the other for $3,000. I met a man near Wetaskiwin who landed here with 25 cents six years ago. He is now worth $8,000. The advantages for ranching are excellent, in fact I do not believe this section can be beat. Markets are good; as to living, a family can live as cheap here as they can in the States. The average yield of oats in this neighborhood, last year, was 70 bushels per acre; wheat averaged 35, barley 40, and the beet crop was good. In consequence of the successful cultivation of the beet, a large beet sugar factory is being erected at Raymond, seven miles from here.

"In conclusion, I will say that N. W. T. from Manitoba to a long distance north of Edmonton produces most wonderful crops. Lakes and rivers abound with fish, and game is plentiful. And that this is unquestionably the country for a man to come to if he desires to better his condition in life. I would advise the prospective settler to look over the Lethbridge, Lacombe, Wetaskiwin and Edmonton districts before locating.

"I will locate in the Edmonton district next Fall and several families from the States will locate with me. In the meantime, I will receive my mail here and will be pleased to give the interested all the information desired."

For information as to Railway Rates, etc., apply to any agent of the Canadian Government whose names appear elsewhere in this paper.

"No, Mr. Slowup," said the fair possessor of the square chin, "I must respectfully decline to become your other half."

"B-but why?" asked the astonished young man who had figured from his form sheet that it was he under the wire in a canter.

"Because," replied the female extender of the frosty digit, "the man I marry must be brave and fearless. To-night you let out the information that you have loved me for five long, weary years but have not dared mention it until the present writing. A man who has no more nerve than that would hide under the bed while his wife went downstairs to interview a burglar who was making a raid on the family larder. Therefore, Mr. Slowup, I will work the piano for a little slow music while the curtain drops on the farewell scene. You will find your hat on the usual peg of the hall rack. Good evening."—Chicago Daily News.

AN OUTLAW KILLED.

Hulse, His Accomplice, Surrendered, and Another Pal Was Smoked Out and Jailed, the Posse Firing the Building.

Bakersfield, Cal., April 20.—James McKinney, the outlaw, was shot and killed here Sunday. Deputy Sheriff Tibbets was also killed and Constable Packard was fatally shot.

Sheriffs Kelly, of Kern; Collins, of Tulare, and Leovin, of Arizona, with Officers Will and Burt Tibbitts, Gus Tower and City Marshal Packard surrounded McKinney shortly before 11 o'clock Sunday morning at the [illegible] house. Will Tibbitts and Packard approached McKinney in the house and ordered him to surrender. McKinney answered by shooting. Will Tibbitts was shot through the stomach and died shortly after; Packard was shot through the neck and shoulders and dangerously wounded. Burt Tibbitts, a brother of the dead deputy sheriff, shot McKinney through the mouth and neck, killing him.

McKinney had been in Bakersfield two days and was harbored by friends in a Chinese joss house. The house was a regular fort. In the place with McKinney was Hul Hulse, a desperado. McKinney had a sawed-off shotgun in his hand while Hulse used a pistol. Hulse would not obey the order to come out of the barricaded house and the fire department was ordered to the scene. Hulse gave up. He was taken to the county jail. An immense mob surrounded the jail and tried to take him from the officers.

Another accomplice of McKinney was known to be in the house where the battle took place, but he would not surrender like Hulse. At 4:50 p. m. the building was set on fire and in 15 minutes the man was smoked out and taken to jail.

McKinney was accused of having committed several murders.

A RUNAWAY ELECTRIC CAR.

Forty-Five Persons Were Injured in Allegheny, Pa.

Pittsburg, Pa., April 20.—Because an electric brake refused to work a crowded Western avenue car of the Pittsburg Railway Co. ran away Sunday on Federal street, Allegheny, wrecked a carriage, broke the safety gates of the Ft. Wayne railroad, derailed a fast moving freight train, and then went to pieces. Almost all of the 45 passengers aboard the car were hurt, though only one fatally.

The names of those who required the attention of a physician were: H. Hirsch, hurt internally, several ribs broken; probably die. Mrs. Emma Lowe, hurt internally; condition serious. J. B. Mitchell, wife and infant, badly bruised and shocked. Stephen Harrison, both wrists sprained. Bruce Harrison, scalp and face cut. M. Lehman, Mrs. Howard Bell [illegible] Bopp. Clarence Cochran and Mrs. Emma Booth, all suffered severe cuts and bruises.

When the motorman tried to make the safety stop on the steep grade at Stockton avenue he found the power brake was useless and the car beyond control. It had about 125 yards to go before reaching the gates of the railroad, which were down to let a freight train pass. The big car gained momentum every second. Harry Catlin was trying to get his carriage off the track, but failed and it was wrecked completely. The car dashed through the safety gates, struck an empty refrigerator car in the moving freight train, turned it over and derailed several other cars. By this time the trolley was a wreck itself, and its passengers were strewn in all directions the wonder being that there were not many fatalities.

PRESERVE HOME AND FAMILY.

The Jews Are Doing It Far Better Than the Christians.

Washington, April 20.—"The Jews are preserving the home and family better than we Christians are doing. I do not know how to account for this, but I do know it to be a fact." Bishop Satterlee, of the Episcopal church, made this declaration in a sermon here Sunday night in which the main subject of his discourse was divorce. "Men," said the bishop, "are losing respect for the home and caring less for the family, the unit of our civilization. On the shoulders of the husbands and fathers of the land," he continued, "rests the responsibility for the low estate to which the family has fallen in this country. This fostered and encouraged the greatest curse of the age—divorce and the loose manner in which the sacred marriage vows were being kept.

"The great evil—the most frightful danger—of our age is divorce and the breaking down of the family institution," said the bishop. "If it is not stopped the women of this country and our race will be degraded within 50 years."

ARE HELD FOR TRIAL.

Missouri Senators Accused of Accepting Bribes.

Lieut. Gov. Lee is in Chicago and Says He May Return to St. Louis the Latter Part of the Week.

Jefferson City, Mo., April 20.—Cole county grand jurors returned four indictments, three presumably against state senators for the charged acceptance of bribes in connection with the alum bill legislation. Strict secrecy is maintained and definite information as to indictments can not be obtained. But by inference it is believed that one indictment is against a St. Louis [illegible] against senators living outside of St Louis and the fourth against somebody living in Jefferson City. This makes seven indictments thus far issued by the grand jury.

After the indictments were returned the grand jury adjourned to April 27, to permit Judge Hazell, who convened the body, to hold court in Morgan county. Attorney General Crow says that he felt confident the indictments would stick, as they were issued on strong evidence.

Judge Hazell took under advisement the cases of Page and Hickor, who refused to testify to the grand jury from whom they received bills of the denomination of $1,000 and $500. Judge Hazell will only send the men named to jail for contempt as a last resort.

Senator Buell Matthews, of St Louis county, is among those for whom indictments have been returned by the Cole county grand jury, and he is here arranging for bond. Circuit Judge Hazell has fixed the amount of the bond at $5,000.

Senator Matthews declares he is innocent of any crime for any vote he cast and asks that the public withhold criticism until he comes to trial, when he will establish his innocence.

KING EDWARD.

Whether He Will Visit the Pope Remains a Profound Mystery.

Rome, April 20.—Whether King Edward will visit the pope continues to be a profound mystery. No official communication on the matter has been received but the vatican is of the opinion that King Edward can not fail to meet the pontiff, if for state reasons alone, as his majesty's announced visit to Ireland soon will take place and should he slight the head of the Roman Catholic church he certainly would arouse the resentment of the 3,500,000 Catholics in Ireland, and for no apparent or practical reason, especially as the feeling in England toward Catholics is now very moderate.

All the western part of Venezuela, except Maracaibo, the revolutionists claim, is occupied by revolutionary forces and the [illegible] that the revolution is strong in the vicinity of Caracas. President Castro is reported by the revolutionists to be suffering from lack of troops.

THE many friends of Dr. Furnish here at his old home have been reading closely all the newspapers contain in regard to the investigation at the Lakeland Asylum, of which he is superintendent, and they do not believe for an instant that the Doctor would continue in service a single hour an attendant known to be cruel and inhuman to the patients under his or her care. If the patients have been mistreated in some instances as it is claimed, the action of the offending attendant has been kept from Dr. Furnish, who entertains the greatest sympathy for the unfortunate persons under his care, and fully realizes the responsibility of the position he occupies. It is believed here that Dr. Furnish will be fully exonerated when the report of the investigation is made.

Since the above was put in type Mr. Charles F. Taylor, Chairman of the investigating committee, has given out the following: We all feel that we have been aided by Dr. Furnish in every possible way during the investigation, and no member of the committee believes that he has at any time been guilty of neglect or duty.

Robert J. Breckinridge last Saturday made a formal announcement withdrawing from the contest for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Kentucky. The note which he sent to Chairman Young was very laconic, and simply states that he has been advised by his friends and coworkers that he cannot win the nomination. Further than the contents of the note Judge Breckinridge had nothing to say for publication. He seemed to be in an absolute good nature with both his opponents, and resigned the hope of leading the Democratic party in the next campaign with the utmost equanimity. His letter was as follows:

"DEAR SIR: I am within the last few days advised by my friends in whose judgment I have the utmost confidence, that I may not expect, under existing circumstances, to win the nomination for Governor at the May primary. I have no disposition to maintain a hopeless contention nor to wage a losing fight. I beg, therefore, to notify you that I am no longer a candidate for the nomination to which I have referred. With hearty good wishes for the continued success of our party, I am very truly yours,

ROBERT J. BRECKINRIDGE."

Half a million dollars a day is what it will cost Uncle Sam to carry the mail the coming year. The appropriation for the fiscal year, beginning next July will be $153,000,000. The postal appropriation is now the largest single expenditure made by the government, the present estimates being considerably more than pensions, which hitherto has been the biggest single item. But the people pay the bill for postage, for the sale of postal stamps nearly equals the expense of carrying the mails, and would now do so if rural free mail delivery had not been undertaken.

Bracken County has three candidates for State offices. Robert Greene, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Clerk of the Court of Appeals, Daniel McMath of Foster, nominee of the Socialists for the same office, and Chas. L. Gray, seeks the Railroad Commissionership on the Republican side.

THE banking business is on the boom in this county, three now being in the process of organization. If the pace set is kept up for a while Boone will become a county of bankers, and banks will exceed, in proportion, the borrowers.

The better the ground the less the amount of seed required to sow an acre.

Much that is new and important regarding agricultural seeds is now being ascertained, and the Agricultural Experiment stations are the chief instruments in this important service.

Then the quality of seed has a good deal to do with the amount of seed; and fortunately a constantly increasing number of farmers are learning how to attend to this sort of business for themselves accurately enough for their own practical purposes.

Though much has been learned in recent times regarding this seed business, vastly more remains to be learned about it before all that should be [illegible] known.

How many cultivators of the soil can tell the number of good seed to the pound?

The boys and girls going to school from farm homes would be advantaged by working out problems of this character, and they but need to have their thoughts directed aright in order to cause them to be glad to do the like.

Of course, it is commonly known that about three bushels of oats and three pecks of rye, say, should be sown to the acre.

This is where the boy or girl might do some instructive ciphering by counting the seeds actually needed to seed a square foot well, and from that calculating for any extent required.

Big figures—figures mostly ahead of all estimates made in advance of the actual figuring or counting—have lately been reached for some of the principal farm seeds.

Of course, seeds will vary some; but in a pound of good red clover seed there ought to be about 256,000 seeds; orchard grass, 64,000; tall oat grass, 536,000; Kentucky bluegrass, 3,374,000; red top, 6,800,000.

Some of these seeds are very light and small, yet they mostly possess great vitality, if but given the right sort of care.—Home and Farm.

Under the patronage of Emperor William there was held in Berlin recently a unique exposition, calculated to increase the importance of the potato in German agricultural and industrial life. The exhibits consisted of a variety of machinery for distilling alcohol from potatoes. The Emperor desires to create a supply and demand for a native. German product capable of taking the place of natural gas and petroleum and also to enable the German farmers who can raise potatoes in all parts of the empire in practically unlimited quantity to find a new and profitable use for their crops. By simple processes every farmer can become his own manufacturer of alcohol. In 1902 something like 50,000,000 gallons of denaturized alcohol was distilled and used for motor vehicles, lamps and cooking purposes, and "spiritus," as the product is called here, will eventually make the nation independent of foreign supplies of petroleum, kerosene, gasoline and benzine.

No wonder that we export so much beef to Europe. The latest statistics show that while this country has 603 pounds of beef animals per capita, Europe has but 186 pounds per capita. The United States exports about $200,000,000 worth of provisions, including meats. Mr. Hobbs, an authority on the subject in this country, says that the number of cattle in this country per hundred people in 1860 was 71, in 1888 was 84, in 1890 was 82, in 1900 was 77 and that since then, while the number of cattle has remained about stationary, population has increased rapidly each year. With an increasing demand at home and abroad, he thinks that cattle will never go to so low a price as in former years.

The farmer who can sell an article from his farm without taking from the land any of its fertilizing elements is sure to make a profit if the cost of the labor is not too heavy. When fat is stored on an animal, or butter is a product, the soil loses none of its fertility, as all of the starch, sugar and fat on the farm comes from the air. Plants absorb carbolic acid gas and give off oxygen through the agency of their leaves and it is this carbon in the plants which finally becomes converted into butter, lard, suet, etc.

No bride or groom should be given a telegram while on the way to church. It is positively a sign of evil.

The greatest danger from colds and grip is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for this disease we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous disease. It will cure a cold or an attack of the grip in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

Bids for the construction of the Belieview Baptist Church building will be opened and passed upon by the building committee on Saturday, May 2nd, 1903,. Plans and specifications may be seen at Corbin's store in Belieview, Ky., or will be furnished to bona fide bidders on application.

Miss Nellie, daughter of Edgar Berkshire, got one of her fingers so badly hurt, last Friday, that it was necessary to amputate it at the first joint. Revs. T. B. Cook and T. W. Barker conducted the Quarterly Meeting here, commencing last Friday night. Fifteen years ago Rev. Last Sunday afternoon lightning struck a locust tree standing about 15 feet from Tony Bentler's residence. Several window glass were broken and the members of the family slightly shocked. At first Mr. Bentler thought the gun had been discharged in the house, but an investigation soon showed that the lightning got its work in on the locust tree.

While here last week Rev. T. W. Barker did not fail to get in some work in the interest of the Behtel Grove Normal and Commercial School, at the head of which is Prof. Henry Newton, well known in this county. Judge Lassing evidently has a nack for disposing of business.

The propounders of Jeffrey Powers' will executed an appeal bond, last Friday.

By the next term the circuit court room will present a very much better appearance.

Atty. John L. Vest, of Independence, was the last legal illuminary to leave town, last week.

The grand jury returned 13 indictments on Friday—an unlucky number on an unlucky day.

The grand jury returned a long list of witnesses to be summoned to appear before the next grand jury.

The petit jurors were detained three days, last week, during which time they tried two persons for lunacy.

The petit jurors made their $4 a day, last week, while they could not have done much at home, on account of the weather.

The county clerk's report showed that during the last four months he had recorded 128 deeds, 58 mortgages and issued 18 marriage licenses.

Judge Lindsay, of Owenton, came up last Thursday to pass on the bill of evidence and exceptions for the purpose of an appeal of the Powers will case.

Judge W. M. Finley, of Covington, who use to attend the Boone Circuit Court regularly, was in attendance last week for the first time in quite a while. Since litigation has got to such a low ebb in this county, Covington attorneys are rarely seen here.

Walter Vest, of Verona, and one of the petit jurors, last week, conceived the idea that he would like to go before the grand jury just once, and it happened that he was called before that body one day, and he says that he had been in places several times where he came near losing his life, but nothing ever frightened him as badly as that grand jury did. He has no desire to repeat the visit.

Wm. Kinney, who lives at the top of the hill on the pike just west of Idlewild, bought of B. R. Gaines 23 acres of land lying between his land and Idlewild, for $1,100.

A horse belonging to J. F. Blyth was badly crippled, one day last week, by the boy who was trying to catch it, hitting it with a rock and a frcturing a bone in one of its legs. The mare had to be shot.

A colored man who works for W. L. B. Rousé, near Limaburg, was trimming apple trees, last Thursday, when he fell out of a tree, bruising up one of his shoulders pretty badly. At first it was thought the man was seriously hurt.

Supt. Early, of the county infirmary, informs the Recorder that Samuel Ellis was not found dead in bed, as reported, last week, but, on the contrary, there were two persons in the room at the time the old gentleman died, one of whom was standing at the foot of the bed.

"Calbert"

By LOUIS V. JEFFERSON.

(Copyright, 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

HAVE you seen the last issue of the Clipper?" The question was asked by a rather plump, smooth-faced, pleasant sort of fellow, as we were lounging in the rotunda of the Watson house—a resort of the 'profesh' between seasons.

Upon my answering in the negative, he pushed back his Panama, settled himself down in his great armchair, put up his feet at a convenient angle, on another, displaying a pair of pas- [illegible] took on an expression of retrospective amusement, he continued:

"Well, Lew Calbert is dead. Did you ever know him? Did a stunt in the continuous. Smoke pictures and magic and such stuff. Oh, he was good, and I'm sorry to hear he's dead. I was his side-partner once, and I always did like him. He was all right, every way you take him, and there'll be lots worse off for his funeral. I never will forget the time I was working with him on the Empire circuit. That was eight years ago. Oh, he was a top-liner when he died, I tell you! He got his $300 a week and never played on Sundays.

"He was as brave as a lion and as quick on the trigger as they make them, and he never stood for anything crooked nor underhand anywhere. He was great shakes for helping the weak, and I've seen him give his last dollar away to set up some woman whose husband or partner had deserted her. I remember once we were doing a brother song and dance stunt down at Memphis at the Grand. On the bill there was the usual melange from grand opera to prize fighting, and among them was a team doing fancy shooting and knife throwing. They were a man and his woman—circus people, I think—who were trying their luck in vaudeville—and they stopped at the same hotel as we did; in fact, had the very next room. He was one of those little, wiry, black-haired chaps with a temper like a tiger, dissipated and cruel as they make them; and she was one of those slender, delicate types of women with a high voice and yellow hair that you see every once in awhile. She was a swell dresser, and quiet and peaceful; but to look in her face when she wasn't on exhibition, a blind man could have seen the trouble there. First time Calbert saw her, we were at band rehearsal Sunday morning, and she came in, with her hands full of her grips, and this fellow following her, scolding and swearing at her as if she was a slave. She surprised us from the fact she didn't answer back. Calbert was right in the middle of a solo, with the orchestra strumming away, half asleep, when they crossed behind him, and the fellow—Athene, I think he called himself—let out an unusually ugly oath. Calbert stopped short, wheeled about and stared him coldly in the face. The man half paused and his lips parted over his ugly white teeth, as if he dared any interference. Calbert eyed him for a moment, and then said: 'What sort of a pup are you? Don't you know a woman from a cat?'

"'How did you get in this?' 'Tend to your own business. She's my wife,' he answered.

"'Well, I don't care if she's your mother. My business is to attend to any man that swears at a woman in my presence, and if you speak once more like that while I'm around, one or the other of us will have to cancel for this bill. See?' and he eyed him squarely in the face.

"Their stunt was to do some fancy shooting at swinging targets, hitting each one alternately while the orchestra kept time to the shots by playing the 'Marseillaise,' breaking glass balls on a time limit, and all that sort of stuff, and ending with a display of knife throwing. [illegible] thinking when one considered what might have happened if ever there should be a mistake. You've seen the act, haven't you? No? Oh, every circus has it. They stand a woman up against a board and throw knives at her, trying to see how near they can come to her without hitting.

"Well, I remember, one evening, after the show was over, and we had gotten back to our room, Calbert was sitting on the end of his trunk unlacing his shoes, and I was trying to make up my mind whether I wanted a drink or not, when we heard his squeaky little voice suddenly raised in the next room, in a most sickening oath. Oh, I swear myself, lots more than I ought to, but I never could stand hearing a man curse a woman. He let 'em fly at her in a blue streak, and then there was a rush of feet, a struggling sound and a woman's voice in pleading tones that ended in a gurgle. It all happened so quick that I was still shivering in the shock when I looked up and saw Calbert's face, set and white. In about two shakes he had passed me, dashed out into the hall and threw himself against the other door. By chance it was not locked, and I reached there just in time to see him grab the dirty villain by the throat as he bent over the woman's form, lying across the bureau, and whirl him backwards across the room. It took just two licks to settle him, and when I pulled Calbert off, the other was meek as a lamb. The woman had pulled herself together and tottered over to the mantle, where I noticed she spit blood into the fender, and I can hear her yet, as she said in a broken, sobbing voice: 'Don't hurt him! He didn't mean no harm!'

"The next day, Thursday, I noticed that he had been drinking hard, and wondered whether the manager would let him go on or not. He went on all right, but he was so shaky and nervous that he balled his part all up and quivered his act from start to finish. In the first 16 shots to music, he missed 13 straight, and ended by throwing his rifle across the stage. Then he essayed to shoot backwards at a target by looking through a mirror, and missed again. This seemed to enrage him beyond bounds, and he kept up shooting at the thing until the manager had to whistle to him from the wings, while the audience gave him the laugh. Then the woman did her turn, and hit everything before her, and the audience, seeing how matters stood, gave her three straight encores. That aroused his jealousy and put a point on his hate, and, nerving himself, he walked out, grabbed up a gun, and emptied it at a flying target in a truly wonderful manner. I was in hopes that that would end the business, and that the woman would not let him finish with the knife-act, for he was really in no condition, but she seemed to either not fear him, or to fear him worse off the stage than on it, and she promptly placed herself before the board while he gathered an armful of knives and walked down front and snarled at the house.

I noticed behind her, in the right wing, Calbert was standing, his head partly bowed and his eyes bent on her as if he would look right through her. I saw him loot at the man in front, and then his fingers clutched into a fist and the veins on their backs stood out, as when a fellow gets ready to punch somebody a lick As Athene gripped his first knife by the point, whirled it around his head and threw it into the air, I saw him watch it hurtle past, like a cat watches a mouse, afraid to breathe.

Athene had turned and bowed to the audience, his thin lips curling back over his white teeth like a wolf's who had just shown his skill in playing with his victim. Once more he turned and cast a knife, and this time I caught my breath, for I saw that it was aimed at the head and would hit very close. It pinned a curl to the board and I saw a shudder go through her form as if she, too, had expected it to be her last, but still she stood up and looked without seeing far into the flies over my head.

As Athene turned to bow the second time I heard a rustle and looked across. Calbert had stepped out, grabbed a pistol and stepped back. No one saw him, or seemed to notice it, and I do not believe that Athene knew he was posted where he was, for when he turned for his third cast I am sure that from the gleam in his eyes he was not thinking of anyone or anything but just the plot in his dirty brain. His lips were grinning, and I heard him softly curse as he aimed a knife at the woman before him. All at once it flashed over me what he intended doing. I don't know how it was, but I felt I knew as well as if he had told me. He was drunk. His hand was shaky. He had proven it by his inability to shoot. He had gotten drunk for a purpose.

Across the way I could see Calbert half crouching with the pistol raised in his hand. Evidently he had noticed it, and I caught myself wondering if he would shoot the man before it was too late. He seemed about to do it, when, with a final maudlin giggle, the thing whizzed away, and I saw a streak of reflected light for one instant in midair, grabbed the scene against which I was leaning—and then there was a terrific report, followed by a rattle, and the knife fell broken at my feet.

Calbert with his gun had done it just as it seemed about to enter her neck he had fired, and some Fate had guided his bullet! The woman must have known it, for she had fainted, and lay limply against the board and I saw Calbert's face through a cloud of revolver smoke. Out in front, his arm still raised, Athene stood entranced, while from every run between the scenes the shifters and company were peering and the audience had jumped upon its feet. The horror of it was in everybody's face, and every heart had stood still. One moment more and their would have been a bedlam and the performance would have been ruined, had not Calbert had the presence of mind to save the situation.

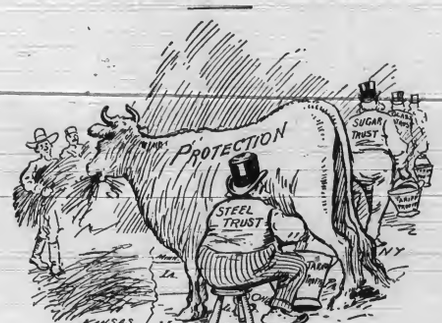
With his gun still in his hand, he walked down front, smiled in his most winning fashion, bowed stepped to the side of the astonished Athene, gripped him firmly by the wrist, bowed again to the audience, whispered to the other to do the same, and gradually backed into the wings as if it had all been a premeditated affair, and he had been waiting for the shot! Wonderful! Oh, but the effect was immense. I never saw a finale so thrilling. For a second or two the house could not get over its scare, and they did not catch on, but when they did they sank back to their places with a sigh of relief that we could hear behind the scenes. Someone laughed and then the applause broke out in a perfect storm. Athene wanted to go out and take it, but the manager calmly gripped him without a word and held him back while Calbert went on After it was all over we revived the woman and made up a purse for her and sent her away—back to her parents, I think it was, she went; but the little devil himself, we had to turn adrift from the simple fact that we had no evidence to hold him. It killed his show business, however, and I heard later that he got stuck like a pig with one of his own knives by a Spanish woman down in New Orleans, and I have always been glad of it. He certainly deserved something heroic."

TRUST AND TARIFF ISSUES.

Democrats Are Asked to Enlighten Secretary Shaw on the Subject.

It is a great thing to find a statesman who is willing to ask questions and thus obtain reliable information on subjects that he does not thoroughly understand. Hon. Leslie M. Shaw, secretary of the treasury, who, on the Iowa prairies, had but little opportunity to study high finance, or the tariff or trust questions, so he naturally asks for information about these matters of the democrats who are competent to advise him. He has heard of "the Iowa idea" from Gov. Cummins, but he can hardly be blamed for not understanding exactly what is meant by it, for the governor, Senator Dolliver and their organ, the principal republican newspaper of the state, are [illegible] them very clear in explaining why the trusts are sheltered in their monopoly by the present high protective tariff. Therefore, Secretary Shaw, in the speech he made at Peoria a few days ago, said: "I would like to have our democratic friends who are advocating this remedy, explain why they would remove protection temporarily or permanently from monopoly produced goods." The democrats, unlike Secretary Shaw and the republicans do not believe in monopoly, and will if given the power, so revise the tariff that those products of trusts and combines that are sold at a high price in this country and a lower price in foreign countries shall no longer be protected. The present duties on trust productions range from 30 to 100 per cent., thus allowing the trusts to add that much to the price they charge here for their products. If this tariff was taken off, the trusts would have to reduce the price of their products to what foreign competitors could export the same class of goods after paying the freight, and the profits that those who handle the goods would charge.

Take barbed wire, which sells in Pittsburg for $2.60 per 100 pounds, is sold in Liverpool for $1.86 per 100 pounds, a difference of 40 per cent., and this is just about what the duty amounts to. The price of barbed wire in Iowa or in other states is the price quoted with freight and profits added.



The paper trust has a monopoly of print paper, and is also sheltered by the protective tariff, the Democrats would place that necessary article on the free list, and thus allow competition to come in and reduce the high price that the trust has been charging the newspaper proprietors. The list of trusts which are so protected exceeds 100, and if Secretary Shaw favors the people and not the corporations, he must openly espouse the cause of the tariff reformers.

Those who do not care, or are too partisan to be willing, like Secretary Shaw, to take the advice of democrats on the tariff and trust issues, can obtain similar information from a number of republican leaders whose eyes have been opened to the shelter the trusts have been vouchsafed by the protective tariff. The chairman of the republican congressional committee, Mr. Babcock, has made a number of statements that answer Secretary Shaw's inquiries, and there is no doubt he will send such as he has had printed to any inquirer who will take the trouble to write to him. Senator Dolliver, Gov. Cummins and Comptroller Roberts are on record in favor of revision, though still declaring for the principle of protection. Senator Dolliver, in a speech in the senate, said that some of the tariff schedules were intentionally made too high, yet the republicans refused to ratify even the slight reductions that the reciprocity treaties called for.

No one claims that a revision of the tariff will entirely obliterate trust extentions, but the democrats and many republicans are convinced that the tariff adds greatly to the price that the trusts charge for many of their products, and that the old claim that infant industries need protection to build them up has long become obsolete by the formation of those giant corporations that are called trusts.

——Secretary Shaw signed last Monday a warrant for $3,000,000 for the treasurer of the Philippine islands to cover the relief appropriation. The Philippines continue to prove quite an expensive luxury. They have already cost this country over $400,000,000, which is probably more than the gross value of all the trade they will bring us in 100 years.—Atlanta Constitution.

"THE COW THAT GAVE SUCH MILK."

She takes feed, and lots of it, from the farmers and laborers and she gives milk, and lots of it, to the trusts and monopolies.

ROOSEVELT ON TRUSTS.

In his speech on trusts at Milwaukee on April 3, President Roosevelt said:

"Not only is the legislation enacted effective, but in my judgment it was impracticable to attempt more."

He was demanding much more when on his stumping tour last fall and when his attorney general was suggesting to Congressman Littlefield what the president wanted done. Littlefield prepared the anti-trust bill and got it through the house. It was pigeon-holed in the senate by order of the trusts, and with the expressed consent of the president.

In his Milwaukee speech the president spoke sarcastically of "alleged remedies" that "seek to destroy the disease by killing the patient." He then added: "Others are so obviously futile that it is somewhat difficult to treat them seriously or as being advanced in good faith. High among the latter I place the effort to reach the trust question by means of the tariff. You can, of course, put an end to the prosperity of the trusts by putting an end to the prosperity of the nation; but the price for such action seems high."

Apparently, President Roosevelt has changed his mind since he resigned from the Free Trade club in New York, shortly after he was elected to the assembly there in 1884 on an independent, fusion and anti-Platt ticket. He was then speaking strenuously for free trade, and resigned only because he thought and said in a letter to Poultney Bigelow, that he thought that his membership would stand in the way of political promotion. He said: "I am a republican first; a free trader afterwards." Now he appears to be a republican first, last and always, and has forgotten that he ever was a free trader. Politics certainly produce some strange results on economic ideas.

Again the president said in his Milwaukee speech:

"We should be false to the historic principles of our government if we discriminated, either by legislation or administration, either for or against a man because of either his wealth or his poverty."

This sounds all right, and would be all right if it were "backed up by deeds;" for, as he told us last summer, "words are good only when backed up by deeds!" But as the president belongs to a party that has enacted tariff legislation which does discriminate in favor of a few and against the many and which protects monopolies and trusts while they prey upon the people, and which permits them to sell goods to foreigners at 30 to 100 per cent. less than is charged here, what becomes of the president's fine sounding phrases? What do these same trusts care for his "publicity" as long as he does not touch the tariff which protects them in their plundering business? What do they care for his toy "bureau" and its sham restraints, if they can keep their tariff privileges?

——Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan is said to be preparing a great gift for the American people. If Mr. Morgan really wishes to give them something, he might permit congress to pass an effective anti-trust law.—Detroit Free Press.

——William E. Curtis, the Washington correspondent of the Chicago Record-Herald, says that no further attempt will be made to pass the ship subsidy. At the same time Mr. Curtis admits that three-fourths of the republican members of the house are in favor of the measure. He explains that the bill recently before congress was defeated because the republicans of the northwestern states joined with the democrats. The Louisville Courier-Journal, however, hits the nail on the head when, in commenting upon Mr. Curtis' statement, it says: "The truth is, it suits the purpose of the ship subsidy grabbers to create the impression that they have abandoned this raid on the treasury. We have already had experience of that kind of tactics."

The Longest Sentence.

A schoolmaster was giving his class a lesson in grammer when he asked the boys to tell him the longest sentence they had ever read. There was silence for a minute or two, but at last a small boy stood up and said he could remember the longest sentence he had ever read.

"Well, Tommy," said the teacher, "what is it?"

"Imprisonment for life," replied the boy. —N. Y. Tribune.

He Wasn't a Cheese.

The physicians were holding a consultation beside the cot of the man supposed to have appendicitis concealed about his person.

"I believe," said one of the surgeons, "that we should wait and let him get stronger before cutting into him."

Before the other prospective operators could reply the patient turned his head and remarked feebly: "What do you take me for—a cheese?"—Baltimore American.

"They Waited" and "Saw."

This was what the doctors said to Mr. A. B. Smith, of this place. These doctors had been treating him for years, and he got no better. They thought that nothing could permanently cure him. He says:

"My kidneys seemed to be so large that there wasn't room for them, and at times it seemed as if ten thousand needles were running through me. I could not sleep on my left side for years, the pain was so great in that position. I had to get up many times to urinate, and my urine was sometimes clear and white as spring water, and again it would be high colored and would stain my linen. The pain across my back was awful. I was ravenously hungry all the time.

"After I had taken Dodd's Kidney Pills for four days my kidneys pained me so bad I could hardly sit down. On the morning of the fifth day I felt some better, and the improvement continued till I was completely cured.

"As this was months ago, and I am still feeling splendid, I know that my cure was permanent and genuine."

A Barrier.

"What have you in the way of beefsteak to-day?" asked the cheerful customer, who hadn't paid his bill.

"Well," replied the frank butcher, "I reckon about the only thing in the way is its price."—Baltimore News.

DYSPEPSIA OF WOMEN.

A great many women suffer with a form of indigestion or dyspepsia which does not seem to yield to ordinary medical treatment. While the symptoms seem to be similar to those of ordinary indigestion, yet the medicines universally prescribed do not seem to restore the patient's normal condition.

Mrs. Pinkham claims that there is a kind of dyspepsia that is caused by derangement of the female organism, and which, while it causes disturbance similar to ordinary indigestion, cannot be relieved without a medicine which not only acts as a stomach tonic, but has peculiar uterine-tonic effects as well.

Thousands of testimonial letters prove beyond question that nothing will relieve this distressing condition so surely as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It always works in harmony with the female system.

NO FLATS IN HEAVEN—CHILDREN WANTED THERE

Text:—"He (Abraham) looked for a city which hath foundations, whose Builder and Maker is God."—Heb. 11:10.

"Lot lifted up his eyes and beheld all the plain of Jordan....Then Lot chose him all the plain of Jordan."—Gen. 13:10-11.

ABRAHAM and Lot were both looking for a dwelling place; a spot which they could call home. Abraham had his eyes focused upon Heavenly things, so that "he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose Builder and Maker is God." Lot, with his eyes fixed upon the fruitful plain below, saw that it could satisfy worldly ambitions, and so he "chose him the plain of Jordan," and went there to live. Abraham could calmly, even cheerfully, see Lot take the best of the land, for his eye of faith beheld with undimmed vision the glistening turrets and the golden pavements of that Celestial City, designed by God and built upon the enduring rock of His eternal purposes. It may be that when Abraham went home and told his wife of the bargain he had made with his nephew Lot that she was very much dissatisfied and scolded him for his short-sighted folly. And it did seem for a few years as though Abraham had made a mistake, but during the centuries which have rolled around the centuries since then Sarah has had plenty of time to change her mind, and I imagine as she walks with Abraham through the rare gardens of the Celestial City, sharing in the peace and joy and glory of that beautiful place, she wonders how she ever could have let a little patch of ground down by the Jordan make her unhappy and dissatisfied. And Lot? Well, after his bargain with Abraham. I suppose he used to run up and visit his uncle occasionally to tell him of his great prosperity and his accumulating riches. He probably had many a quiet little laugh with himself over the easy way in which he had overreached his uncle, and wondered a good many times how Abraham could be so contented and so easily satisfied. But while Lot was gathering the world's gold in heaps, Abraham was laying up treasure in Heaven, which he is enjoying to this day; but Lot, poor, poverty-stricken soul that he was, got into Heaven "so as by fire," and every blessed thing he had was burned up.

SOME one has beautifully told of an imaginary but very probable scene in Heaven. Two souls have passed from earth and entered the pearly gates of Heaven. Each seeks its mansion which the Lord has been preparing for them in fulfillment of His promise. The Master leads one, who has been a gardener, and who has dwelt in a little thatched cottage in one obscure corner of his employer's lordly estate, to a splendid mansion placed in a goodly location and bids him enter, for this is his mansion which has been prepared for him. The other soul, who, while on earth, had lived in the mansion on the place where the first soul had toiled in obscurity, and was none other than the mistress who had daily given him his orders, was then taken by the Master to a humbler part of the city where the houses were smaller, and lower, and plainer, and pointing to one which was the meanest of all on the street, He bids her enter. An exclamation of surprise and bitter disappointment bursts from her lips and she exclaims: "Surely, Lord, this place cannot be intended for me. I have been used to living in a mansion. The stately house which my former servant has entered must be mine and this place his, for he has always lived in a rude, mean cottage of two rooms upon my estate." But the Master, with tender tone and compassionate look, said: "Nay, dear soul, this is in truth your mansion. No mistake has been made. I have done the best I could with the materials you gave Me. So little treasure did you lay up in Heaven while on earth that I was hard put to even so small and unpretentious a dwelling. But your humble and faithful servant, whose good and kindly deeds and godly life were the talk of all in the community, laid up his treasure here with such lavish hand that it was necessary to enlarge the plans several times and place minarets and turrets all over the splendid structure to use up all the material he provided." Abraham "looked for a city which hath foundations, whose Builder and Maker is God," and he undoubtedly secured one of the finest mansions in the city. Lot looked to the plain of Jordan and chose his dwelling place there, and he could count himself fortunate that he even obtained standing room in Heaven.

ONE of the problems of this life is that of choosing a dwelling place. We have to live somewhere, and house hunting becomes the task of nearly every one some time during life. A few people never know what it is to move from one home to another. A great many move but seldom, while multitudes move yearly or biennially. Some people move, it is said, because it is cheaper than paying rent; others move to get out of their own dirt and because it is the easiest way to house clean; others move from habit and because of the restless spirit which craves change of scene and surroundings, and some others move because larger accommodations are made necessary by growing families. And house hunting is part of the experience. At this season of the year the tramp of many feet are heard as they hurry hither and thither in search of a home, and, verily, then God what they find after. It is a long and weary hunt which the homeseeker pursues, generally. He knows the number of rooms needed and the price he can afford to pay, and he seeks until he gets what he wants. He will not take five rooms when he wants seven rooms. He will not pay $40 per month when he can only afford to pay $25 or $30. He knows a new home must be found and he is fairly in his search until it is found.

Man is very faithful and thoughtful in care of the physical man. Strange, is it not, that he is so careless of his soul's needs? The soul which is sheltered temporarily in a house of clay will need a permanent abiding place some day. Why not exercise the same wisdom in providing for the soul's needs as is displayed in looking after the needs of the body? Why not be as diligent in house hunting for the earthly dwelling in which to shelter and rest the body? Abraham looked for the Heavenly city, but I do not read anywhere that he ever suffered for lack of physical things. In fact, he had a very comfortable time of it, even though he did not roll in the fat and ease and pleasure of the Jordan valley. He liked to get on the mountain tops and look off toward the city with foundations which God had built. And, while he sought first the things above, all the other things were added to him. Lot, on the other hand, pretty nearly forgot all about his Heavenly home and looked down with worldly eyes on Jordan's fair valley. He found a dwelling place there, but he had such a miserable time of it, notwithstanding all the luxury and pleasures, that God's Word declares he was "vexed with the filthy conversation of the wicked, for that righteous man dwelling among them, in seeing and hearing, vexed his righteous soul from day to day with their unlawful deeds."

THE saddest scene before Heaven and earth is the deathbed which sees no light of hope beyond the grave. But the soul whose mansion is awaiting it in the city which God has built can say with Paul: "For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain." "For we know that, if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." That beautiful deathbed scene in a little town in New Jersey, which was chronicled a few days ago by the newspapers, could never have come to glorify the sadness of that bereft home if the one whose soul was leaving the earthly house of flesh had not secured through faith in Jesus Christ a new home in Heaven. The dear mother had lain for five days in the death stupor. The husband and children watched by the bedside, hoping for some last word or look. At last the eyelids twitched and then opened, a glad smile lit up the face, and her voice, clear but faint, said: "Too long has my spirit been held in this temple of clay. Friends, loved ones, in the great beyond there are peace and happiness; I am at it and I see you all; know you all and tell you that we shall meet over there. Father and mother are with me now. Good-by!" Ah, tell me, in the light of God's Word and such a scene as this, does it not pay to secure a home in Heaven by accepting Jesus Christ as Saviour? Do you suppose there is enough wealth and honor and power in this world to tempt those sorrowing loved ones to part with the memory of the dear mother's last words which told of Heavenly mansions and peace and happiness eternal? They knew then if they never realized it before that a home in Heaven was worth more than all the world could offer, "for what shall it profit a man, if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

THE New Home Secured.—There is very great satisfaction and comfort in the knowledge that the new home is secured. The weary house hunter can smile triumphantly and forget the tired feet and aching head when he knows that his quest has ended successfully. The weary, tired, buffeted soul of man can never know what rest and peace and satisfaction are until it has gone house hunting with Jesus Christ and knows that his name is written in the register of Heaven which entitles him to a mansion there when the earthly house of flesh will no longer hold the undying soul. The world does not know and cannot know what real satisfaction and joy are, because only God and the hope of Heaven can satisfy the longings and yearnings of the soul. Even the infidel Ingersoll, who professed to believe that this life ended all, as he stood by the coffin of his dead brother, is said to have expressed a doubt as to his own theories, and to have admitted that the soul probably lived after the death of the body. There is a consciousness in every soul that beyond this life there is an existence which is unending. No race or tribe of men, be they ever so savage and benighted, has ever been found which has not had some sense of an existence beyond the grave. And no real rest or satisfaction can come to the soul until it feels that its home beyond the grave has been secured. I might live in the most beautiful palace which ever reared its stately spires above the verdure of the trees which stood as sturdy sentinels all about the grassy slopes whose velvet carpeting of green unrolled until the blue of the sparkling water fringed its edge with diamond spray, but what satisfaction would there be to me, what peace of mind, what rest, if I knew that to-morrow I must leave its luxurious shelter and that I had no other place ready in which to find refuge? The elegance and ease of to-day would only intensify the anxiety for the uncertainty of the morrow. But if I knew that the home of to-day was to be exchanged for the mansion on the morrow, peace and contentment and glad anticipation would fill my soul. Man is not ready to live in this life until he has provided for his soul beyond the grave. But if with Abraham he looks "for a city which hath foundations, whose Builder and Maker is God," he is in an attitude of heart and mind which gives life a new aspect and paints the sky of the future with an unfading [illegible]

NO Flats in Heaven.—Man rears his piles of brick and stone into the clouds and families are piled in layers one over the other in congested pandemonium, but in Heaven God builds mansions for the soul. I am not sure but that in these latter days God is permitting man to herd himself in great buildings with airshaft bedrooms and lightshaft parlors and two-by-four back yards where the children of the great stone prison called home must play together in mingled discontent, so as to make the picture of Heaven with its mansions the brighter with hope. The little girl who went to the country for the first time after living in the city's barrenness and noise walked with reverent steps through the flower-decked fields, she heard the songs of the glad free birds, the breezes from the waving trees kissed her cheeks and cooled her brow, and with joy thrilling in her voice she exclaimed: "This must be Heaven." Thank God, man's disfiguring hand will never have anything to do with the building operations of Heaven. No flats there! Flats, with all their conveniences and their elegances are doing more to destroy the true sense of home and family life, and are robbing childhood more surely of its right to proper environment and healthy conditions than any other one thing. Flat buildings rear their roofs until they seem sometimes to almost brush the blue of the sky, but they are not an easy stepping stone to the mansions in Heaven. Everyone of these beehives of congested population has a well-polished chute which is tobogganning humanity away from God and Heaven as fast as Satan can lure them on.

CHILDREN are not wanted in flat buildings, but thanks be to God, they are wanted in Heaven! Our president, whose sentiments in regard to the obligation and blessing of parenthood are so well known, has said that "the willfully barren woman, like the willfully idle man, has no place in a sane, healthy and vigorous community!" But sane healthy and vigorous living is stifled in the atmosphere of the flat building, and a vitiated, superficial and emasculated social condition comes to exist. Not a child, but children, are as essential in the constitution of family and home as are the prismatic colors necessary in combination to produce the light which cheers and warms and gladdens the earth. The childless home is no home at all. God never intended there should be such. His command was and is increase and multiply. It's a godless age that discourages child-bearing. It is one of the cultured lies of the Devil that the child ought to be born with a scholarship in college and a bank account, or not born at all. It is hellish heresy, hatched out of the infernal-laid egg of devouring selfishness, which decrees that one child shall be reared alone because the parents willfully determine that the are not able to properly provide for others. Children may bar one from the flat building; earthly landlords may place their seal of disapproval against the parents with the many jewels of child life, but things in Heaven are going to be pretty much reversed and the husband and wife of the childless home may find Heaven's gates barred against them. The mansions in Heaven are prepared for such as love and fear God and believe in the only begotten Son of God. And who are these? Surely not those who despise childhood and deliberately decree the childless home or limit the children to one or two, for Jesus said: "Suffer the little ones, and forbid them not, to come unto me, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven!" Abraham looked for a city whose streets are filled with the busy feet of happy children, whose air is fragrant with their merry laughter, whose every inhabitant has become as a little child, for Jesus said: "Except ye become as this little child, ye cannot enter into the Kingdom of Heaven." House hunting, not flat hunting on earth, where home may be established, family reared and a bit of Heaven realized! House hunting in Heaven by the soul where it may take refuge after the storms of life are past, and where the home may again be re-established to which the loved children may be gathered one by one! "Abraham looked for a city which hath foundations, whose Builder and Maker is God." Let the soul go reaching out in faith towards that same city, for there shall be realized, and only there, the eternal "Home, sweet home" of the soul.

MEN IN THE PUBLIC EYE.

Should Senator Allison serve out the term for which he was recently elected he will have broken all records of service in the United States senate, having been a member of that august body since March 4, 1873. He and Senator Jones took their seats at the same time and the latter's term would also have been extended six years more had he consented to serve.

Consul George Sawter went to Guayaquil, Ecuador, to take the post left vacant by the death of Thomas Nast. Arriving there, he discovered that yellow fever was raging and immediately took passage back to the United States. On landing in New York he found that another office had been seeking him in his absence. He still at sea [illegible] nominated by President Roosevelt as an assistant appraiser of merchandise at the port of New York.

Secretary Cortelyou is one of the few remaining men in public life who affect the pompadour style of brushing the hair. Fifteen or eighteen years ago it seemed as if all mankind had the pompadour craze. When [illegible] Jim" came on the stage every sport that was a sport wore his bristles rampant. The style is very becoming to Cortelyou. It enables him in serious reflection to run his fingers harrowlike over his head without disturbing its contour.

Several senators were talking in Mr. Hoar's committee room, the subject being Senator Morgan's wonderful ability as a long-distance talker. One man expressed the opinion that the aged Alabama statesman was about "talked out," but Mr. Hoar scouted the notion, saying: "Why, show him a penknife and he'll talk for an hour about it." Just then Mr. Morgan came in and one of the number showed him a curious knife. Sure enough, the old man began a long discourse on the subject of knives, continuing until all slipped away except Hoar, who was nodding in a chair.

WHAT PHYSICIANS SAY.

"Death months" are March and April for adults and July and August for children under five years of age, according to the statistician of the twelfth census.

A freshly cut slice of pineapple laid on a piece of beefsteak will in a comparatively short time cause softening, swelling and partial digestion of the meat for a considerable depth from the surface.

The government of the Punjab has undertaken to immunize 700,000 inhabitants against the plague. The laboratory of Bombay has been asked to provide daily 50,000 doses of anti-plague serum to the physicians of the Punjab.

Tuberculosis was not known among cattle in Denmark until the importation of Schleswig-Holsteins began. It then spread so rapidly that a government commission which tested 144,000 head with tuberculin found one in three affected.

The deaths from pneumonia per 10,000 of population in 1860 were 4.40; in 1870, 10.24; in 1880, 12.58; in 1890, 18.34; in 1900, 19.78—an aggregate increase of 349.6 per cent. of pneumonia, as compared with an aggregate decrease of 39.5 per cent. of consumption.

The so-called "defective classes of society"—the idiotic, feeble minded, improvident, habitually immoral, inebriate, criminal, insane, and other impaired persons—are as a rule victims of arrested or otherwise imperfect development of brain, attributable largely to malnutrition both before and after birth.

"POOR DIGESTION LANGUID AND TIRED."

[An Interesting Letter Concerning Pe-ru-na.]

Miss Della Janveau, Globe Hotel, Ottawa, Ont., is from one of the oldest and best known French Canadian families in Canada. In a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, Ohio, she says:

"Last spring my blood seemed clogged up, my digestion poor, my head ached and I felt languid and tired all the time. My physician prescribed for me, but a friend advised me to try Peruna. I tried it and am pleased to state that I found it a wonderful cleanser and purifier of the system. In three weeks I was like a new woman, my appetite had increased, I felt buoyant, light and happy and without an ache or pain. Peruna is a reliable family medicine."

Adia Brittain, of Sekitan, O., writes: "After using your wonderful Peruna three months I have had great relief. I had continual heaviness in my stomach was bilious, and had fainting spells, but they all have left me since using Peruna."—Adia Brittain.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

FINE EXHIBIT PLANNED.

Prof. Brownell Outlines Scheme of Educational Display.

KENTUCKY AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

Every Character of School In the State Will Furnish Exhibits—Twenty-Five Hundred Square Feet of Space For Kentucky In Palace of Education.

The Louisiana Purchase exposition at St. Louis next year will have the first building e... erected for an educational exhibit. In it will be seven acres of floor space, and Kentucky has applied for 2,500 square feet of this amount. If the present plans are carried out, all of this space will be well filled with exhibits of school work of every kind, from the kindergarten to the technological schools and universities. Professor H. G. Brownell, principal of the Manual Training High school of Louisville, is chairman of the educational exhibit committee of the association. He has associated with him on this committee the following well known educators: Professor H. V. McChesney, Frankfort; Professor R. P. Halleck, Louisville; Professor W. H. Bartholomew, Louisville; Professor F. Paul Anderson, Lexington; Dr. Chase Palmer, Danville; President William Dinwiddie, Jackson; Dr. W. G. Frost, Berea; Dr. B. B.

H. G. BROWNELL,
Chairman Educational Exhibit Committee, Louisville.

Huntoon, Louisville; Dr. E. Y. Mullins, Louisville; Dr. Arthur Yager, Georgetown; Superintendent M. A. Cassidy, Lexington; Superintendent S. L. Frogge, Frankfort; Professor C. J. Crabbe, Ashland; Professor McHenry Rhodes, Owensboro; Professor T. S. Alley, Bellevue; Professor C. C. Cherry, Bowling Green; Professor Enos Spencer, Louisville; Miss Pattie S. Hill, Louisville; Mrs. Emily E. Bracken, Louisville, and Mrs. M. B. Tucker, Louisville.

The educational exhibits from Kentucky will be classified under eight groups, as follows: Elementary, secondary, higher, fine arts, agriculture, commerce and industry, defectives and text-books, and furniture. In each of these groups there will be several classes showing school management, organization, statistics, pictures and plans of buildings, methods of instructions, results obtained and pupils' and students' work. The training of teachers will also receive attention.

Professor Brownell has announced that the committee especially desires good exhibits from the graded schools and rural schools of the state, and an exhibit illustrating the work of the mountain schools. He hopes to enlist the interest of all teachers and superintendents throughout the state with regard to the proposed exhibits. The fact that the Kentucky Exhibit association has decided to give the most popular school teacher in every county in the state a free trip to the World's fair will doubtless add greatly to the interest in the display to be made by the educational committee. This committee will have charge of the contest, so far as the counting of the votes is concerned. School teachers and city and county superintendents in every section of the commonwealth have indorsed the popularity contest.

KENTUCKY TOBACCO IS KING.

The St. Louis world's fair officials have paid Kentucky tobacco the highest compliment possible in the Agricultural building at the exposition. Ten thousand square feet will be devoted to a collective exhibit of tobacco from all over the United States. One-half of this space has been asigned to Kentucky. Mr. Charles D. Campbell of Louisville is chairman of the tobacco exhibit committee of the Kentucky Exhibit association, and, with the assistance of his committee, is taking full advantage of the recognition made the Blue Grass State in its importance as a tobacco-growing commonwealth.

KENTUCKY COTTON AT FAIR.

It is not generally known that cotton is grown in Kentucky, but this is a fact that will be prominently brought to the attention of the visitors of the World's fair. Fulton county grows as fine cotton as is to be found anywhere in the south. It, however, is the only county in the state where this culture has proved a success. Many of the farmers there have turned from corn and wheat to cotton and have found it a profitable change.

WORLD'S FAIR PLANS.

They Were Proposed as Early as the Year 1885.

EDITOR FIRST TO ADVOCATE FAIR.

President Francis Attended the Chicago Exposition With a View to Insure a Greater Celebration In St. Louis—Other Men Who Aided In the Work.

Professor Charles M. Harvey, editorial writer on the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, is credited with having been the first person to advocate the holding of a World's fair in St. Louis as a celebration of the Louisiana Purchase centennial. His editorial writings, urging such an exposition, appeared as early as 1885.

Statements have been made that ex-Governor Francis was the first to suggest the exposition idea. The governor does not lay claim to such an honor, he only ... that he heard the matter discussed at the time that St. Louis was a candidate for the Columbian exposition, and that when the prize was finally awarded to Chicago it was freely said by the St. Louis committeemen that their city would build a greater exposition ten years later.

But of all those who discussed the probable holding of a world's fair, none considered the matter so seriously as did ex-Governor Francis. It is now known that he was continually planning the creation which has been so successfully carried out, and with this in view he removed with his family to Chicago during the summer of 1893 and was in almost daily attendance at the Columbian exposition.

Although the world's fair proposition had been forgotten by the many, yet the idea was not lost, and in May, 1898, the Missouri Historical society called a meeting of the various commercial, social and industrial organizations of St. Louis, to be held in the month following, and consider the subject. Resolutions urging a celebration by an exposition were adopted at this meeting and a committee was named.

This committee decided that early in 1899 a convention of delegates from the several states and territories in the Louisiana Purchase should be held for the purpose of determining the time, place and manner of fittingly commemorating the centennial anniversary of the purchase by the United States of the Louisiana territory.

Ninety-four delegates attended this convention, which was held in St. Louis on Jan. 10, 1899. As a result of a vote by rollcall St. Louis was the unanimous choice of all delegates as a location suitable for the exposition, and David R. Francis was chosen chairman of the executive committee.

Papers of incorporation had been drawn up by James L. Blair, counsel for the organized committees, and the same were passed by both houses of the Missouri legislature without a dissenting vote and approved by Governor Stephens on Wednesday, April 12, 1899. Ten days later a mass meeting of citizens, embracing all classes, was held at Music hall in St. Louis. The most sanguine friends of the exposition were surprised at the interest shown in the movement, and before adjournment was announced, near midnight, verbal pledges to the amount of hundreds of thousands of dollars were given.

June 4, 1900, congress adopted a measure appropriating $5,000,000 for the Louisiana Purchase exposition, but it carried two provisos—that an equal amount should be pledged by popular subscription and another $5,000,000 appropriated by the city of St. Louis. In order to meet the second provision it was necessary to amend the city charter, and this question and also the plan to appropriate $1,000,000 for a state exhibit were submitted to the voters of Missouri at the November election, 1900, when the amendments were adopted by a large majority.

Jan. 12, 1901, a sworn statement sent to Washington declared that the $5,000,000 popular subscription had been closed. At this time a committee, consisting of ex-Governor Francis, William H. Thompson, Pierre Choteau, Fred Lehmann and James L. Blair, were at the nation's capital working in the interests of a second fair bill, which had been introduced by Congressman Tawney. After weeks of labor, combatting opposition which came from eastern states, the world's fair workers were finally rewarded by the passage of the bill granting an appropriation of $5,000,000, twice the amount given to the Chicago fair.

Meanwhile the municipal assembly of St. Louis, acting on the permission given by the people of Missouri to amend the charter, had issued the same amount in bonds, thus making $15,000,000 available for the work of construction.

VOL. XXVIII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 29, 1903. NO. 28

County Correspondence.

COMMISSARY.

April 25.—It costs more to average wrongs than to bear them.

Negligence is the rust of the soul, that corrodes through all her best resolves.

Dance at Charles Kelly's Saturday night. Lawrence Phippe says it was a dandy.

H. P. Parsons sold a horse Wednesday to Wat Brown, of Burlington, price, $90.

Ed Cloud returned Sunday, from a visit to Geo. White's in or near Milan, Ind.

Noah West, living south of Commissary has for sale a full blooded Thibriad sow with 7 pigs 6 days old.

D. M. Snyder and wife, of Burlington, visited relatives and friends in Bellevue, Saturday night and Sunday.

It was a woman who first tempted man to eat, but he took to drinking on his own account as naturally as a duck to water.

H. P. Parsons and wife went to Cincinnati, Thursday, to visit their son, Bert, and purchased goods to replenish their store.

Dissatisfaction with ones condition in life is the match that has started many a spark of genius which has later illuminated the world.

Eugene and Scott Kelly gave an entertainment on the Graphophone last Saturday night at Grange Hall. It was not a financial success as the receipts was only $4.

To keep from being miserable and out of mischief, one should keep him or herself occupied. No thoroughly occupied person was ever yet very miserable or mischievous.

Lawrence Phippe will start to Tenn., next Monday, and will go to where his relatives and acquaintances are. Lawrence is quite a favorite among the ladies here, and will be greatly missed. We recommend him to the ladies of Tennessee.

Of all the actions of a man or woman's life their marriage doth least concern other people; yet, of all the actions of their lives it is the most meddled with by other people, which fact, no doubt, has caused many marriages that otherwise would never have been.

Taking into consideration the condition of the weather the attendance, last Sunday at the Christian Sunday school in Bellevue, was very large. The interest manifested by the pupils and the increasing attendance is due in a great measure to the untiring work of Bro. Acra.

Last Tuesday night at 1 a. m. people began calling on Frank McKim to learn the whereabouts of one Wilson the butcher, and calls were made every 10 or 15 minutes until 3 p. m. Wednesday. Anyone knowing anything of the whereabouts of Mr. Wilson please report to Frank McKim.

Ye scribe was in Bellevue and Mc. Ville, Thursday evening, and found the ladies busy stripping willows. Willow stripping in these towns is quite an industry during the month of April. Almost every yard was covered with stripped willows. I called at the Excelsior Weaving establishment and found it running on full time. Since I called attention to this company a few weeks ago, its trade has increased to such an extend that it is necessary to enlarge its building or move to a larger one. Perhaps it will do the latter, and use its present quarters for storing finished goods. The increased trade is not owing to a cut in prices as has been stated but to the fact that it takes and reads the RECORDER—the best county paper in the State, and had the attention of the public called to its business through Commissary whose writeups are read by everybody.

IDLEWILD.

Winston Gaines is visiting friends in Ohio.

Mrs. W. A. Gaines was calling in Idlewild, Saturday afternoon.

Several of Hon. J. A. Gaines' family have been quite ill. All are better except him.

Several of the older people in this neighborhood, have whooping cough, an out of date disease.

It is hoped that the report that C. T. Davis, of Ludlow, was bitten by a vicious dog, is a mistake.

Everett Jones has to give up his school on account of ill health. We hope he will soon regain his health.

Rev. Curry, of Ohio, preached at Mt. Pleasant, last Sunday. Mrs. Thomas Whitaker entertained him and a lady friend who was with him.

A representative of a bridge building company, of Cincinnati, called on W. A. Gaines, a few days since, soliciting work on the B. & P. Turnpike.

A handsome monument was erected on John Cropper's lot in Bullittsburg cemetery, last week, by the Lawrenceburg Marble and Granite Works. It took 7 men and 5 teams to handle the material enroute. The same firm erected a monument on Henry Barlow's lot.

Grip Remedies in Great Demand.

When colds and grip are prevalent the quickest and surest remedies are in great demand. Mr. Joseph D. Williams, of McDuff, Va., says that he was cured of a very deep and lasting attack of la grippe by using Chamberlain's Cough Remedy after trying several other preparations with no effect. For sale by all druggists.

FLICKERTOWN.

There never was a more flattering prospect for a good apple crop.

The backwater was up over the Minor ford, several times last week.

Geo. Hensley bought a $125 horse of M. F. Wingate, a few days since.

The farmer who gets done plowing first this spring will have nothing to brag about.

What was the total vote for mayor of Cincinnati at the election on the 6 inst? [74,120.—ED.].

Cage Stephens and Ben Passons were in the Rabbit Hash neighborhood, last week, hunting milk cows.

Botts & Setters hauled their lumber to Petersburg where they loaded it in a barge and shipped it to Cincinnati.

Duncan will get the whole pie here, with the exception of a few hard pieces of crust, and he might yet get it if he would come around and soften it with some good A 1 ointment.

We have been told that the chronic hunters of the near-by towns are talking of coming to this neighborhood squirrel hunting. It will not be well for them if they are caught. The farmers still have their farms posted the same as they had last fall and they intend to protect their game against all trespassers at all times.

GUNPOWDER.

April 27.—Still we have rain, and about the time the ground is dry enough to work, we get another shower. About 2 inches of rain fell last Saturday night, which will delay farm work for several days.

But little garden truck planted on account of the continuous wet weather.

No new cases of Measles, and those that have them are getting along nicely.

Mrs. Lizzie Bartell, of Florence, spent last week with friends in this neighborhood.

On account of pastor Slater being called away on business there was no preaching at Hopeful last Sunday.

George Barlow began shipping his purchase of lambs last week. He selected a few tops out of several bunches, and they brought a fancy price.

J. H. Craven, candidate for circuit clerk, was shaking hands with the boys here last Friday. Mr. Craven is very popular here but will not get a solid vote. We know of one vote against him.

RICHWOOD.

April 27.—Mrs. Amanda Carpenter, who has been quite sick, is better.

Many cows about here are sick, and some have died.

Wm. Glacken was the guest of Gaines Robinson, Sunday.

Fish are biting and several very nice strings have been caught.

We have had several fine fox chases, recently. Two foxes have been caught.

Misses Clara and Nellie Tanner and Albert were guests of the Misses Wolfe, Sunday.

Many of our young people attended the Union hop, but none of them took the cake.

Where, O, where! is our rural mail route gone that was slated for April 1? It must have been a joke.

One of Walter Grubbs' team of blacks was badly cut by a barbed wire that came loose on Mr. Lancaster's fence as the mare was passing.

James Craven, of Verona, candidate for circuit clerk, was mingling with the voters here, last week. He will give Duncan a run for his money here.

The greatest danger from colds and grip is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for this disease we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous disease. It will cure a cold or an attack of the grip in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

Walton has, hitherto, been somewhat noted for the frequency of the trips made from it by those who seek to have the marriage rite celebrated from here. He says that among the most arduous duties of the officers in the service is that of keeping the aborigines from intoxicating liquors, and intimated that almost any Indian can give a professional white druukard cards, spades and little casino and beat him out, while the white man is talking it over. Mention being made that many patent medicines were supposed to be in the nature of intoxicants, he named two extensively advertised nostrums that are 90 per cent of the commonest kind of whisky, but they are great sellers. A red ink was also sold in large quantities until the service got onto its components. But the drunk making compound away above any other in the estimation of the braves is "Hop Tea," which for quick operation and lasting effect, has no rival, and the officers were at first baffled, but their persistent efforts resulted finally in comprehending the constituent elements of the noxious mixture. It was not known, and it was well, he said, that it was not.

SEVERE ATTACK OF GRIP

"When I had an attack of the grip last winter (the second one) I actually cured myself with one bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says Frank W. Perry, Editor of the Enterprise, Shortsville, N. Y. "This is the honest truth. I at times kept from coughing myself to pieces by taking a teaspoonful of this remedy, and when the coughing spell would come on at night I would take a dose and it seemed that in the briefest interval the cough would pass off and I would go to sleep perfectly free from cough and its accompanying pains. To say the remedy acted as a most agreeable surprise is putting it very mildly. I had no idea that it could or would knock out the grip, simply because I had never tried it for such a purpose, but it did, and it seemed with the second attack of coughing the remedy caused it to not only be of less duration, but the pains were far less severe, and I had not used the contents of one bottle before Mr. Grip had bid me adieu." For sale by all druggists.

He paid no attention to it at first, but an hour after the flow of blood had increased. Mr. Corrigan demurred to the suggestion of his trainer that a physician be summoned, but the latter finally telephoned for Dr. Frank Corrigan, a cousin of the horseman. When the physician arrived he found the turfman so weak from loss of blood that he was unable to stand or speak above a whisper. Five workmen on the second floor were thrown 20 feet in the air and those were the only persons in the building who escaped. They crawled through the debris and are now at the city hospital.

Although the cause of the explosion has not been determined it is said that some of the employes of the company were emptying some oil tank cars into the tanks in the basement of the building and it is possible that sparks from a switch engine ignited the inflammable fluids.

DEMANDS OF RUSSIA.

A Joint Protest Will Be Made by Three of the Powers.

It Is the Belief in Official Circles That Russia Has No Intention of Evacuating the Disputed Territory.

Washington, April 25.—The United States government will make a vigorous protest through the proper diplomatic channels against Russia's demands upon China for the practical retention by Russia of the province of Manchuria. At the state department this step by the czar's country is regarded as a breach of faith and an attack upon the American intention of maintaining the integrity of China which was announced more than two years ago.

The Russian demands were contained in a notification sent to Prince Ching, president of the Chinese foreign office, by M. Pianson, Russian charge a'affaires at Peking. He stated that no further steps would be taken toward the evacuation of Manchuria until these demands were acceded to.

Washington, April 27.—Russia's demands in Manchuria and their effect on American interests were the subject of a conference Sunday afternoon between Secretary Hay and Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador, which occurred at Secretary Hay's house and lasted for nearly an hour. It is denied that the ambassador brought official advices from his government, but the fact that he is still suffering from an attack of lumbago which has confined him to the embassy for several weeks is evidence of the urgency of the call.

Steps already have been taken by the state department to ascertain the true inwardness of Russia's latest move. Ambassador McCormick, at St. Petersburg, has been instructed by cable to present to the Russian foreign office a note which while diplomatically known as one of inquiry, is in substance a strong protest against Russia's demands. Cabled instructions also have been sent to Minister Conger at Peking to express to the Chinese authorities the dissatisfaction of the United States with Russia's demands and our hope that China will not accede to them. No answers have yet been received to either note, though unofficial assurances are still reaching the department that American interests in Manchuria will be protected. In the department's note, which Ambassador McCormick probably has presented, Russia's attention is called to the assurances which repeatedly have been given the United States relative to the preservation of the integrity of China and the continuance of the open door policy. Russia also is reminded of the severe blow to American trade which must follow the granting of the first two demands, that no more ports or towns in Manchuria be opened and that no additional foreign consuls be admitted.

Russia's reason for contending for a closed door in Manchuria is the claim that the open door is not a commercial but a political question. She continues to assure the United States that in some way this country's interests will be protected in Manchuria. The point is made that as the Manchurian demands are still in negotiation between St. Petersburg and Peking the United States can not expect that Russia make concessions until the fate of her demands has been determined. When China has acceded to all of these demands it is suggested that a trade agreement of some sort can be reached between this country and Russia which will protect our trade interests.

Appreciating the fact that the interests of this country in Manchuria are those of trade and not territory, Russia, it is stated, is disposed to make certain trade concessions to the United States in Manchuria at the proper time.

TO BE HID FROM VIEW.

Declaration of Independence Will Be Seen No More By the Public.

Washington, April 25.—The Declaration of Independence is to be seen no more by the public. An order has been issued that henceforth the historic manuscript shall be kept under lock and key in a great fire and bombproof safe. The Declaration will never be exhibited again at any of the great international fairs. This decision was reached Friday as the result of an examination of the document by a committee of the American Academy of Sciences, now in session in this city, who acted at the instance of Secretary Hay, whose attention has been called to the sad state of the famous document by Andrew Allen, librarian of the state department. Most of the text of the declaration is still legible, but only one or two of the signatures can be made out. There is only a trace of the autograph of John Hancock, the first to sign.

Great damage was sustained in 1820 when a copy was taken by the crude letter press process. This was done in order to secure a fac simile for the surviving signers (one of them was Thomas Jefferson) and their families.

Friday the document was photographed and then locked up. The committee has recommended that at certain long intervals of time it be taken from the case and rephotographed, the purpose being to measure as nearly as can be done the result of the protective steps.

When they desired to leave they were imprisoned, with their hands tied behind them, until willing to go to work. They complain that when they attempted to escape they were driven back at the point of a gun. The fugitives say that they made their escape by pooling their finances and bribing the guard.

HARD TO BEAR.

When the back aches and pains so badly, can't work—can't rest—can't sleep — can't eat—it's hard to bear. Thousands of aching backs have been relieved and cured. People are learning that backache pains come from disordered Kidneys, that Doan's Kidney Pills cure every Kidney ill—cure Bladder troubles, urinary derangements, Dropsy, Diabetes, Bright's disease.

Read this testimony to the merit of the greatest of Kidney specifics:

J. W. Walls, Superintendent of Streets of Lebanon, Kentucky, living on East Main Street in that city, says:

"With my nightly rest broken, owing to irregularities of the kidneys, suffering intensely from severe pains in the small of my back and through the kidneys, and annoyed by painful passages of abnormal secretions, life was anything but pleasant for me. No amount of doctoring relieved this condition, and for the reason that nothing seemed to give me even temporary relief, I became about discouraged. One day I noticed in the newspapers the case of a man who was afflicted as I was and was cured by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. His words of praise for this remedy were so sincere that on the strength of his statement I went to the Hugh Murrey Drug Co.'s store and got a box. I found that the medicine was exactly as powerful a kidney remedy as represented. I experienced quick and lasting relief. Doan's Kidney pills will prove a blessing to all sufferers from kidney disorders who will give them a fair trial."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Walls will be mailed to any part of the United States on application. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists; price 50 cents per box.

A NEGRO STRUNG UP.

The Mob Then Charged on a Colored Settlement.

Many Colored People Were Shot and Wounded—The Tents in Which They Were Dwelling Were Destroyed By Fire.

Thebes, Ill., April 27.—An unknown Negro, aged about 17 years, was lynched by a mob of angry farmers near the village of Santa Fe Sunday afternoon for attempting to assault the 10-year-old daughter of Farmer [illegible]. Branson Davis lives one-half mile east of Sante Fe, a small village near here. While his 10-year-old daughter was accosted her. She ran, but he seized her and her screams brought her mother to the rescue. The Negro fled. Officers were notified, and were soon in pursuit. News of the assault speedily spread among the neighboring farmers, and resulted in an angry mob starting in search of the assailant.

The Negro was meanwhile captured by officers and was being brought to Santa Fe when the mob of farmers was met. A scrimmage resulted, during which the farmers secured the Negro. He confessed to the crime, but begged for mercy. Without a word the mob started with the prisoner toward the new bridge being constructed across the Mississippi, where he was hanged to an oak tree, without ceremony or delay. The body was then riddled with bullets.

The officers endeavored to disperse the mob, but their efforts were unavailing.

A rush was made for a colony of several hundred Negroes employed on bridge construction work and living in tents near the bridge. The Negroes saw the mob coming and opened fire. A fusilade followed and the whites fired with effect as many of the Negroes were shot down. None of the mob was injured, and it is not known how seriously the Negroes were wounded. The mob pressed forward notwithstanding the steady fire until the Negroes turned and fled toward a nearby wood, taking their wounded with them. The mob then fell upon the tents and burned them. After accomplishing a general work of destruction, the mob dispersed. Extra police were sworn in, and Sunday night the village was under heavy guard. Excitement is intense.

WILL RECEIVE BIG REWARD.

The Body of Adolph Openhym Recovered By a Boatman.

New York, April 27.—The body of Adolph Openhym, the wealthy merchant who is believed to have jumped into the Harlem river from High bridge on March 30, was found within a short distance of the bridge Sunday by a boatman who will receive a reward of $5,000.

Ever since Openhym's disappearance a constant search of the waters of the Harlem river has been kept up. A steam launch chartered by the missing man's family patrolled the river night and day and scores of boatmen, stimulated by the offer of $5,000 for the recovery of the body, swept the river bed with grappling irons.

The body came to the surface Sunday alongside the boat of John Meehan, who had been prominent among the searchers from the first. On it was found all the jewelry Mr. Openhym wore when he left home and a small sum of money.

MYSTERIOUSLY DISAPPEARED.

The pouch had been turned over to Route Agent J. P. Boger. Being called to the telephone, he dropped the pouch on the floor. When he returned a moment later the sack was gone. There is no clue to the mystery except that two strange men were seen in the office just a few minutes before the robbery occurred.

FIGHTING IN SOMALILAND.

Engagements Between English Troops and Mullah's Forces.

Bohotle, Somaliland, Africa, Saturday, April 26.—Maj. Gough, in command of a mobile column, engaged the enemy near Danop. He lost 18 men killed, including two officers, and four officers were wounded. The enemy had 200 men killed.

London, April 27.—A long official dispatch has been received here from Bohotle, Somaliland, to the effect that Maj. Gough's flying column, numbering 200 men, attacked a large force of the enemy near Danop. The column formed in a square and resisted with success for several hours, receiving reinforcements from Danop. Ammunition becoming scarce, the British force retired slowly on Danop, bringing all their wounded with them. They were continually attacked en route, in addition to 18 men killed, including two officers, there were 28 men and four officers wounded. Maj. Gough praises highly the conduct of his force under trying conditions, and while fighting at close quarters. He recommends several men for gallant behavior. He is now retiring on Bohotle and is expected to arrive there April 28. Supplies have been sent to meet him.

The dispatch to the foreign office from Bohotle shows that Col. Cobbe's relief by Brig. Gen. Manning and his retirement to Galadi was affected without opposition from the enemy. The loss of about 2,000 of the Mullah's men occurred during the original attack on Capt. Plunkett's square.

ARCHIE'S SPOTTED PONY.

Washington, April 27.—Archie Roosevelt, who is recovering from an attack of measles, had a visitor the other day, whose call will do more to restore him to health than all the medicine the doctor can give him. Soon after Archie began to convalescence he begged to be allowed to see his spotted pony, Algonquin, which is his constant companion when he is well. It was too soon for Archie to leave his room and Mrs. Roosevelt was compelled to decline the request. Charles, the groom, who looks after Algonquin and who also is a great chum of Archie, thought the matter over and concluded that if Archie wanted to see his pony, he should do so.

Without confiding his plan to any one, he led the pony, the other day, into the white house and along the corridor into the elevator. The attendants were too much surprised to say a word until after the elevator had disappeared. When the second floor was reached, Charles led the pony to Archie's room and ushered it in. To say that Archie was delighted expresses it mildly and the pony also seemed to enjoy the visit. This is the first time that a horse has ridden in a white house elevator.

TO WELCOME KING EDWARD.

Elaborate Arrangements Are Being Made in Paris.

Paris, April 27.—Elaborate arrangements are being carried out rapidly for the welcoming here of King Edward next Friday. They are on a scale of truly royal splendor. The fetes will follow those held at the time of the visit to Paris of the czar of Russia and will include a number of events affording opportunities for brilliant spectacular effects. Government architects have provided a plan for the decoration of the streets by day and for illuminations by night. Private residents and shopkeepers have contributed large sums of money towards transforming the avenues and boulevards of the city into masses of color with floral arches, venetian masts and loopings of flowers. A large force of troops is being assembled to add to the military pageantry of the event.

DEFENDED HER HUSBAND.

Fire Lieutenant Shot and Killed By a Boston Woman.

Boston, April 27.—Joseph A. Kelley, a lieutenant in the Boston fire department, was shot by Mrs. Isabella Viola, in defending her husband from Kelley's assaults. He died a few hours later.

Kelley, it is said, went to No. 3 Fay street, accompanied by a white woman employed there as a housekeeper. Some trouble followed resulting in Kelley being put out.

Half an hour later he returned and through a mistake went to the upper apartment which was occupied by Luke Viola and his wife. Kelley forced the door open and seized Viola by the throat, when Mrs. Viola, who is only 20 years of age, secured a revolver and fired three shots at Kelley, all of which took effect.

ROOSEVELT IS WRONG.

Labor Leaders Say a Tax on Goods is Not a Protection to the Laborer.

President Roosevelt said, in his speech at Sioux Falls on April 6, that "the national government has but a small field in which it can work in labor matters." The truth of this statement is challenged by several labor leaders, who assert, in the language of Mr. John W. Hayes, president of the Knights of Labor, that, "the field is infinite. The national congress could be kept much busier dealing with labor matters and enacting labor laws of a national scope than with all its dealings with capital."

The most interesting part of Mr. Hayes' interview on this subject is the following: "I might mention the immigration laws. There should be a protective tariff law against the importation of cheap labor. We tax the articles that these men make while living in their foreign homes; but they can come to this country and work just as cheaply, placing their goods on the market free of duty and drive our producers into a continued poverty. Why not have a tariff on the men as well as on the stuff they make?"

This most important point appears not to have occurred to most laboring men. If they understood it they would certainly not vote for the one-sided protection advocated by the republican party. Such protection, instead of benefiting labor, increases the prices of manufactured goods and the cost of living and, therefore, actually lowers real wages. But it injures labor in another way. Because most protected industries charge higher prices than they could charge, if unprotected, there is diminished consumption of these products. This means diminished production, fewer hands employed and, therefore, reduced wages—for wages are fixed by the law of supply and demand in the protected as in the unprotected industries.

How the republicans have duped labor on this question is beyond comprehension. In most protected European countries, where wages are low, it never occurs to the protectionists to try to make it acceptable to the working people by telling them that tariff on goods will increase wages. The thing would appear too absurd. They find other excuses and pretexts, or perhaps the czar just claps tariff taxes onto the people, without saying by your leave and without taking the trouble to invent lying excuses and sophistical arguments. He does not need to stultify his reasoning powers. He knows that the people will pay the taxes and that certain men, none of them working men, will share the proceeds with the government. He needs his share and decrees protection—that's all.

THE MERGER CASE.

Nothing Tangible Gained for the People by the Recent Court Decision.

The result of the railroad merger case is encouraging to the public though the final test in the supreme court may reverse the decision of the lower court. What benefit, those who travel on the railroads or use them for the transportation of their goods will gain, is also a question for the future. The intention of the government in commencing this suit was to abolish a merger of competing lines of railroad and thus prevent rates being raised beyond a reasonable rate. Under the terms of the decision the stock of the Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Burlington railroads will be returned, by the merger company, to their original owners, this will still leave the railroads in the control of Mr. Hill and Mr. Morgan and their friends, and it is certain that they will agree to maintain the present rates, merger or no merger.

The fact is, the combination of these competing lines of railroad took place three or four years ago when Mr. Hill and his friends secured control of the stock of the Northern Pacific and this merger company was organized to continue that combine and prevent any one else obtaining it by a bold move in Wall street by outsiders through the purchasing of enough stock in either of the railroads to control either one or both of them. With the merger company holding a majority of the stock of the three railroads such an attempt was prevented.

OUT OF THE FURNACE INTO THE COOLER.—Omaha World-Herald.

The entire interest of the public of the states through which the railroads run is the reasonableness of the rates on passengers and freight, and this question is not settled by the merger decision but rests on the action of the interstate commerce commission as it has for years gone by. It is therefore useless to raise the hopes of the customers of the railroads involved, by making them believe that a great victory has been gained, when the fact remains that no material advantage has been gained, except the principle involved that competing lines of railroads cannot be merged.

A Victory for Democrats.

The prosecution of the Northern Securities company and the great anti-trust decision of the court at St. Paul constitute a democratic victory, not a victory of President Roosevelt nor of the republican congress. The public sentiment which forced the national administration to act against the trusts was created by democratic agitation. The republicans were forced into a corner. They were compelled to act for the suppression of the trusts or to go before the country at the next election as the party of the trusts, supporting the trusts and supported by the trusts. In claiming the credit of the anti-trust victory in the courts the republicans are stealing democratic thunder. The larceny will not prevail. The democratic party is entitled to all the credit of the successful war on the trusts, and it cannot be kept out of its own when the reckoning comes.—Chicago Chronicle.

POINTS AND OPINIONS.

——To oppose reasonable revision at the earliest possible moment is to protect monopoly and invite reaction and the political and commercial penalties of oppression and abuse.—Chicago Post.

——With President Roosevelt in the Yellowstone park, studying beasts, plants and bugs, it is not forbidden to the people at home to make a study of some of the political humbugs that afflict the body politic.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

——The president believes that we should not take the tariff remedy for two years at least and that if we do not find something to ease the pain before that time it may be well enough to resort to extreme measures.—Cedar Rapids Gazette.

——Mr. Babcock, if sincere, must recognize that tariff revision by "its friends" will mean that the beneficiaries of just such robbery of the many for the profit of the few as he complains of will make the schedules, and all past history and experience shows that they will make them higher, not lower. The place for every man who knows and feels the abominations of the monopoly-sheltering Dingley tariff is with the democratic party, in an intelligent crusade for tariff reform in the interests of the consumer.—Albany Argus.

——It seems to us that the members of the administration who have recently discussed the tariff on important public occasions have made the mistake of expending on their democratic fellow citizens a good deal of rhetorical eloquence that might more profitably have been addressed to their dissenting brethren in New England and the west. If the republican leaders can close the gap in their own party the work will pay them much better than trying to win over the democrats to the stand-pat doctrine. The former may not be, but the latter manifestly is impossible.—Washington Post.

——Almost simultaneously two cabinet ministers—the secretary of the treasury and the secretary of war—notify all concerned that there's to be no tariff revision until after the presidential election of 1904. There seems to be no room for doubt that this notice is official.—Hartford Courant (Rep.).

——President Roosevelt's speeches are not sensational, and people look to libraries, rather than to rear-platform talks, for moral philosophy and political economy.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

STATE NEWS PICK-UPS.

SENSATIONAL WITNESS.

George T. Hemphill Testified in the Howard Murder Trial.

Frankfort, Ky., April 22.—At the afternoon session of the court several Clay county witnesses testified as to the reputation of Witness Stubblefield. They all swore his reputation on this score was bad. Mr. Campbell undertook to show that these witnesses had supported him for political office which they admitted. Mr. Smith, of the defense, broke in with an objection, saying that being a deputy sheriff or attending a republican convention as a delegate did not constitute a certificate of character. Dr. T. E. James, of Butler county, was an important witness. He testified that he was the man who came out of the state house shortly after the shooting and whom Dally and others supposed to have been Howard. Dr. James said he had gone in to inquire about the arrest of Harlan Whittaker, whom he knew well. A. V. White, L. & N. agent, tstified as to the time of arrival of the train on which Howard came. Photographer Ogg, of Berea, identified a photograph which he made of Howard in October or November, 1899, and which showed Howard without a mustache.

Frankfort, Ky., April 23.—George T. Hemphill, clerk in Caleb Powers' office, was the most sensational witness in the trial Wednesday afternoon. Hemphill said that he was summoned before the grand jury in April, 1900, and that the day he was summoned Gov. Taylor asked him to be as easy as possible on Henry Youtsey. Hemphill is a clerk in one of the departments at Washington and had never before testified except in the examination trial of Caleb Powers. He did not tell this at that time and had refused to testify in former trials.

The testimony of McKenzie Todd, private secretary to Gov. Taylor, was the same as on former trials and developed nothing particularly new. Green Golden was called but declined to testify for the reason that he is under indictment.

Frankfort, Ky., April 24.—Mrs. Henry N. Youtsey was called as a witness Thursday, but she was not permitted to testify as to conversations between her husband and herself. As she left the stand she touched Howard on the shoulder, and causing him to look around, shook hands with him cordially and also with his wife. Her action was generally conceded that she no longer confides in her husband, and that she wants to see Howard acquitted. The incident was to a degree dramatic.

Mrs. Eugene Scott, of Frankfort, contradicted Caines as to seeing Howard jump over the rear fence of the state house yard shortly after the shooting. Misses Lillie and Mattie Jones swore that Howard was cleanshaven in January, 1900. The other testimony Thursday was unimportant.

Geo. V. Craighead, a post office inspector, with headquarters at Cincinnati, arrived here Thursday night and was in consultation till a late hour with Deputy Marshal R. True. It is claimed that letters in the United States mail relating to the Howard trial have fallen into the hands of the prosecution.

Frankfort, Ky., April 25.—The prosecution Friday had its red letter day in the trial of Jim Howard. The defense closed its direct evidence at the morning session and the remainder of the day was devoted to rebutal testimony. The result is that Howard's alibi, as in former trials, has been badly shattered. The case will go to the jury Tuesday or Wednesday. Twenty-five or thirty witnesses were heard Thursday. N. H. Witherspoon, Youtsey's brother-in-law, did not respond when called. The failure of Mrs. Youtsey to testify probably accounted for his absence. Robert Triplett, Wesley Whittaker and Dan Vaughn were probably the most important witnesses of the day.

The investigation into the alleged rifling of United States mail either here or elsewhere resulted Friday in the arrival here of Post Office Inspectors Bailey, of Philadelphia, and Kile, of Louisville, who will assist Inspector Craighead, of Cincinnati, already here. They are working on the complaint which is said to have been filed by Postmaster L. F. Sinclair, of Georgetown. There is a growing belief that there is more sensation than anything else in the matter.

Robert Triplett corroborated Hotel Keeper Pence, who swore that Howard was not in his office when the news came that Goebel was killed. Wesley Whittaker, upon whom the prosecution laid hopes of making a star witness, and by whom it was expected to prove that Howard wore a short mustache, was shown up by the defense as an ex-convict. The testimony will be concluded Saturday.

Mad Dog Killed.

Cloverport, Ky., April 23.—A large, mad dog was killed at Patesville, this county. It entered the yard of J. M. Fawyer and was shot twice by Mr. Fawyer. The dog then ran and had to be shot six times more before it was killed.

Schools Closed By Smallpox.

Georgetown, Ky., April 23.—Smallpox caused the city schools here to dismiss until the epidemic is over. It is among some of the best families in town, and still spreading. It started at the school.

THIRTEEN YEARS AS A MAN.

Death Revealed the Secret of "Mr. Aaron Bark."

Madisonville, Ky., April 24.—The death of "Mr. Bark," which occurred at the home of the decedent, about 12 miles from Madisonville, on a little farm among the hills of Muhlenburg county, revealed another case of a woman masquerading for years in male attire.

In May, 1899, a man, apparently about 35 years of age, [illegible] the home of old "Jack" Tories, in Muhlenburg county, carrying a baby in his arms, and asked for a place to spend the night. Mr. Tories, being a congenial old man, gave the newcomer shelter. The next day Mr. Tories sold the stranger a small farm.

"Aaron Bark" employed a farmhand who did most of the farm work, although "he" was in the field nearly all the time. The man-woman lived on this farm 13 years and was never suspected of being other than a man.

When about to die he wrote a letter revealing "his" identity. She was a Mrs. Fred Green, of Virginia. Her husband died shortly after her child was born, leaving her a small sum of money.

"RED SODA."

That Is Maj. Burton's Name For Corn Juice.

Lexington, Ky., April 23.—For several months past Maj. Burton, of Athens, this county, has been plying a lucrative trade by the sale of whisky, under the seductive name of "red soda," to the young men and boys of his community. He was caught by a decoy and hauled before County Judge F. A. Bullock Wednesday on 11 charges of whisky selling and one for selling liquor to a minor. On the first 11 charges he was fined $100 and costs in each, and $50 and costs in the latter. Unable to dig up that amount he was committed to jail.

CRITICALLY ILL.

Louisville, Ky., April 25.—"Buck" Franklin, one of the most widely known trainers in the country, lies critically ill at his hotel in this city. He was stricken by an attack of bladder trouble four days ago, and Friday his condition was such as to alarm his friends. Friday night he rallied somewhat, but the outcome is still regarded as doubtful. Franklin is at present training for Woodruff & Buckner. The American Derby and Kentucky Derby candidate, Bad News, is in his charge.

Death of Mrs. Case.

Newport, Ky., April 26.—A pathetic scene was witnessed Friday when the aged father of Joseph Case, whose mysterious disappearance from this city one night about three years ago was the subject of much talk, implored a newspaper representative to use the columns of the paper in an effort to inform the son that his mother lay cold in death at their home, 913 Isabella street. Case's father does not think he is dead.

Peacemaker Was Shot.

Mt. Sterling, Ky., April 23.—Friday afternoon Andy James and his son-in-law, Charles Robinson, quarreled, and only the interference of friends prevented serious trouble. Geo. Crumpton, while defending James, enraged Robinson, and the latter shot Crumpton in the leg above the knee. Crumpton drew a knife, cutting through Robinson's coat.

Return of the Whipping Post.

Newport, Ky., April 25.—The incorrigible youths of this city, instead of being assessed fines, which their parents must pay in order to prevent them being sent to jail, will be sentenced to receive a certain number of lashes, administered by their parents in the presence of the court hereafter.

Bud Doble in Lexington.

Lexington, Ky., April 23.—Bud Doble, the well-known trotting horse trainer, driver and owner, arrived here Wednesday from San Francisco. He will be here for several weeks, during which time he will prepare the good colt, Kinney Lou, by McKinney, out of Mary Lou, she by Tom Benton, for his grand circuit engagements.

With Silver Dollars.

Frankfort, Ky., April 25.—Col. John K. Hendrick has paid to the committee the additional $416 made necessary by the withdrawal of Judge Breckinridge. Hendrick and Gov. Beckham each pay half of the $2,500 assessed as expenses in the race for governor.

Frost at Hopkinsville.

Hopkinsville, Ky., April 25.—There was a heavy frost throughout this section and wheat in the joint was damaged. Beans, tomatoes and other tender vegetables were "nipped." The mercury dropped to within one degree of the freezing point.

Willhite Gets Two Years.

Barbourville, Ky., April 25.—French Willhite was given a sentence of two years in the penitentiary for the murder of Andrew Hutton. The jury was out a part of two days and had much difficulty in reaching a decision

BOONE CO., RECORDER

Wednesday, - - April 29, 1903.

W. L. RIDDELL, - - Publisher.

We are authorized to announce J. W. Kennedy, of Union, as a candidat for the legislature, subject to the action of the Democratic Darty.

We are authorized to announce James A. Duncan as a candidate for clerk of the Boone circuit court, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

We are authorized to announce Jas. H. Craven, of Verona, as a candidate for Clerk of the Boone Circuit Court. Subject to the action of the Democratic party.

We are authorized to announce T. T. Hedger, of Georgetown, Scott county, as a candidate for Commissioner of Agriculture. Subject to the will of the Democratic party. Primary election, May 9th, 1903.

We are authorized to announce Ben Watt, of Warren county, as a candidate for Superintendent of Public Instruction, subject to the action of the Democratic party. Primary election, May 9, 1903.

We are authorized to announce Henry Bosworth, of Fayette county, as a candidate for State Treasurer, subject to the action of the Democratic party. Primary election, May 9, 1903.

Some of the friends of Mr. Hendricks are very indignant because of his withdrawal, before he consulted them. Beckham now has a clear track.

It appears that Mr. Hendrick did not see the voters deserting his opponent's ranks as rapidly as some of his over-enthusiastic supporters claimed.

The candidates for the Democratic nominations for State offices are now making the turn into the home stretch. One week from next Saturday they will come under the wire.

The last issue of the Pendletonian contained 20 pages, and was filled with pictures of many prominent Pendleton county people and business houses. It was an interesting edition.

The Knox county grand jury has begun a sweeping investigation of the alleged sale of schools by trustees to teachers. Warrants of arrests have been issued for several teachers who have failed to respond when summoned to appear before the grand jury.

It is said that Gov. Beckham addressed a crowd of 4,000 in a court house in one of the counties in the lower part of the State last week. If that report is true, that particular court house is nearly as large as the Music Hall in Cincinnati. Too many people in that crowd by about 2,600.

According to the April reports to the Agricultural Department at Washington, the prospects for a crop of wheat are very satisfactory the country over. The average condition of winter wheat was 97.3 compared with 82.1 as the average of the ten preceding April reports. The April report of last year gave an average of 78.7, and the average for 1901 was 91.7.

Col. Hendrick has withdrawn from the race for the Democratic nomination for Governor. Following is his card of withdrawal:

"I am no longer a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor. After consulting with a large number of my friends today in the city of Louisville, and after long and mature deliberation, it was decided that I could not win, as the time allotted for canvassing the State was too short to meet with even a reasonable per cent of the Democratic voters. Up to the present I have been enabled to canvass less than forty counties of the 119, and on the eve of the primary I realize that it is impossible to confer with or present my candidacy to even one-third of the members of my party.

"On account of the friends who have so generously supported me, I regret exceedingly the necessity which impels me to this step, but I do not desire a hopeless contest, or to do anything that will further embitter the already strained conditions of the Democracy of the State.

"I have been devoted to the interests of my party since I attained my majority, and I am willing now to sacrifice my personal ambition for harmony in the party that I sincerely believe stands as the sole representative of the plain people in our great country.

"To those who have so generously proffered me their support, I desire to return my most grateful acknowledgments, and I beg to assure those who have questioned my Democracy that I stand ready now to follow my party's flag to the last ditch.

John K. Hendrick."

Governor Beckham says:

"I want to see less politics and more business in Kentucky. I have attended to the work of my office in a plain business-like way, and have not sought to exalt myself by attempts at meteoric and pyrotechnic displays of brilliant politics. I may be a 'little man,' as some of my excellent critics call me, but I had rather burn a bond of the State's indebtedness than make a great speech or write a fervid and brilliaut article upon the political situation."

But they do say, Governor, that you have kept your political fences in repair, allee samee.

The United States has lost some more islands near the Philippine group. This is the second time the deficiencies of the map-makers have been called to the Goverment's attention. The last time it was for Sibitu and Cogayan de Jolo, and the Government had to pay Spain $100,000. How much this present bunch, which consists of some 40 small islands will set Uncle Sam back cannot be guessed. Perhaps he won't have to buy them, but Secretary Moody has informed the War Department that they are in a very ticklish place should any other power get hold of them.

The commission of Commonwealth Attorney M. D. Gray, at this term of the Boone Circuit Court, will amount to the magnificent sum of $12.50. This amount is a good showing for Boone County—a flattering testimonial as to the morals of her people, but it does not provide any food and raiment for Mr. Gray.—Boone County Recorder.

We also understand that the office of jailer does not pay the jailer more than $50.00 per year—another good testimonial. We do not therefore suppose the office is as much sought after as it is in Owen County. The most worthy testimonial for Boone County, however, is the very low rate of taxation.—Owenton News.

The farmers of the United States are awakening to the value of good roads and are discarding the old style, just as the urban population are doing away with macadam and boulders and substituting brick, granite and asphalt. The Brownlow bill in aid of good roads, a Federal measure, is not the cause, but the result of the awakening of the farmer, who is beginning to understand that the cost of hauling his farm produce to market increases as the roads suffer decrease in attention. He is also beginning to realize that good roads are educators, bringing members of communities together oftener and with a greater convenience and ease, and giving better opportunity for exchange of views—and garden truck. Prof. Holabird, of Crawfordsville, Ind., has paid attention to the statistical features of the general good roads movement, and gives the following as the relative cost of moving farm produce.

The cost of moving one ton by horse power over a sandy road is 64 cents, over wet sand 32 cents, over ruts and mud 39 cents, over broken stone ruts 29 cents, over an earth road that is dry and hard 18 cents, over a broken stone road in good condition 8 cents, over a compact gravel road 6.8 cents, over paving 5.33 cents and over asphalt 2.7 cents.

It is not necessary to be compelled to admit the correctness of the figures of Prof. Holabird to admit the greatly increased cost of hauling one ton by horse power over a poor road as compared with the cost of hauling over a road in good condition, and while it is not probable that the country roads will come to be asphalted, it is certain that the movement for good roads, and for methods of keeping them in good repair, is acquiring daily momentum. The rural population is setting its face against poor roads and toll roads, and Uncle Sam has taken a practical part in the movement by refusing to establish free rural delivery routes on roads in bad condition, or on roads where he is compelled to pay toll. —Ex.

In so far as any new clip has been marketed at the interior, quotations are fully up to last year's, and in several cases advances are recorded. Trade at the leading eastern cities is quiet, but manufacturers find it extremely difficut to secure even small concessions. In a few special cases holders have sold at a fractional reduction, but the statistical position is strong, and there is no sign of a poor season to reduction of stock of old wool.—Dun's Review.

Salvation is free, but it costs money to keep it.

LOOKS LIKE A WINNER.

HENRY BOSWORTH,

Of Fayette County,

Candidate for State Treasurer.

Henry M. Bosworth, Ex-Sheriff of Fayette County, candidate for State Treasurer, is the man who at the head of his deputies, marched into the train at Lexington, and in the very face of death and W. S. Taylor's assassins—soldiers—dragged out Caleb Powers and Capt. Davis and landed them in jail. Then with rare magnanimity refused the reward of $1,500 for their arrest offered by the martyred William Gobel's brothers.

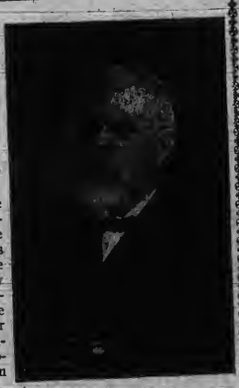
Henry Bosworth, the lion-hearted, iron-nerved ex-sheriff of Fayette county, is a candidate for State Treasurer.

Mr. Bosworth is a time tried Democrat, an 18-karat Democrat. He was an intimate friend of Kentucky's martyred Governor, William Goebel who always selected him as a leader in times which were full of trouble and clear heads and firm hands were needed.

If devotion to Democratic principles, if loyalty to Democratic leaders, if courage to perform duty, without reward, at the risk of life, deserves success, then truly ought Henry Bosworth to receive the vote of every Democrat. When the fair name of our dear old Commonwealth was assailed, when anarchy was trampled under foot and monwealth was dominant through military despotism and assassination, no man showed greater love and solicitude for his State and his party than did Henry Bosworth.

Read the pages of political history of Kentucky and no where will you find a more shining example of bravery and manhood than that page which records the capture of Caleb Powers by Bosworth.

Mr. Bosworth is a man of education and high ideas, he goes before the people of Kentucky with a record that is "clean as a star," and asks the Democrats to consider him upon his record as a flawless Democrat and a true Kentuckian.



The above compliment to Mr. Bosworth from one of the leading Democratic papers of Kentucky is a true appreciation of Mr. Bosworth as a man, a patriot and Democrat.

Such notices from all over the State makes assurance doubly sure that Henry Bosworth the honest, incorruptible man who has always served his party in darkest as well as brightest hours will be the next State Treasurer.

CANDIDATE

For Superintendent of Public Instruction.

My Dear Friends:—I presume that you know I am a candidate for the nomination of Superintendent of Public Schools, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary, to be held May 9th, 1903. It certainly is not presumptuous in me to say that I feel that I am eminently qualified to discharge the duties of the office efficiently and successfully.

I have spent my life in the cause of education. After graduation I was thirteen years in the Public School work at Browder's Institute in Logan county; have been a member of the County Board of Examiners for twenty-one years; was a member of the State Board, of Examiners four years, during the term of the lamented Capt. Ed Porter Thompson; and have been teaching in Bethel College 23 years.

I have ever labored faithfully for the maintenance and improvement of our public school system. I have always, when it was possible to do so, attended the meetings of State and District Educational Associations, taking an active part in the proceedings of said associations. I am now and have always been in deep sympathy with all measures that have had for their objects the improvement of the system and advancement of the cause of public education. Knowing that the stability and perpetuity of good government depend upon a moral and enlightened citizenship, and that our public schools are the basis of such citizenship, my labors for forty years have been directed in this channel.

With such experience and the measure of success that has attended my work, I appeal to you for support in my efforts to secure the nomination for Superintendent of Public Instruction. I have always been a loyal Democrat, have never at any time "bolted" or "scratched" the party ticket, and am now too old to learn how. Your support is solicited, if you deem me worthy and qualified, and whatever you do for me will be received with profound gratitude. I thus address you because in the limited time before the primary, it will be impossible to see you personally. With kindest regards,

I am, yours truly, JAS. H. FUQUA.

The committee had done its work well, and estimated that about three-fourths of an average crop in the county had been pledged to the association, and Boone will have a very good report to make to the district meeting in Lexington tomorrow.

Johnnie Hogan was held up in Cincinnati, one day last week, for $5. He was going along with a load of hay, when two men in a buggy drove in front of his team and stopped him, claiming that they met him on John street at a narrow place, and that he crowded them on to the curbing and broke two bows in their buggy top. Johnnie was then about eight squares from where they claimed the trouble occurred. He made them get out of his way after some parleying, but they called a policeman and followed him to where he delivered his hay. The man to whom the hay was delivered advised the payment of the five dollars, saying it would cost more than that amount to get through the police court. From the accounts given by Johnnie it was evidently a trick played by two bums who were out to raise a stake and did not care how.

The ball given at the Boone House last Friday night, was one of the pleasantest society events occuring here in a long time. The ladies were all handsomely gowned and a ball room seldom presented a more charming appearance. The music was furnished by a harpist and violinist from the city and was of the sweetest dulcet strains. A delightful lunch, furnished by the young ladies, was served at the proper hour, and every thing went on as merrily as could be desired, until four o'clock Saturday morning when the festivities ceased, and the guests homeward went, weary but happy. The following persons from a distance were present: Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Arnold, Mrs. J. B. Berkshire, Mrs. Shane, Miss Pearl Crisler, Messrs. William Crisler, William Berkshire, Gaines Wingate, G. C. The Open Door of Opportunity

HOW IT MAY BE DISCOVERED AND FULLY ENTERED

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

Chicago, April 8, 1903

Text:—"A great door and effectual is opened unto me, and there are many adversaries."—I. Cor. 16:9

PAUL had been laboring in the Gospel in the city of Ephesus about two years, and, feeling that his work there was completed he was about to withdraw into Macedonia and Greece to visit the churches there, when unexpectedly the door of further and fuller service was opened to him, and, writing to the Corinthian brethren, he says: "But I will tarry at Ephesus until Pentecost; for a great door and effectual is opened unto me, and there are many adversaries." It is interesting and important to note two things at the outset in connection with this experience of the great apostle in Ephesus: In the first place Paul was not so set in his purposes and plans and methods as to blind him to the unexpected opportunities opening before him; and secondly, he was ever ready to adapt himself to the new conditions and make the most of them. Perception and adaptability are qualities which are indispensable in Christian service, even as they are also in the secular affairs of the industrial and commercial world. God wants men and women whose eyes are wide open and whose hands are keenly alert. Such an one was Paul. Read the life of Paul as God has recorded it in the Acts and the Epistles and observe how forcibly these two qualities are illustrated by this great and brave and faithful soldier of the cross of Jesus Christ. At Philippi how many modern-day preachers and Christian workers are there who would have been quick to observe that down by the riverside where a few women were gathered in prayer was the open door of opportunity, and how many would have been willing and ready to adapt their carefully prepared sermons and Bible readings to the peculiar needs of that slim and humble audience? If ours had been the jail experience of Paul and Silas, how many do you suppose would have been wide awake and alert enough to see with the opening doors of the prison the swinging of the door of opportunity, and have been ready with eager hands to point the way of salvation to one who had but a few hours before so brutally imprisoned them? At Athens amidst the Greek scholars and philosophers, at Jerusalem when facing the mobs, on shipboard when tossed helplessly by the storm, among the rough, ignorant, half-civilized islanders, at Rome in the prison house of the Caesars, everywhere, Paul's perception in discovering open doors of service and his adaptability in fitting his message to the peculiar needs are always manifest. And God needs just such men and women to-day.

THAT Paul was enthusiastic over the new and unexpected developments at Ephesus is evident from the adjectives he uses to describe the door which has opened to him. It was great and effectual, and we need but to read the story of Paul's closing work at Ephesus in the nineteenth chapter of the Acts to realize how mightily it stirred not only the city but the entire province of Asia Minor, of which Ephesus was the commercial and political center. Enthusiasm (en theos, God in us) is a condition as essential to the successful issue in the Christian warfare as is steam in the operation of the big manufacturing plant. Perception discovers the door, but enthusiasm measures its dimensions. Adaptability equips for the service, but enthusiasm furnishes the power which uses every ability and faculty in the accomplishment of the work. Paul was an enthusiast of the most pronounced type. The one who is face to face with an open door must needs be, if it is to be entered and its possibilities adequately realized.

What was the explanation of Paul's enthusiasm? Surely not the adversaries which awaited him on the other side of that open door, of which he speaks in our text. Some vision, however, came to him through the open door which thrilled him and made him realize that, notwithstanding the many adversaries ambushed along his pathway, it was a great and an effectual work which he was to be permitted to accomplish. What was that vision? It was the vision of the God Whose hand had swung wide the door. His glory streamed through and marked with bright light the pathway which Paul's feet were to tread. His power overshadowed every turn in the way and marked where the adversary lay hidden. This was one of the conclusive evidences to Paul that it was an open door of opportunity before which he stood. The fact that God stood there with the drawn sword of His Word ready to strike a decisive blow against the goddess Diana and her devotees made Paul realize that that was the place for him to labor rather than in Macedonia and at Corinth, where he had laid his plans to go and where his desires were leading him.

THIS is important for the Christian to remember. The doors of service which God sets are often in another direction than that which plan and inclination would indicate. Paul felt led to preach the Word in Asia and repeatedly essayed to do so, but instead of persisting in the direction which his plans and inclinations would lead him to believe was the open door, he was sensitive to the leading of the Holy Spirit and found the open door God wanted him to enter was behind him and across the Aegean sea. Human plans and desires are not safe guideposts to point out the open door God has set. It is so easy to see what we want to see, and believe the thing we want to believe; to pick the text and make ourselves feel that it is God-appointed rather than that which it really is, self-assigned.

Another thing to remember is that the doors which God sets open up to the soul a new sense of the power of God. Paul could not have so cheerfully and bravely talked of the many adversaries which awaited him in his work at Ephesus if he had not had new consciousness that the power of God was the strong arm by which he was to overcome them. Joshua as he stood on the threshold of the promised land met the captain of the host of the Lord face to face. Then he was ready to march against his adversaries in the city of Jericho and destroy them. It may be that when Joshua went out of the camp of Israel to reconnoiter about the city of the enemy he was trusting a good deal in Joshua's ability and bravery to overcome the city. Certain it is that when he lifted up his eyes and looked toward the city and saw a man of war with drawn sword equipped for battle he was not quick to recognize him as the Lord's soldier, and was forced to inquire: "Art thou for us, or for our adversaries?" And when he found that it was the captain of the host of the Lord, it was no longer Joshua erect facing God's open door of service, and confident in his own strength, but Joshua prostrate asking: "What saith my Lord unto His servant?" The doors where there come no vision of God and no thrilling sense of His power are either doors which He has not set, or doors before which the soul must wait until the vision and the power have come as equipment for safe entering and successful achievement.

DIFFICULTIES in the way, either real or imaginary, are rather an indication of an open door than otherwise. Paul says "a great door and effectual" had opened up before him, but the way was beset by many adversaries. This is nearly always so in the Lord's service. The "woe unto you" was spoken by Christ to the Christian who was traveling the path of least resistance so as to win the favor and well-speaking of men. But the faithful servant who entered the Lord's doors was assured that persecution and trial would be constantly met with; that many adversaries would test the faith and patience of the Christian, as well as the wisdom and power of God. Paul's open door brought him face to face with much opposition, many difficulties and trials. But he was ready to face them all because he went armed with the power of God. He did not fight as one beating the air, but as one certain of ultimate victory. William Carey saw the open door in India of which God gave him a vision, and he entered only to face adversaries of opposition on every hand. But he did not turn back to his cobbler's bench in England and to his preaching there because of the difficulties in his way. All the adversaries combining to hinder the spread of the Gospel but convinced him that the open door of opportunity which God had set lay before him in India, and not behind over the easier life of Christian service in England. Difficulties seemingly insurmountable could not hide from the vision of Judson the open door which God had set for him in Burma. The adversaries but served as pace makers to force him more swiftly to the goal of God's purposes. "Adversaries here" is generally the sign which God posts over His open doors. It is not reason for discouragement. It is not excuse for turning back. It is one of the marks of identification of God's open doors and it serves as a strong incentive for entering.

THE doors of opportunity then which God sets may not be discovered in the direction of human plans and desires, but rather from the direction of God's unexpected providences; they may be known by the vision which one obtains of God and His power, and by the adversaries which lurk on the other side of the open doors. The degree of one's power to perceive the open door is measured by his degree of consecration and submission to God's will. The extent of one's adaptability to enter the door and accomplish the work there waiting to be done depends upon the equipment which the soul has obtained from study of God's Word, and God's methods of operation, and from close communion with Him. The energy which will signalize the work is dependent upon the amount of the power of God which is felt in the inner life. The engine will not give out more power than the pressure of the steam puts into it. The Christian will not be able to give out more energy than he receives from God. The infilling from God means the outgiving for God. The doors "great and effectual" which God sets must be entered by disciples who are great and effectual through the "power that worketh" in them as a result of the indwelling Christ.

THE unperceived door is a sad condition, a most unfortunate circumstance; but the perceived door unoccupied is a sadder condition, a more unfortunate circumstance. Who can measure the loss it would have been to Ephesus, to Asia and the whole of the world to the present day if Paul had failed to see the door which God had set for him? or if, having seen that door, he had persisted in his first plans of passing through Macedonia and visiting Corinth? There is a blindness in Christian service which robs the world, destroys the real usefulness of a Christian and delays the coming of the Kingdom of Jesus Christ. There is willfulness in Christian service which leaves uncultivated the fields where God has rich harvests to be gathered, and which sends one heedlessly to laboring in the barren fields of self-pur[illegible] desire, [illegible] and mistake may not be realized until the opportunity is gone forever.

The evangelization of the world in this generation, about which there has been much written and much discussed, would become a realization in fact instead of at present a possibility in theory, if Christians everywhere were keen to see the open doors and eager to enter them. Years ago the burden of prayers was for open doors, and God has set the open doors everywhere. There are enough open doors to-day which if observed and faithfully entered by Christians would raise a cry throughout the world that "they which turn the world upside down are come hither." And the world would begin to be turned right side up then. But Christians are too busy planning trips through the Macedonias and to the Corinths of their own purposes and desires to see the doors great and effectual opening before them in the place where they are now at work. Their plans are so important and must be pushed so hard that there is no room for vision of God's plan and God's methods. While the mind is painting a rosy-hued vision of the great work to be done over in Corinth, the opportunity right at hand is being neglected.

THE open door which God sets is always great and effectual, for a work with God in it is a tremendous opportunity and means a glorious victory. Oh, yes, the open door may be an obscure one in the home which to enter means unappreciated service, patient waiting, loving watchfulness, faithful Christ-like living; but if the dear one is brought at last to the feet of Jesus is it not better that you tarried at the Ephesus of God's opportunity than to have gone into the Macedonia of your own plans, even though to walk there meant promineence and the praise of men? The open door may be set apparently in the most unfruitful part of the Lord's vineyard, and there may seem to be a larger and better opportunity for our powers and abilities in another direction which it will take great consecration and humility to resist, but if the place where God has appointed us to labor is obediently and faithfully occupied we will find ourselves building gold, silver and precious stones into the enduring structure of God's purposes. On the other hand, if we fail to see the open door of opportunity at Ephesus and rush off into the larger field of Macedonia, though we may build so high and so wide as to win the praise of men, yet that which we build will only be wood, hay and stubble, which will burn fiercely in the day when God shall try our works. If God could only have every Christian in a church enter the door of opportunity which He would set for them, do you know what would result? There would be a mighty throb felt there as the power of God found a channel through which to pour, the community would feel the influence thereof until every work of darkness was made manifest and a howl was raised similar to that which rang on the air at Ephesus as Demetrius and his fellow-craftsmen ran hither and thither in mad rage because the profits of their heathenish trade were cut off. Adversaries would be stirred up, but sin and selfishness and greed would be revealed in their true light, and there would be a great turning to the Lord as a result. One reason to-day why the world is so unconscious of sin and its need of a Saviour is that there is not enough of the light of Jesus Christ shining in the lives of Christians to make sin and the need manifest.

THERE is something suggestive of change and newness in the thought of a door of opportunity. The side the door we stand the same self we have been, the same field of operations is about us, the same God is above us. But on the other side of that door we expect to develop into a new self, we expect to discover unknown riches in the field we have worked over and over again, we expect to experience and rejoice over new manifestations of God's power and glory as the new opportunities make it possible. And in all this the soul is never disappointed. The newer and larger and better self cannot be found over in Macedonia or at Corinth; but right here at Ephesus, where God has opened up a door of service for you, you may develop new beauties and new powers even as the bud in the garden plot will open to a larger and fuller and more fragrant experience if it is content to abide there instead of roaming the green fields yonder, which seemingly promise an enlarged sphere of usefulness.

It is a great privilege to have the all-wise God set open doors for us. He does it for every Christian. But it is a greater joy and fullness of life to enter that door. Then is there a beginning of the realization of that "far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory" of which Paul speaks in writing to the Corinthians. Oh, that we may see the doors which God sets! Oh, that we may quickly enter them!

Frenchman Who Presents a Reasonable Excuse for Not Understanding Our Language.

A Frenchman recently propounded through the columns of the Liverpool Daily Post a problem which may not be without interest for Americans. At any rate, it involves a principle of rhetoric which ought not to be disregarded, says the Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

"I am in Liverpool since a month," writes the French gentleman, "and I saw many things the which I stupefy; but of these this most amaze me. On your tramcars one writes: 'Passengers are requested not to board or leave the car while in motion.' 'Board' I comprehend not. My friend say it is abordter to go on ship, therefore one me demanded not to go on car and not go off whilst in motion. How can that be? I see thousand passengers since four weeks go on and off a car, but they all go whilst in motion. Shall one explicate how passengers whilst not in motion have power to go on and off a car?"

DOCTOR OR MILKMAN?

An Illustrative Instance of the Perversity of Some Simple-Minded Patients.

One of the hardest blows to the professional pride of physicians and surgeons is the excess of wisdom on all such subjects possessed by the world at large, says the New York Times. A surgeon tells of a case where he recently set a broken arm. The operation was successful and the splints had been removed. The surgeon advised his patient to leave off the bandages and manipulate the injured member at intervals.

Just as the doctor was leaving the house the milkman arrived on his rounds, and missing the splints, said to the patient:

"You'll take cold in that arm. You ought to keep it bandaged."

A few days later the surgeon called again and found that the patient, who had followed the milkman's warning, complained of soreness in the arm, and said: "Doctor, I think you've botched it."

The doctor, observing the bandages still on the arm, remarked: "And whose advice are you taking now, mine or the milkman's?"

AUTOMATIC STANCHION.

Device That Does Perfect Work and the Construction of Which Costs Almost Nothing.

A stanchion that will close itself automatically and securely fasten a cow the instant she put her head into it, although sometimes a nuisance, is generally an important labor-saving device. The illustration gives a clear idea of a simple arrangement by which any of the modern styles may be made into a self-fastening stanchion. It does perfect work, and the cost of construction is almost nothing. First, cut a hard wood stick 1x2 inches and just long enough to hold the stanchion open. This is shown as A in the illustration. Bolt it loosely to the inner side of the standard at B. Bore a hole through the latch at C. Through this hole drive a wooden pin, so that it will extend about two inches through the latch. Insert a screw eye at D, and another in the standard at E. Pass a small but stout cord through the screw eye at E, and attach it to the screw eye at D.

To the other end of the cord, fasten a heavy weight, say a pail filled with sand, and you will have a perfect self fastening stachion. The illustration shows the stanchion open. As soon as a cow puts her head into it, she pushes the cross-stick, A, off the pin, C, and it falls to a perpendicular position. This releases the latch, which is pulled into position by the weight, when the catch will fall and hold it.

Care should be taken to have the weight heavy enough to hold the cross-piece in position, or it may fall of its own weight and thus close the stanchion. If desired, a stout spring may be inserted at G, between the latch and the manger. In this case the cord and weight will not be necessary. The cross-piece can be put in position, and the latch fastened open while the cow is backing out of the stall, and thus the stanchion will be ready for fastening the cows without the loss of a moment's time.—L. R. Olds in Farm and Home.

TESTING MILK COWS.

The problem of cow testing continues to be one of the most important of the problems connected with dairying. It is a problem also in which is bound up much of the future success of dairy operations in this country. The first work has been and is to get the farmers to wake up on this matter and to realize that they have some cows that are being kept at a loss. But after the cow owners are stirred up to the importance of this matter, we still have to consider the best ways of testing cows and the methods that are to give certain results. In the beginning of the agitation, even the scientists themselves knew comparatively little of the fat contents of milk and the variation of the proportion of fat contents in the daily yield of milk. At first a man that wanted to purchase a cow would go out to the farm where she was kept, weigh one milking, test the milk and buy or not on the strength of that test. Now we have learned that one milking shows but little and that one test is little to be relied on. Cows vary enormously in a short period as to their milk giving. A. J. Glover, who has been testing hundreds of cows in Illinois, says that some of the variations are remarkable in this respect. One cow gave only two per cent. milk at one milking, but at the next her milk tested 4.5 per cent. Over short periods therefore the test is unreliable, but over long periods it is exceedingly accurate. This is one of the important pieces of information one must possess in testing cows. How long the periods of testing must be to give reliable results has not been determined, but it is considered that a test covering a month is fairly accurate, but to find out what a cow is really worth the tests should continue off and on for a year. This may seem to mean a great deal of work, but it does not. It merely means the saving of a sample of milk every day for perhaps weeks, keeping it by the help of some preservative, and testing it at one time. This is composite sampling and testing and is an easy way of solving a hard problem. The science of cow testing is one in which all cow owners are interested, and its elaboration means the improvement of all our dairy herds.—Farmers' Review.

COUNTRY ROADS IN WINTER.

Our Road System, as Now in Vogue in Most States, Is the Worst Kind of Failure.

With the ground full of water when it froze up and with a fairly open winter and a liberal amount of rain during the latter part, we have a new emphasis placed upon the good roads problem in some sections having newly established free delivery mail routes. When the patrons are shut in for three or four days at a time without their mail the roseate hue of the new system begins to fade away. The establishment of centralized school systems will present still another argument for road improvement. In many sections of the prairie the pavement of roads with stone or even gravel is very expensive owing to a lack of such materials in those localities. Very great improvement may, however, be made with the materials at hand. Dirt roads can be made that will be passable under practically all kinds of weather and that, during the greater part of the year, will be very good roads. One of the most universal failings of our roads is lack of proper under-drainage. This is the first essential of good road, regardless of the kind of material used for the surface. Stone or any other kind of paving will not keep in shape on top of a soft, spongy, water-soaked foundation. With a porous reservoir beneath the roadbed, into which the water taken up thereby can percolate, the old mudhole without a bottom will be a thing of the past. Perhaps the next most important step in the securing of better roads is a provision whereby they will have constant attention and repairs will be made promptly before the disorder becomes extensive. This will involve the abolishment of the old-fashioned system whereby the road work is done by the farmers when they have nothing else to do, and will involve also the payment of the road taxes in cash and the employment of a competent man by the year, who will devote his whole time to the work, and, with a crew of men constantly at work, will repair defects whenever and wherever they occur, and such improvements as are made will be made at the time when the work can be done the most economically and the best results be obtained, rather than when it suits the convenience of those performing the work. This change of system has been tried in a number of places in different states and is found entirely satisfactory and to give much better results than the old method. One of the chief stumbling blocks in the way of inaugurating this new system is the objection on the part of the farmers to paying their road taxes in cash, but when they once try it they prefer it to the old way. It is the universal experience that the same expenditure of money gives a far better road service under this system. Those who have the time and would prefer to work out their taxes can offset the cash payment by hiring out to the road engineer for such time as they may choose. Few realize how much more effective road work is when done at the right time. —Prairie Farmer.

LEVELER AND SMOOTHER.

For the many farmers who do not have rollers, here is an impliement that does the work just as well. On cloddy land it is better as it crusbes; for land with small, loose stones it is just the thing to make the ground smooth for the reaper or mower. It levels up uneven places without so much packing and can be used on any soil.

It is made of planks about 12 inches wide. If hardwood is used 1¼ inch planks are desirable, but if hemlock two-inch thick is best. It should be three planks wide and eight or nine feet long. The front plank should be turned slightly up and secured by 2x8-inch joists nailed or bolted across, as illustrated. It can be drawn by chain or tongue as preferred. This planker can be loaded with the larger stones as it is drawn over the field and emptied at fence turn. The material need not cost over $1.50 for the outfit.—Orange Judd Farmer.

The Good Roads Movement.

In Athens county, O., the farmers prior to election day were red-hot against piking. On election day it rained. Water and red clay carried the day for good roads. Now the farmers could not be induced to go back to the old mud-road system. If we only realized how much better our roads might be made by careful, intelligent expenditure of the road-money now available, there would be a more judicious selection of supervisors. We annually throw millions of dollars into our roads, a large per cent of which is wasted. Yet we begrudge the small additional tax that would make transportation the year round possible and profitable. By our wretched roads we annually lose enough to build good ones, and yet do not complain of the tax. Count the cost and good roads will win.—Farm and Fireside.

A well-prepared seed bed and good seed will give good results in seeding clover as well as any other farm crops.

THUNDER MOUNTAIN.

One of the most remarkable natural curiosities on the earth is to be seen in a rugged and almost inaccessible part of the newly opened, but already famous, Thunder Mountain gold region in Idaho. This strange freak of nature is called "Sheep-eater's monument," and is said to have derived its name from a tribe of Indians formerly inhabiting the district, says Leslie's Weekly.

The mountain is 70 feet high and consists of a rough shaft, composed of bowlders and gravel, tapering slightly upward, and capped by a huge irregular rock, whose weight is estimated at not less than 50 tons. The cap rests on slender projections from the shaft that are gradually being worn away by the elements, threatening the eventual fall of the great stone. The monument stands on the slope of a ridge which rises 1,000 feet and descends 500 feet from the site. It was undoubtedly formed by erosion. The surface of the declivity has been for centuries, and is yet, being washed away by water, the result of melting snows and rainfalls.

Originally, the capstone was stationed on the ground, but gradually the soil surrounding it was carried away, a narrow vertical section just under it being left intact, owing probably to some hard cementing substance in the conglomerate and possibly also to the direction in which the eroding torrents expended their force. How long a time was required to form the shaft may be partly realized when it is stated that there are trees not far away taller than the monument. As the erosive process continues, the shaft is likely to increase in length unless a soft spot should be reached under the present surface, in which case the curious formation might topple over and break into pieces.

HER LONDON ACCENT.

It Was Not the Real Thing When She Came in Contact with a Londoner.

There is a very handsome woman staying at one of the smart family hotels, where everybody knows everybody else, except the somebody and somebody else who don't speak to each other when they meet. She is a Chicago woman, rich as the whole Croesus family, and during a year spent in England was inoculated with a London accent which, to her way of thinking, took wonderfully. That accent is as dear to her as her back hair, comments the Washington Post. Now, at the same hotel abides an English gentlewoman whom everybody loves. A few evenings after the lady with the grafted accent arrived the English woman happened to hear that she was from Chicago. Accordingly she walked into the parlor where the aforesaid lady was criticising and commenting on things American in a way which English gentlefolk do not permit themselves when they visit us. The English woman did not hear the conversation, or monologue, rather, but she arrived just after the Chicago woman had said fierce things about the horrible American accent. The group of women stopped talking as the English woman drew near, and there was an introduction.

"I am so glad to know you," said the English woman, "and to know that you really are from Chicago. I spent such a delightful summer there during your wonderful world's fair, and to hear your charming western accent brings it all so vividly back to me." And there were certain ones among the women there who went out into the hall and meanly laughed.

CANINE INTELLIGENCE.

My friend was staying this autumn in Wales. Smoking and chatting one evening with a local farmer the talk fell upon dogs, says a writer in London Outlook. The farmer's sheep dog lay before the fire, and the farmer instanced his sagacity. He made an exclamation in Welsh. At once the dog rose and went to the door. "You might let him out," said the farmer. "The sheep are in the corn' is what I said to him." The dog passed eagerly out. In a few minutes there was a scratching at the door. The dog entered panting and lay down at the fire again. Shortly afterward the farmer repeated his Welsh remark. Again the dog ran to the door and my friend let him out. Again in a few minutes was the scratching at the door, and again he lay down before the fire panting. After an interval the farmer remarked in Welsh, quite in the way of conversation: "I am not easy about those sheep, I do believe they're in the corn." The dog without rising looked up at the farmer, gave two sharp yelps and turned round to his sleep again. He said as plainly as though it had been in words: "Don't be a fool; I've been twice and they're not in the corn."

Dressmakers in Court.

A London justice has just made an important decision regarding dressmakers' disputes. He will not have dresses tried on in court, because he "had long since come to the conclusion that with ordinary dresses any lady could wear a dress to make it look as if it did not fit," and he was also perfectly satisfied that "any milliner or dressmaker could pull it about and make it fit when it did not do so."—N. PROMINENT PHYSICIANS PRESCRIBE PE-RU-NA.

Dr. M. C. Gee, of San Francisco, Says, "Pe-ru-na is of Especial Benefit to Women."

ROBERT R. ROBERTS M.D

Robert R. Roberts, M. D., Washington, D. C., writes:

"Through my own experience as well as that of many of my friends and acquaintances who have been cured or relieved of catarrh by the use of Hartman's Peruna, I can confidently recommend it to those suffering from such disorders, and have no hesitation in prescribing it to my patients."—Robert R. Roberts.

ACONSTANTLY increasing number of physicians prescribe Peruna in their regular practice. It has proven its merits so thoroughly that even the doctors have overcome their prejudice against so called patent medicines and recommend it to their patients.

Peruna occupies a unique position in medical science. It is the only internal systemic catarrh remedy known to the medical profession today. Catarrh, as every one will admit, is the cause of one-half the diseases which afflict mankind. Catarrh and catarrhal diseases afflict one-half of the people of United States.

F. H. Brand, M. D., of Mokena, Ill., uses Peruna in his practice. The following case is an example of the success he has through the use of Peruna for catarrh.

Dr. Brand says: "Mrs. C., age 28, had been a sufferer from catarrh for the past seven years; could not hear plain and had watery eyes. She came to me almost a physical wreck. She had tried the Copeland cures and various other so-called specialists, and had derived no benefit from them. She told me she did not want to spend any more money on medicines unless I could assure her relief.

F. H. Brand, M. D.

"I put her on Peruna and told her to come back in two weeks. The effects were wonderful. The catdown look she had when I first saw her had left her and a smile adorned her face. She told me she felt a different woman, her hearing was improved and her eyes did not trouble her any more.

"This is only one case of the many I have treated with your valuable medicine."—F. H. Brand, M. D.

Catarrh may invade any organ of the body; may destroy any function of the body. It most commonly attacks the head, nose and throat, but thousands upon thousands of cases of catarrh of the lungs, stomach, kidneys, bladder and other pelvic organs have been cured by Peruna.

Peruna is able to cure catarrh wherever it may be located by its direct action upon the mucous membranes. Catarrh means inflamed mucous membranes. Peruna acts at once to cleanse and invigorate the catarrhal condition of the mucous membrane no matter where it may occur in the body. Its action is the same on the mucous lining of the nose as on the mucous lining of the bowels. It cures the catarrhal inflammation wherever it may occur.

Dr. R. Robbins, Muskogee, I. T., writes:

"Peruna is the best medicine I know of for cough and to strengthen a weak stomach and to give appetite. Beside prescribing it for catarrh, I have ordered it for weak and debilitated people, and have not had a patient but said it helped him. It is an excellent medicine and fits so many cases.

"I have a large practice, and have a chance to prescribe your Peruna. I hope you may live long to do good to the sick and suffering."

We say Peruna cures catarrh. The people say Peruna cures catarrh. Prominent men and women all over the United States from Maine to California do not hesitate to come out in public print to say that Peruna is what it is recommended to be, an internal, systemic catarrh remedy that cures catarrh wherever it may be located.

Dr. M. C. Gee's Experience.

Dr. M. C. Gee is one of the physicians who endorse Peruna. In a letter written from 513 Jones street, San Francisco, Cal., he says:

"There is a general objection on the part of the practicing physician to advocate patent medicines. But when any one medicine cures hundreds of people, it demonstrates its own value and does not need the endorsement of the profession.

"Peruna has performed so many wonderful cures in San Francisco that I am convinced that it is a valuable remedy. I have frequently advised its use for women, as I find it insures regular and painless menstruation, cures leucorrhœa and ovarian troubles, and builds up the entire system. I also consider it one of the finest catarrh remedies I know of. I heartily endorse your medicine."—M. C. Gee, M. D.

Women are especially liable to pelvic catarrh, female weakness as it is commonly called. Especially in the first few weeks of warm weather do the disagreeable symptoms of female weakness make themselves apparent. In spring, cold weather chronic sufferers with pelvic catarrh do not feel so persistently the debilitating effects of the drain upon the system, but at the approach of summer with its lassitude and tired feelings, the sufferer will in pelvic catarrh feels the need of a strengthening tonic.

Peruna is not only the best spring tonic for such cases but if persisted in will effect a complete cure. Write for a copy of "Health and Beauty," written especially for women by Dr. Hartman. If you want to read of some cures also, write for a copy of "Facts and Faces." That will surely convince you that our claims are valid.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

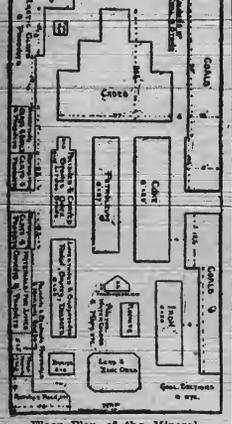
THE MINERAL DISPLAY.

Kentucky's Hidden Wealth Will Be Exhibited at Fair.

AMPLE FLOOR SPACE ASSIGNED.



"Mined In Kentucky" Will Be a Familiar Placard at Great Exposition — Experts Are Collecting Specimens — Former Mayor of Louisville Chairman.

Professor C. J. Norwood of Lexington, state inspector of mines and chief counselor to the mineral exhibit committee of the Kentucky Exhibit association, has completed the floor plan for Kentucky's mineral display in the Mines and Metallurgy building at the world's fair. A reduced reproduction of it shows the extent to which Kentucky will go in making an exhibit of the untold mineral wealth of the state. The chairman of the mineral exhibit committee, former Mayor Charles P. Weaver of Louisville and Professor Norword secured from the chief of the department of mines and metallurgy, Professor J. A. Holmes, on a recent visit to St. Louis, the promise that Kentucky's mineral exhibit would occupy a most important part in the building. He has assigned 5,000 square feet in one place, and this is covered by the floor plan shown in this article. Kentucky will be given

Floor Plan of the Mineral Exhibit.

1,000 square feet in other parts of the building, and in it she will make duplicates of displays in her collective exhibit. This will be especially true of coal, oil and clays—three classifications that Kentucky will some day lead the world in.

OTHER KENTUCKY EXHIBITS.

One of the chief exhibits to be made by Kentucky at the exposition will be of forestry. Mr. A. N. Struck, the well known lumberman of Louisville, is chairman of the committee having this display in charge, and expects to make an exhibit at the fair that will attract thousands of dollars of capital to the virgin forests of the state. He will adopt the plan used in the Jesup Collection of Woods in the American Museum of Natural History in New York city, for exhibiting Kentucky trees. This will permit him to show sections of trees cut in a manner to indicate clearly the cross and longitudinal grains, while at the top will be displayed the angular grain. Half of the wood will be in the original state and the other half polished with oil or varnish. Attached to each specimen will be a small card with a general description of the tree's characteristics, such as height and foliage, section wherein it is principally found and commercial uses to which it may be put. Mr. Struck has not made public all of his plans for the forestry exhibit, but he is a man of originality and the display will certainly be striking.

The United States Military academy at West Point will have an exhibit. A building 38 feet long, 29 feet wide and 31 feet high, will be erected to contain the exhibit and the architecture will be such as to suggest at a glance the academy at West Point.

Woman as a Factor.

(Contributed by Pupils of League Institute, Yeoman, Kentucky.)

It is stated by M. Theirs somewhere in the history of the French Revolution that there never had been any great movement among nations in any age of the world, whether resulting in revolution, anarchy or better government, which could not be traced to the agency of woman for its origin.

"They talk about a woman's sphere,
As though it had a limit.
There's not a sphere in Earth or Heaven,
There's not a task to mankind given,
There's not a blessing or a woe,
There's not a whisper yea or no,
That has a feather's weight of worth,
Without a woman's in it."

Authority belongs to man—influence, to woman. Law and penalty are in his hands. He may speak through prison bars and bolts, and the erring may be filled with awe and trembling. Woman enters through those bars and reaches the inner life and moves it to love of truth and goodness.

The influence of woman is the most potential of any that operates to make society, what it is; and all phases of life, private or public, will take their chief hue from this. In the language of Wordsworth. "A perfect woman is nobly planned, to warn, to comfort, not to command."

The influence of mothers in the formation of characters has long been acknowledged. Napoleon attributed his energy and self control to his mother. Cromwell inherited his mother's strength of character. It was the fostering influence of Mary Washington that gave us "The Father of Our Country."

Goethe says, From father have I the law; from mother, the pleasure and love of learning. "One good mother," says Herbert, "is worth a hundred school-masters." A good mother has been truly called, Nature's chef-de-oeouvre.

The part played by woman as recorded in the Scriptures furnishes us with a view of God's own plan. The influence of Esther, Ruth, Lois, Eunice and many others have the same trend. Woman was last at the cross and first at the sepulchre to proclaim a risen Redeemer. The design of the Creator has never changed in regard to her mission. How well she is filling her mission in these latter days may be best shown by referring to the work in which she is chief factor.

Catherine Booth, the mother of the Salvation Army has built up of recruits gathered from the highways and the byways, a vast world wide church. How bright and beautiful stands the character whose majestic proportions rise up before us, at the bare mention of Florence Nightingale. So gentle, so patient, so devoted in relieving the maimed and dying soldiers amid the fetid air of crowded hospitals.

And again no woman is more highly honored,—and justly so, than Clara Barton. Her mission has been world wide. In the Civil War her influence was felt on every battle field from Bull Run to Appomattox. Her soothing hand was laid on the brow of the wounded and lifted the head of the dying on both sides in the Franco German War. She went to the relief of the suffering Armenians in 1896, and a little later to the starving reconcentrados in Cuba. She wears the Iron Cross of Germany, the Gold Cross of Baden, and the Red Cross of all human hearts.

How inexpressibly beautiful was the life of Francis Willard—a host within itself. At the head of a mighty army arrayed against the mightiest foe of mankind, who can estimate the value of such a life? It may be a lack of romantic appreciation, due to my matter of fact nature, as to what the world calls greatness, or canonizes as glory, but to my mind there is more of it in the career of Francis Willard than in the world renowned countrymen of ours, Admiral Dewey, Schley and Sampson, so recently and loudly applauded.

Woman was not intended to be an unthinking creature or merely the pretty ornament of man's leisure. We do not believe in the thought that chemistry is enough to keep the pot boiling, or geography enough to know the differments of her house is science enough for any woman; but rather do we believe to instruct woman is to instruct man; to enlarge her mental freedom, is to extend and to secure that of the whole community. Many there are at the beginning of the twentieth century who think that the elevation and improvement of woman, is to be brought about by awarding to her political power; who anticipate great good from the universal enfranchisement of woman.

We deem it sufficient to state that the power which has long been denied her politically, is more than compensated for in that power which it is her prerogative to wield in private life, by the training in the home, those who are to do the manly as well as the womanly work in the world.

The power to form the character of the whole human race is certainly far greater than that which woman could ever hope to exercise as mere voters for members of Congress.

Fellow sisters, here then is an opportunity for us to achieve greatness. Let us gird on our armor and go fourth in the battle of life, not like dumb driven cattle, but like heroes in the strife; realizing that she who can implant courage in the human breast is the best physician; he who can win souls is the best preacher; he who can win moral victories is the greatest conqueror. Life will then be useful; Death will be welcome; Immortality will be glorious.

Boys, when you hand in your items written on the envelope of your sweetheart's letter, don't forget to take the letter out. I catch on to enough without reading your letters.

Leslie, the reason I did not mention your going to Erlanger to see your girl, was not because I did not know it. I only mention it now to show you that you are not as shrewd as you imagine.

Ye scribe called on Nicholas Fleek, last Monday evening, and received a 16 to 1 and the fractional part thereof necessary to insure the RECORDER a weekly visitor at his home for one year. After paying the money and receiving the receipt, he expressed himself as feeling better and happier, because of having done his duty, and as believing he would get value recieved. Who will be next?

Idlewild, Mr. Cravens may not have been much encouraged while making the canvass for circuit clerk in your precinct, but I think you are mistaken in its being solid for Duncan. I don't believe he will get the whole pie, crust and all, even with the help of Flicker-tower's "ointment." There is not a man in the county so popular that he can get all the votes cast in any precinct. Encouragement in a canvass for office amounts to nothing until backed up by votes. While Mr. Cravens may not have been much encouraged in your precinct, he has been in others; encouragement that will be backed up by votes that I opine will make it unpleasantly warm for Mr. Duncan.

Bro. Hathaway, I cannot withdraw an accusation until I make one. You are the accuser, if an accusation has been made, not I. If I have been misinformed as you say, then there is no cause for further controversy between you and me. My informant knows what he told me, and I know he has read what we have said in regard to the matter, and will read what I am now saying; then if he takes your medicine in silence I will conclude he misunderstood you, because I don't believe he would misrepresent.

Our neighborhood was shocked by the sudden death of our old and highly estimable citizen, John Deck. He was about part of the day Thursday at work, but in the afternoon he went to bed from which he never arose, dying Friday morning about 1 o'clock. He was born in Germany in 1825, and came to this country in 1853, and was married to Miss Eva Smith in 1866. To them were born two daughters and three sons, all of whom are living. He was a man who attended strictly to his own business, and whose word was as good as his bond. He was neighborly and kind, and was liked by all with whom he was associated. His children are John Deck, who lives between Rising Sun and North a Landing; Mrs. Emma Grote, who lives in Madison, Indiana; Miss Minnie and Charlie, who live in Cincinnati, and William, who has been making his home in Connersville, Indiana. H. G. Mathews, whose legal residence is in Covington, attended the convention in that city, last Saturday. The only fault you can find with Grant is his politics, he being a stalwart Republican, and that is a very small one as the best friends we have are in the g. o. p.

T. B. Mathews is at home from his southern trip. While in the South he visited Chicamauga Park, the scene of one of the fiercest battles in the annals of history. It was there contending armies waged a bloody battle for five days and nights, and 17,000 men were killed.

May day was celebrated in Gordon's Hall with the most delightful evening I have spent in a long while. The music was inspiring—the dance enlivening and the lunch invigorating to all present—twenty young couples contributing to the pleasure making of the evening. An abundant display of flowers were on hand, not upon the walls, but on the lappels of the gent's coats and the fronts of the ladies' waists. The May of youth and bloom of lustihood was manifest in the actions of all present.

There was no May Queen crowned, since everybody present would have been entitled to that honor. The festivities continued till the dawning of the morning. It seemed as much impossable to scatter them, as to make them sleep on that May day evening. I will not undertake the mention of the lovely ladies and gents of our town who conoleved and conducted the festivities of the evening, but will content myself with the naming of visitors who assisted in making the evening so enjoyable. Miss Jeanette Hays, of Aurora, the guest of Miss Lola Mathews; Miss Olga Kirkpatrick, of Burlington, the guest of Mrs. J. B. Berkshire; Miss Flora Arnold, of Bellevue; Mrs. Ira Wingate, of Walnut Hills; Misses Jessie Conner and Mary Gaines, of Bullittsville, and Miss Annna Gaines, of Idlewild. Hal G. Rumor says that one of our most accomplished young ladies will wed one of Uncle Sam's sailor boys some time this month; also, that one of our young men will lead a handsome Burlington lady to the altar in the near future.

Jim Gaines says he would not have told that corn story last summer had he known it would get into the Recorder. He is afraid it will cause people who do not know him to think that he does not adhere strictly to the truth. Don't worry, Jim, your neighbors can testify as to your truthfulness.

The Hebron correspondent had probably forgotten the drought we had two years ago when he said he hoped the seven rainy Sundays would soon pass or perhaps, he would rather see it rain during the week than on Sunday. If this is the case he probably does not have the same opinion of the matter he did when he said she liked to see it rain at nights and Sundays so the poor people could get to rest.

Bro. Thomas we think your proposition for the next contest is not altogether a good one. We do not believe it would be a fair contest in which the best writer would get the prize. Our reasons are these: First, there are some readers of the Recorder who do not know good reading from bad. Second, the most of the readers who did vote would vote for their own neighborhood correspondent whether they thought he was the best writer or not, in which case the correspondent whose neighborhood had the most subscribers would have an advantage over the other. Third, there are many readers who would not vote at all, unless some one talked to them and induced them to vote, and in this case the correspondent who did the most talking would have a great advantage over the others.

THE FAIR BUILDINGS.

Dedicated With All Possible Pomp and Ceremony.

The Crowd in Round Numbers Is Estimated at 145,000—Ten Thousand Troops Were In the Military Parade in the Morning.

St. Louis, May 1.—The buildings of the Louisiana Purchase exposition Thursday were dedicated with all possible pomp and ceremony. In every way the exercises were a success, but the weather was bad. The wind blew fiercely from the west, sending great clouds of dust whirling into the faces of the troops as they marched past the presi[illegible] partly blinded the president that it was well nigh impossible to see across the street in which the 10,000 were marching.

Added to the discomfort of the wind and dust was a temperature which sought for the marrow and generally reached it.

Both President Roosevelt and former President Cleveland remained in the reviewing stand exposed to the icy wind until the end of the parade, although their faces were blue and their limbs were stiffened by the cold. Conditions in the liberal arts building, where the dedication ceremonies proper were held, were little better.

The effect of the cold was evident in all the speeches as the speakers, commencing their speeches in clear tones, were without exception given over to catarrhal inflections as they finished.

Despite this heavy handicap, however, the ceremonies were splendidly handled and the program was carried out to the letter, and all possible consideration was shown to the great crowd, which numbered in round figures 145,000.

The parade of 10,000 troops in the morning was somewhat longer in passing before the president than had been expected, but for all that he was only 15 minutes behind the scheduled time, when he was escorted by the committee into the liberal arts building. In order to arrive even as early as that he was compelled to take his noonday meal under somewhat uncomfortable circumstances. During the luncheon, which he ate at the conclusion of the parade, he was shoved helter skelter by half the people who had been in the grand stand. The food was placed on a rectangular counter and the president, like everybody else, "helped himself." The crowd inside the tent was dense when the president, with secret service men and Adjt. Gen. Corbin acting as "interference," forced his way to the counter. He was so closely pressed that when he attempted to move his arm his elbow disturbed a cup of coffee held by Gen. Corbin. With some difficulty the officers forced the crowd to allow the distinguished guest elbow room, but they would allow him nothing more. This maneuver forced the adjutant general out of range of the sandwiches, but the president devoted one hand to passing food to his escort while the other was devoted to his own advantage.

The manner of the president's lunching was sufficiently unconventional to excite curiosity, and probably 25 per cent. of the people who congested the tent were present merely to witness the chief executive of the nation eating at the democratic level of a clerk in a quick lunch restaurant."

The important ceremonies in the liberal arts building were handled with all possible dispatch. Of all the speakers President Roosevelt alone was able to make his voice carry further than 50 feet from the stage. By far the largest part of the assembly could hear nothing and it was nearly freezing.

When the president rose to speak he was cheered to the echo. He bowed again and again, suggesting by his manner that quiet be restored. Taking advantage of a lull he called, "Now you, my fellow citizens, give me all the chance you can, for I need it."

The chance was given and the president began his address. A burst of applause greeted his statement that the Dutch had done great things for the country in its infancy and the president laughed in a manner which plainly said: "That means my ancestors."

So many people were standing on their chairs and those behind them produced so much outcry in consequence that at one time the president was compelled to halt in his remarks to say, "Won't you sit down? If you do the people behind you will see better," and as they granted his request, he added, "Thank you." Another outburst of applause which was long continued after he had spoken about 15 minutes caused him to laugh and remark to President Francis, "Now they think I'm done," and when the applause died away he went on with his speech. After leaving the hall the president was entertained at dinner in the administration building from the windows of which he watched the fireworks until 10 o'clock when he entered his train.

AMID BOOM OF CANNON.

President Roosevelt Arrived in the Capital of Kansas.

Topeka, Kan., May 2.—President Roosevelt made two addresses in Topeka Friday night, one at the laying of the corner stone of the new rail road Y. M. C. A. building and another at the Auditorium before the international convention of the Y. M. C. A. Both addresses were heard by immense crowds and were received with great enthusiasm. After laying the corner stone [illegible] ing the president was conducted to the residence of Gov. Bailey, where he was entertained at dinner. His last address was given at 9:30 o'clock. The crowd was large but so excellent were the police regulations that there was little or no confusion. President Roosevelt's train arrived in Topeka an hour late. Over 12,000 persons assembled at the site of the new Y. M. C. A. building to welcome him. At 6:55 o'clock the booming of cannon announced the arrival of the president's train north of the river.

A cavalry and mounted police escorted the president to a platform. He made a short address and then laid the corner stone.

General Manager Mudge, of the Santa Fe, presided. He presented to the president a silver trowel which had been contributed by the road, and with this the president placed the mortar.

In his address President Roosevelt expressed his pleasure at being in "the geographical center of the United States." He congratulated the delegates to the Y. M. C. A. convention that they had come to Kansas for their great meeting and said he hoped their meeting would be the most profitable ever held. The president characterized the railroad Y. M. C. A. as a potent agency for good.

The ceremonial occupied 20 minutes. Then the president and his party were driven rapidly to the Copeland hotel. A number of the party at the Copeland hotel were entertained at dinner by the Y. M. C. A. The president was taken to the residence of Gov. Bailey, where he was entertained.

After dinner at the governor's house the party proceeded to the Auditorium where the president delivered an address to the delegates of the Y. M. C. A. committee. The large building was jammed and there were thousands who could not enter.

Topeka, Kan., May 2.—During the trip to Gov. Bailey's house a man of the name of Murphy attempted to mount the president's carriage. He was knocked off by a mounted policeman. Murphy then jumped on one of the steps with this remark: "I guess I'll ride here." One of the secret service men in the carriage by a well-aimed blow sent Murphy rolling in the gutter. He was afterward arrested. The fellow was unarmed and did not contemplate any assault on the president. The incident greatly amused the president. One of the president's guards Friday night was Patrolman McIntosh, who was a member of Mr. Roosevelt's command at Santiago. McIntosh was recognized by the president.

THE HARMONY SOCIETY

It Is Thought the Real Purchaser Is the American Bridge Co. and That They Will Centralize Their Plants There.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 2.—Economy and the 2,600 acres of the original tract of the Harmony society, surrounding the old town, have passed into the hands of Pittsburg and eastern capitalists. The deal was conducted by the Real Estate Trust Co. The amount paid for the tract is not made public, but the Liberty Land Co. is capitalized at $2,500,000, all paid in, and it is known that it has issued $2,500,000 bonds as part of the purchase money. The papers for the sale were signed several days ago by Trustee John S. Duss for the Union Co., which held title to all of the property of the old Economite society, but details were not settled until late Friday.

The identity of the backers of the Liberty Land Co. is not positively known, but it is generally believed that the American Bridge Co. is the real purchaser and that the intention is to centralize the plants of that company on the property in the near future. James A. Huston, general manager of the Pittsburg district of the bridge company, is also president of the Liberty Land Co. Ambridge, the new town established by the American Bridge Co., and where one of the largest structural steel plants in the world is building, immediately joins the Economy tract.

The deal provides for the sale of all the holdings of the Economites except three or four acres in the old town which will be retained for the members still living and two blocks occupied by the "Great House," the home of Trustee Duss and the official headquarters of the society, and the town hall with the famed Economy wine vaults nearby, remain in the old hands. There are only six living members of the society, including Trustee Duss, his wife and several relatives by marriage.

The main tract purchased extends 3½ miles along the Ohio river from near the Allegheny county line, taking in all of the township of Harmony and part of the township of Economy. It extends back over the hills almost a mile and a half.

A HEARTY RECEPTION.

Paris, May 2.—King Edward arrived in Paris Friday afternoon and was accorded a hearty reception by France. His majesty's welcome at the Dauphin railroad station by President Loubet and the chief officers of staff and his drive through the avenues, the Bois de Boulogne and the Champs Elysees presented a succession of brilliant spectacles. Everywhere the populace gave the king enthusiastic greeting, the demonstrations at the Place de l'Etoile and the Place de la Concorde becoming tumultuous. King Edward showed the keenest appreciation of French good will. Only scattered shouts of "Pashoda" and "Kruger" were heard and they were lost in the tremendous volume of demonstrative approval.

Vast crowds filled the boulevards from the early hours, people struggling to gain the vantage points along the route to be followed by the royal procession.

How Pat Lost His Beauty.

"At the Art Students' league, where I studied in 1884 and 1885," said C. D. Gibson, the illustrator, "there used to pose for me an extremely unprepossessing Irishman. This fellow was asked by a young girl one day how he came to be so ugly.

"'You see, miss,' he replied, 'it came about like this. When I was a baby there wasn't a prettier, sweeter child in all Ireland, and I should have grown up to be a very handsome and attractive man by rights; but my mother put me out to nurse, and the nurse changed me for the ugly, ill favored creature that I am.'"—N. Y. Tribune.

Feels Younger and Stronger.

Festus, Mo., May 4th.—Mr. Janney S. Lilly, a highly respected old gentleman, aged 78, and whose home is in Festus, says:

"For many years I was failing in health. My kidneys were weak and gave me no end of trouble. I had pains in my back and hips so bad that I could not sit up straight without bracing my back, and could not sit only a few minutes in any one position.

"I had to get up during every night very frequently to relieve myself.

"Our doctor said I had Kidney and Bladder inflammation. I have suffered for over five years in this way, always worse at night.

"I could get no relief and was getting worse till I used Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"After I had used a few boxes of this remedy I felt stronger and better than I have for years and years. My pains all left me and I can rest and sleep.

"Every old man or woman who feels as I felt should use Dodd's Kidney Pills, and I am sure they will not be disappointed. They brought me out wonderfully."

Reliable Recipe.

A case of toadstool poisoning at Wichita leads a correspondent to ask for some "reliable recipe whereby one may tell the mushroom from the toadstool." We believe that the only reliable test of these plants was given by the late Artemus Ward—"if you eat 'em and live, they're mushrooms; if you eat 'em and die, they're toadstools." And this is so simple and reliable that it ought to be in use in every family.—Kansas City Journal.

To Australia.

Circuit tour tickets covering the railroad trip to the Pacific Coast and via the various trans-Pacific steamship lines to the far East, are each day becoming a feature of greater popularity to the traveling public. The Chicago & North-Western Ry. have recently announced the sale of tickets of this character to Sidney, Australia, and return, in connection with their Overland Service to the Coast, tickets being good returning via the Ross Mail Line to Vancouver or via the Oceanic S. S. Co.'s Line, the direct route to San Francisco.

These circuit tour tickets are sold at very low rates. The trans-Pacific service has grown and improved very rapidly in recent years and tourists find the trip filled with scenes of picturesque interest not equaled in the old journeys made by tourists through England and on the continent.

The transcontinental train service and the trans-Pacific steamship service are of the highest possible character and the time required for making these journeys is much less than ever before.

A PRIEST ARRESTED.

Father Reichlin, Brother of the Murdered Girl, Believes the Accused Is Innocent—Strange Men Seen Near the Reichlin Home.

Lorain, O., May 4.—Rev. Charles Reichlin, pastor of St. Joseph's church in this city and brother of Agatha Reichlin, who was murdered Friday night, Sunday made a sensational denunciation of the authorities for the arrest of Rev. Ferdinand Walser on the charge of murdering his sister. The occasion was at the services Sunday morning in that church and the place was from the alter steps. Rev. Father Reichlin was greatly affected over the happening of the week and could hardly speak. Several times his voice was husky from emotion and he paused frequently to overcome his feelings.

Miss Reichlin, aged 30, was brutally murdered in her bed. Her head was crushed with a stone. Father Walser was visiting at the residence during the absence of Father Reichlin, at Kelley's island. Father Walser's room was next to the room of the murdered girl, and the door between could only be locked from Walser's side. The minister said that a man poked his head into his room and Walser told him to get out, which he did. Walser gave the alarm and he, together with another brother of the dead girl who slept in another part of the house, they discovered the dead body of the woman.

Saturday forenoon blood hounds were sent for and taken to the Reichlin residence. They were allowed to sniff the clothes of Miss Reichlin; they then went direct to the bed of Father Walser. This was repeated two or three times with the same result. The animals would go no further.

The priest was placed under arrest charged with first degree murder and for safety, as there was silent threatenings. He was taken to Elyria and locked up. He denies all knowledge of the crime further than he stated.

The motive for the crime is a mystery, as nothing in the house was taken, though there was jewelry and money at hand in Miss Reichlin's room and no evidence of a criminal assault was apparent.

Father Reichlin in his statement said; "I am sorry to seo that Father Walser is connected with the murder of my sister. I am sorry because I know, I am convinced before God that he is absolutely innocent, and that no matter how strong public opinion is, how spiteful, how atrocious that public opinion may be, it can not make him out a murderer, the murderer of my sister. The time will come when I will give my version of the bloodhound story upon which the character of public opinion seems to be based. My friends, I believe Father Walser innocent until he is proved guilty. Personally, I must say that I do not know which assault is most brutal, the assault of the murderer upon my sister or the assault upon the reputation of Father Walser, the assault made by public opinion on that good priest."

The scene of the murder was the point of interest for thousands of callers at the Reichlin home Sunday, where the body was in view until it was taken into St. Joseph's church at 3 o'clock, where the vespers for the dead were sung by Rev. Charles Reichlin and two assisting priests. The congregation was so great that it entirely filled the seats and all the standing room.

The funeral services were held Monday morning at 9 o'clock, the interment being at Elyria.

Father Walser, who is confined in the county jail at Elyria, was not accessible to visitors and he has seen no one since Saturday. He is treated as any other prisoner, except that he has the freedom of the corridor. His preliminary hearing will be held probably on Tuesday. There is no excitment at Elyria and no sign of unlawful action.

Theories concerning the crime are as many as there are individuals. The authorities are not disposed to give expression to any views.

Support of the belief that a burglar committed the crime was given impetus Sunday by the statements of several neighbors who had seen a stranger hanging around the Reichlin home for several hours on the night of the crime.

FOUGHT IN CHURCH.

Women and Men Had a Hand-to-Hand Conflict.

Joliet, Ill., May 4.—Women and men Sunday fought hand-to-hand with each other and then fought hand-in-hand against the police in the Slavonic Roman Catholic church. The trouble was started by several women as the collectors were circulating through the church. There were 2,000 men, women and children in the church when the fight began. In spite of all the protests of Father Kollar and others, the church members fought with fists and pieces of furniture, knocking each other right and left. Some one ran from the church and called on the police for help.

In a few minutes a patrol wagon full of policemen drove up to the church and the officers entered the edifice which was filled with whacks, thumps, din and tumult. Bloody noses and lacerated faces were numerous. The men had been penned in by a cordon of angry women, who pelted the stronger ones with clenched hands and books.

By the time the police arrived some of the combatants had fled to the street. As the policemen entered the church those on the outside returned to the fight armed with clubs, stones and revolvers. Those within left off fighting with each other and unitedly beset the police. Those from without fired into the patrolmen from the rear.

Women and children cried out in terror at the sight and many men ran from the church or leaped out of windows. Then the policemen drew revolvers and threatened to shoot unless order prevailed. The affrighted combatants ceased fighting and the policemen began to make arrests. Of all the persons injured none had to be taken to a hospital. Father Kollar, who entered into the midst of the fighting in an effort to calm his parishioners, escaped uninjured. Many arrests were made during the day, but no one knows exactly who started the fight, or what is was about.

Rome, May 4.—Emperor William was received by the pope Sunday. He had a conference with the pope of 40 minutes' duration and then returned to the residence of the Prussian minister to the Holy See.

At the vatican the emperor was received with military honors by the palatine guard and a platoon of gendarmes and he was welcomed by the high dignitaries of the pontifical court.

Emperor William presented to the pope a large photograph of the Metz cathedral. The pope expressed his thanks for this gift and remarked that the Metz cathedral greatly resembled that at Reims. Emperor William was surprised at the quickness of the pontiff in remarking that the one cathedral was a reproduction of the other.

The only Sunday morning newspaper in the city was served with a notice to cease work at midnight. The order was obeyed, the paper being circulated before 12 o'clock.

RAN INTO THE CROWD.

Many Excursionists Killed and Wounded in Detroit.

All the Dead and Injured Are Thought to Have Lived in Toledo—The Engineer Narrowly Escaped Being Lynched.

Detroit, Mich., May 4.—While 1,500 Poles Sunday night were waiting to board an excursion train for their homes in Toledo after a holiday spent in Detroit, a fast passenger train on the Grand Trunk railway crashed into the crowd and killed at least seven persons and injured many others.

The day had been spent merrily by the members of the Polish lancers of Toledo and the hundreds of men, women and children were packed in close quarters at Canfield and Dequindre streets shortly after dark. While the people laughed and talked the heavy train turned a curve and bore down on the human mass in the darkness. The headlight gave a momentary warning, but the people were so crowded and so frightened by the rumbie of the wheels, screeching of escaping steam and the grinding of the expeditiously applied air brakes, that escape from the track was precluded. With a thud, smothered by the human obstruction and supplanted to a degree by the screams of the dying and injured, the huge locomotive ploughed through the throng, throwing men, women and children to either side of the track. The very density of the crowd saved many lives, it is said, because the victims were buried on to human cushions.

The engineer brought his train to a stand as soon as possible and the police began to remove the victims. All the dead and injured are thought to live in Toledo. The death list includes four girls, one woman and two boys.

The Toledo excursion arrived Sunday morning over the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern railroad. The excursionists were met by a number of local Poles and Polish societies who escorted the visitors to St. Joseph's church. An entertainment was held later at Harmonia hall. About 8 o'clock the visitors began to gather at the corner of Canfield and Dequinder streets to take their train to Toledo. Both the Lake Shore and Grand Trunk tracks run out from the Brush street station on Dequinder street. Four policemen stood at the corner of Canfield and endeavored to keep the excursionists from crowding through the gates into the track. Despite their efforts hundreds crawled under or over the gates and walked down the dark tracks to await the arrival of their train, which could be seen coming slowly up from the station.

Patrolmen and numbers of others who were at the crossing assert that the flyer's whistle was not sounded and that the bell was not rung.

A cry for vengeance went up from the Poles as soon as they realized what slaughter the Grand Trunk train had done. A demonstration was started against the engineer of the flyer. Some one shouted: "Get the engineer; kill him," and a rush was made down the track for the cab of the engine. The police had forestalled them, however, and an officer guarded each door of the cab. The angry Poles stood about and uttered threats until the flyer resumed its trip into the station.

ANTI-POLICY CRUSADE.

Chicago, May 4.—The war, which the Negro preachers of Cuicago are waging on "policy," culminated in an attempt to dynamite the Institutional church, at 3825 Dearborn street, late Sunday night. A Negro mass meeting was called to arouse the sentiment against the evils which the game is said to work in the colored population had been held in the church, and the congregation had been dismissed but a few minutes when the dynamite was thrown. The few persons who remained in the building were not injured. The explosion broke all the windows of the church and blew a large hole in the south wall. The shock of the explosion was felt for several blocks. The attack was not entirely unexpected, for threats had been made against the pastor, R. C. Ransom, who is leading the "anti-policy" crusade in the Negro quarter.

LABOR PROBLEMS.

Bishop Spalding Delivered An Address on the Subject.

Peoria, Ill., May 2.—Bishop Spalding, a member of the anthracito coal strike commission, Friday night spoke on labor problems at the Coliseum. He said: "Laws are not made for the great corporations. We have means enough; we can do without capitalists who come among us and live on the blood of human beings. The cause of labor, if rightly understood, is the cause of humanity. What labor desires first of all is not charity, but justice. We Americans are using up too rapidly the resources of nature and we are using up too rapidly human lives. One of the greatest fallacies of the age is that money is equivalent to human lives.

"What we need in America is a realization of spiritual ideas, and the realization that the best things in life are not procured by money. Wages are never the equivalent for human work. There is a quality in all men which goes far beyond the question of wages.

"One of the great curses of the modern world is the vast conglomeration of people in huge cities. The ideal of civilization is a country of cities of from 20,000 to 50,000 inhabitants. It it were not for great cities we could do away with the evils brought upon us by corrupt politicians. There is nothing which can give us relief from these conditions with the exception of trade unionism. The history of trade unionism is largely the history of beneficence. The strike is the one weapon of organized labor, but it is as dangerous to labor as it is to the capitalist."

WHILE digging in his garden, a few days since a Lexington man found a silver half dollar dated 1814. Round the edge are thirteen stars. There is a premium of $25 on silver coins of that date, and the find may prove an inducement to other men to dig more in their gardens.

SINCE the "knock-down-and-drag-out" session of the Illinois legislature, a few days since, there is talk of constructing a commodious ring in the State house to be used on occasions when the solons desire resorting to muscular argument. It seems that the common run of lawmakers is not much above the ordinary prize day thugs.

A PROPHET is not without honor save in his own country, is the experience of editor W. J. Rouse, of the Monroe City (Mo.) Democrat. It was in 1891 that he suggested the Purchase Exposition at St. Louis, in 1903, and some of the more blustering editors captured his thunder, and Bro. Rouse is not receiving any credit for originating the idea of what is likely to prove the greatest exposition ever held on this continent. Give the devil his dues if he is a poor, county editor, only.

FOR the first time, next Saturday, the individual members of the Democratic party in Kentucky will have a voice in the selection of the candidates to compose the State ticket to be voted for at the November election. [illegible] there is an element in the party who have been trying to knock out the primary election in favor of a convention, while there is still yet another element in the party who have been opposed to conventions and who are now opposed to the primary election. These latter gentlemen ought to come to the front and say how the party nominees should be selected, and if their plan is more satisfactory than the one adopted there is no doubt but what it will be adopted; but then there are a few people in the world who can never be satisfied.

CANDIDATE

For Superintendent of Public Instruction.

MY DEAR FRIENDS:—I presume that you know I am a candidate for the nomination of Superintendent of Public Schools, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary, to be held May 9th, 1903. It certainly is not presumptuous in me to say that I feel that I am eminently qualified to discharge the duties of the office efficiently and successfully.

I have spent my life in the cause of education. After graduation I was [illegible] years in the Public School work at Browder's Institute in Logan county; have been a member of the County Board of Examiners for twenty-one years; was a member of the State Board of Examiners four years, during the term of the lamented Capt. Ed Porter Thompson; and have been teaching in Bethel College 23 years.

I have ever labored faithfully for the maintenance and improvement of our public school system. I have always, when it was possible to do so, attended the meetings of State and District Educational Associations, taking an active part in the proceedings of said associations. I am now and have always been in deep sympathy with all measures that have had for their objects the improvement of the system and advancement of the cause of public education. Knowing that the stability and perpetuity of good government depend upon a moral and enlightened citizenship, and that our public schools are the basis of such citizenship, my labors for forty years have been directed in this channel.

With such experience and the measure of success that has attended my work, I appeal to you for support in my efforts to secure the nomination for Superintendent of Public Instruction. I have always been a loyal Democrat, have never at any time "bolted" or "scratched" the party ticket, and am now too old to learn how. Your support is solicited, if you deem me worthy and qualified, and whatever you do for me will be received with profound gratitude. I thus address you because in the limited time before the primary, it will be impossible to see you personally. With kindest regards,

I am, yours truly, JAS. H. FUQUA.

L. H. Voshell, county executive committeeman of this county for the Tobacco Growers' Association, called at this office last Saturday morning as he was passing through town enroute to Bellevue to attend a precinct meeting of growers that afternoon. He attended the district meeting at Lexington on the 30th ult., and took part in the permanent organization of the Association. He says that the necessary amount of money to conduct the business is now in sight, and the Association is bound to be a go, and if the tabacco is handled at a profit of one cent on the pound the stock holders will realize a dividend of 26 per cent. By-laws were adopted and the articles of agreement so amended that stock can be sold to any bonefide farmer, and he will not be required to pay for the stock until he delivers his first crop of tobacco, and should he never deliver a crop he will never have to pay for the stock. Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky were represented at the meeting. Another meeting will be held in Lexington on the 28th inst., and Mr. Voshell wants all the stock books and subscription papers in the county delivered to him by the 20th inst., and he urges the precinct committeemen to secure all the stock and every subscriber possible in the mean time. Now is the time to get in the band wagon, he says.

In almost every neighborhood someone has died from an attack of colic or cholera morbus, often before medicine could be procured or a physician summoned. The Springtime of the Soul

SPIRITUAL TRUTHS ILLUSTRATED BY MOTHER NATURE

Chicago, Sunday, May 3, 1903

Text:—"But God, Who is rich in mercy, for His great love wherewith He loved us, even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ, (by grace ye are saved), and hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in Heavenly places in Christ Jesus; that in the ages to come He might show the exceeding riches of His grace in His kindness towards us through Christ Jesus."—Eph. 2:4-7.

WHEN the queen of Sheba had paid her memorable visit to the court of King Solomon, and had beheld all his wisdom, and the glory and magnificence of his palace, there was no more spirit in her. She was utterly speechless before the matchless wisdom, the lavish riches, the courtly ceremonies. It is with some such feeling as this that the soul views the sublime heights scaled by Paul in the words of our text and beholds the Heavenly visions which he unrolls. The poverty-stricken soul as it comes into the treasure-house of God's love and beholds the unfathomable riches which are in Christ Jesus, feels its own spirit and self-confidence and self-esteem evaporating, and stands in mute wonder. There are such heights and depths, and lengths and breadths to the thoughts expressed in our text, that we bow in reverent silence and feel the poverty of words as we attempt to frame sentences to tell all it means. God's unmeasured and immeasurable love and mercy and grace flash forth and penetrate with their beams of light to the depths of the horrible black pit of death where the soul of man is found. The power of God is felt as it reaches down, down down, until the soul responds to the quickening touch and is lifted up, up, up, and is seated in glory beside Jesus Christ in the Heavenly places. And this is not all! Through the ages to come the marvelous thing which the love, mercy and grace of God have accomplished is to be a witness for Him. Read the text over again. Let its fullness and meaning flood your soul. What a vision! The rich God, the powerful God, standing in His exalted place of holiness and righteousness, looking down upon the sin-cursed earth and discovering a dead soul. He lifts it tenderly, plants it in His mercy, waters it with His grace, warms it with His love until it feels His quickening power. Then He raises it up and bears it aloft that it may adorn the courts of the Heavenly city, there to reveal perpetually the "exceeding riches of His grace, in His kindness towards us."

THE springtime is the season when the quickening power of Nature is felt. The dead brown grass, the bare trees and bushes, the sleeping seeds, the hard black bulbs, all feel the throb of new life. The grass clothes herself in fresh green, the trees push out their bud and leaf, the seeds and bulbs reach up for the sunlight and the rain and unfold their leaf and flower. The death and barrenness of winter give place to the life and beauty of spring. Nature comes with thrilling touch and quickens grass and tree, seed and bulb, into new life and new beauty. The springtime of the soul is suggested by our text. There lies the dead soul in the winter of its sin. It is barren and alone. It is as insensible to the sunlight of God's love, the sweetness of His mercy and the riches of His grace as is the tree or seed in the wintertime insensible to the bright rays of the sun, or the friendliness of the melting snows. A dead soul within itself, but a deadness which the touch of God can change into the beauty and fragrance of life eternal.

There is a glad note in the air when springtime comes. The notes of the birds have a new thrill of exultation, as they busy themselves with nest making preparatory to the rearing of their birdlings. The gentle rain fills the air with its sweet music as its shining drops dance and skip down the yielding breezes. The sun as it bursts through the scurrying clouds floods the earth with glory; kisses Nature's tears away and wooes by the warmth of his kindly rays the earth back to life and beauty. We watch the swelling buds on the trees, and hear the faint rustle of their unfolding. We greet the tender green stalk of the flower as it pushes bravely and eagerly towards the sunlight and the blue sky. And how, we rejoice when thus the bleakness of winter gives place to the unfolding of the new life and hope of springtime. And it is a glad time, a blessed time, when the springtime breaks in upon the soul, shattering the fetters of its winter of sin, and awakening it to new life, new beauty, new possibilities, and a new and enduring hope.

THE angels of Heaven watching for the coming of spring in the human heart rejoice with joy unspeakable as they behold the life and power of God quickening the soul into new experiences and new hopes. The earth, with its myriads of human souls, is God's garden plot. It is barren and dead in spots, but, oh, how He longs to see the dead places quickened into life and beauty. Think of the garden which was insensible to the warm rays of the sun, which was willing to drink in the gentle and refreshing rain and still lay cold and black and barren, which received the mellowing and enriching touch of its master's hand, and which, notwithstanding all that was done for it, persisted in remaining dead and barren! How long would human impatience tend and care for it and wait for it to respond to the efforts expended upon it? But look at that sadder picture suggested by our text of the garden spot of the human life which receives the gladdening warmth of God's love, which drinks in all the goodness which He showers upon the life, which has day by day the tender thought and care of the Master Gardener, and yet that soul remains as dead and barren as the hard sands of the desert and as indifferent as the adamantine rock. Angels are watching the garden spot of God, and when the quickening in the human heart takes place and the tender stalk of the new life pushes upward toward the warmth of God's love and where it can be watered by the showers of mercy and dews of grace, then there is joy in Heaven. What a glad time is spring. Oh, how we delight to pass down the garden path and note here and there the returning green, the tiny green sprouts reaching upward through the dark soil, and the bursting bud on tree and bush. The evidences of the new life send a thrill through our being. We are glad with a joy almost unspeakable. And in the regions where angels hover and eagerly watch the teeming millions of earth, there is rich, pure joy which only Heaven can know in all its transcending fullness, when a dead soul responds to the quickening touch of God and rises to newness of life in Christ Jesus.

THE seed, hard and dry in my hand, is insensible to the possibilities of life. As it lies there I speak to it of life, of a richer, deeper, fuller experience, of fruitfulness. It views complacently its sleek and shiny dress, it feels the fullness of its own present state and it replies that it is quite content. Ah, I say, but you are dead now, you don't know what life is. With incredulous voice the seed asks how I know that there is life and a new and larger experience which it may enjoy. And I reply, because I have seen other seeds thrill with life, I have watched them push down into the nourishing soil and reach up with their tender green; I have seen the sun smile upon them, and heard the rain whisper his tearful message of love until the tender green shoot has become the strong and fruitful stalk, with its graceful leaf and beautiful flower. And as I draw the attractive picture of life, the little seed in my hand listens eagerly and then asks: "And how may I, too, know what this life is?" "Ah, by putting yourself in the hands of Mother Nature and letting her quicken you with her energy. As long as you lie by yourself you will only be a hard dry seed, but if you will let Nature exert her power upon you, the thrill of life will burst the narrow prison of your present dead condition and you enter upon a new and larger and better existence and experience."

LET the little parable of this tiny seed speak its lesson to you, oh soul! Unless God has quickened you into life through faith in Jesus Christ, you are dead—dead in trespasses and sins! I speak to you of life; not the life which is throbbing in your veins and giving you a sense of joy and satisfaction in the earthly experiences, but of that soul experience which comes from the presence of God there. You settle back in the ease and comfort of your present condition and say you are quite content. Ah! but what about the time when the present experiences shall have ended, and earth's light and joy and satisfaction shall have given place to the darkness and uncertainty of eternity? There is no life apart from God. Jesus said: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that heareth My word, and believeth Him that sent Me, hath Eternal Life, and cometh not into judgment, but hath passed out of death into life." How limited and mean are the possibilities and opportunities of a dead soul! That is what death means. Contraction, narrow boundaries, decay and mold. But LIFE! Oh, think of what it means in Nature to the seed, and then let God speak to your heart of what it means in infinitely more beautiful measure to the soul!

BUT you ask incredulously how I know that there is such a thing as soul life of which you are now unconscious and to which you are indifferent. First, because I have experienced it in my own soul; and, secondly, I have seen it experienced by others, and I read in God's Word how the Gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, and see the myriad witnesses rise from its sacred pages and testify to the life-giving power of Jesus Christ. The deadest (pardon the unusual superlative, but Paul gives us warrant for its use when he calls himself the chiefest of sinners), the deadest man the world has ever known was Paul, but God's power was equal to the desperate condition, and the instant Paul gave himself up to God in surrender on the road to Damascus, the quickening power of God struck him to the ground and he became a living soul, asking of Jesus, whose existence he had been denying: "Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?" And the barrenness of the seed gave place to the leaf and blossom of life, for the influence of Paul exerts its power over the lives of Christians to this day. God quickens us and raises us up into newness of life and gives us the privilege of sitting with Christ in the Heavenlies. This last is not an experience which the Christian can only realize after the earth life is ended. It is a present reality. The place of a quickened soul in thought, in hope, in desire, in fellowship is in the higher realm with Christ. But in this same epistle in which Paul so sublimely sets forth the privileges of the Christian he plainly declares the practical walk in the world of the Christian. In the world, but not of the world, because the life from God has raised the soul up to a seat beside its risen and ascended Lord. There is a good deal of nonsense talked about the Heavenly calling of Christians, as though it absolved them from living in the world. Paul did not so think. He did not so write. I want at some future day to speak of the Heavenly calling and the earthly walk, but I wish to emphasize that the quickened life, while it finds its fellowship and inspiration in the Heavenlies with Christ, finds its living practical expression in the daily life on earth. The seed as it bursts into life reaches up through the blue of the heavens after the warmth and light of the sun which shines so many millions of miles away; it drinks in the rain which falls from the clouds floating overhead, and the rain and the sunshine from above find expression upon the earth in the rare colorings of the flower and in the rich green of the foliage. And it is so with the Christian. He receives from above that he may unfold and blossom in beauty of character in the midst of men on earth.

BUT how may I, too, experience this life of which you are speaking? By yielding to God. You submit to Him and His power quickens you who were dead in sins into newness of life in Christ Jesus. Suppose the seed in my hand, resisting my efforts to place it in the soil where Nature could quicken it into life, should roll off upon the hard rock by the roadside. It would never know life. So it is with the soul of man. If it resist the effort of God to surround it with a sense of His love and mercy and grace, it will never know what life is, but yielding himself to Him the quickening of His power will be felt. Learn the lesson of the springtime. It is one of submission. The brown dead grass, the bare gaunt trees, have nothing within themselves whereby they can force life into the dead, shriveled blade and leafless branches. They must only submit to the forces of Nature, and soon the ground is carpeted in beautiful green and the leafy trees are waving in the gentle breezes and becoming temples of music for the happy, tuneful birds. Of the submissive soul, the soul that has yielded to God, it can be said: "And you hath He quickened who were dead in trespasses and sins." There is naught the soul can do to waken itself into life. But "by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God." God's quickening power which calls into life! God's drawing power which carries the soul up into the presence of its Saviour! God's gracious hospitality which gives the soul a seat beside the Son upon His throne! Marvelous! is it not?

BUT let us hastily look at the rest of our text. Oh, there is enough here for perpetual contemplation. We can but touch the borderland of its scope and meaning. The quickened soul the miracle of God's grace and power, "that in the ages to come He might show the exceeding riches of His grace, in His kindness towards us through Christ Jesus." The angels know of the purity and holiness and power of God, but did you ever stop to think that grace and mercy, sin and death are terms of which they have no understanding or knowledge, except as it has been revealed to them through the dead soul of man quickened by the touch of God and raised from the depths of sin to the exalted place with the Son above the position of the angels? It is simply marvelous. Oh, the love, the mercy, the grace of God which has done all this for dead and lost man! And throughout the ages to come the "exceeding riches of His grace" and kindness and love are to be revealed through those who have been quickened into life by His wonder-working power. We are to be God's exhibit to all the now unseen world throughout the endless years of eternity. His matchless love that could give His well-beloved Son to redeem the world from sin! His infinite wisdom and forethought that could lay the foundations for man's redemption before He laid the foundations of the world! His tender compassion! His far-reaching mercy that could descend to the lowest depths and lift man out of his sin! His inexhaustible grace which could strip man of his hideous rags and clothe him in garments of white like unto those worn by the risen, and ascended, and glorified, and crowned Lord! Oh, it is wonderful, blest be His name, that God has done all this for you and for me! Oh, the springtime of the soul which is the beginning of the realization of all this! Let Nature's voice speak to you, at this quickening time of the year, of the "God Who is rich in mercy, for His great love wherewith He loved us, Who, though we are dead in sins, will quicken us together with Christ, and raise us up together, and make us sit together in Heavenly places in Christ Jesus; that in the ages to come He may show the exceeding riches of His grace in His kindness towards us through Christ Jesus!"

HOUSEHOLD INFORMATION.

A Budget of Domestic Lore Which May Contain Something of Value.

If anything has to be neglected during the summer, don't let it be the garbage pail. Dust on the piano is bad. Specks on the mirror or windows are annoying. You can't always find time to make cake for tea nor pie for dessert. The sheets and towels may have to be folded and put under a weight to save ironing; the baby wear colored slips to economize in [illegible]. All these limitations may be grievous in a measure, but they are not of vital importance. The care of the garbage pail is.

Death and destruction sit on the rim of the neglected pail and bacteria and microbes [illegible] —multiply apace. Decaying fruit [illegible] as meat, only not quite so noticeable, says the Washington Star.

The best garbage can from a sanitary point of view is of galvanized iron, with a cover of the same. If you live in the city, where the health department minions play "One old cat" with your pail, tossing it with infinite abandon from sidewalk to cart and back again, it is the only kind that can "stand the racket" for any length of time.

If you are a suburbanite, or a dweller on broad acres, any whole receptacle, tin or even wood will do, provided it is frequently scalded, disinfected and dried out. One of the five-gallon kerosene cans makes a very good pail, with a piece of baling wire fastened in for a handle. Keep an old broom for cleaning out the pail. Take it out on the grass, turn the hose or teakettle on it and scrub.

Once a week a disinfectant is in order. A good one to keep on hand is prepared in this way: Dissolve a half pint of washing soda in six quarts of boiling water. A cupful of this added to the cleaning water will be quite sufficient.

Do not throw the contents of your pail, if it be trimmings and parings of vegetables, etc., on the garden to decay. If there are no animals on the place to eat them, either bury and thus enrich the soil or burn.

If the latter, dry out first, so as not to crack the stove. Orange and lemon peeling, peach, apricot and cherry pits make admirable kindling when dried. Bones burned and pounded are excellent for making hens lay or for giving an impetus to your rose bushes or grape vines. If you have no drain and are forced to throw your dish water out on the ground, a solution of copperas (a pound and a half to a gallon of water is good proportion) should be sprinkled around once or twice a week. Lastly, remember that upon you, Madame Chatelaine, rests much of the responsibility for the comfort and health of your household. There is occasionally a servant who may be depended upon to carry out your instructions without your personal attention, but such an one is a rara avis. The wise woman looketh well to the ways of her household, and even to the unromantic but essential garbage pail.

OLD-FASHIONED IRISH STEW.

Two and one-half pounds of neck of mutton, four potatoes, two onions, one small turnip, one carrot, two sprigs of parsley, pepper and salt. Cut the meat in small pieces, chop the onions, lay in a stewpan with one quart of cold water, and when brought to the boiling point set it where it will simmer for three hours. About an hour before dinner time add the vegetables, cut into small pieces, and add the seasoning. Make a few light dumplings with one cupful of sifted flour, one teaspoonful of baking powder and cold water enough to make a stiff dough. Roll out until half an inch thick; cut the dumplings very small; flavor them well, and then add them to the stew ten minutes before dinner, if the vegetables have cooked soft. An Irish stew to be good must be thoroughly and equally cooked, and should have plenty of gravy. After adding the dumplings do not lift the lid of the stewpan until they are done, which will be in about 15 minutes, if steadily simmering. Dish the meat, vegetables and dumplings on one large dish, the meat in the center, surrounded by the vegetables, and the dumplings on top. Chop the parsley, add it to the gravy and serve in a gravy boat.

Mist Pudding.

Steep the thin shavings of rind of half a lemon in one pint of water. Mix one cupful of sugar, one-half saltspoon of salt, and three rounded tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, and pour on them two cupfuls of the strained, boiling lemon-water. Cook in a double boiler ten minutes, stirring constantly. Add the juice of one lemon and then stir in quickly the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs. Mix well and turn into small cups or molds. Make a soft custard with the yolks of three eggs, a pint of milk, three tablespoonfuls of sugar, and a pinch of salt. Cook in double boiler till smooth. Strain, and when cool, flavor with vanilla. When ready to serve, turn out the little puddings on individual dishes with the sauce around each.—N. Y. Post.

Dream Cakes.

Cut rounds or fancy shapes of crustless bread. Spread first with thin layer of American cheese, then with mayonnaise; of, if preferred, it may be dusted with cayenne pepper, then put on bread cover and fry in butter, in chafing-dish.—Good Housekeeping.

SCANDALS IN PORTO RICO.

In addition to the gigantic scandal in the post office department, which is seriously crippling its usefulness, in which the public are so much interested, the era of loot appears to have become epidemic and has spread to our new possessions.

In Manila, smuggling by the quartermasters, who are in command of the transports, has been discovered, and in Porto Rico a number of officers of the army and navy and some of the highest civil employes have been convicted of the same offense. In the latter cases a serious scandal has been developed which involves the administration, for under the instructions of two members of the cabinet the convicted officers have been allowed to compromise the [illegible] them by paying fines. This extraordinary favoritism would probably have never come to public knowledge if some native Porto Ricans had not been convicted of similar crimes, and are now serving long sentences in the penitentiary. The injustice of placing one set of culprits behind the bars and allowing the others to go free because they have official influence and were officers of the United States, created a great sensation amongst the Porto Ricans. They had fondly imagined that the laws of the United States would be strictly enforced against all alike, and that the era of compounding felonies had passed away with the retirement of the Spaniards. The friends of the Porto Ricans who are undergoing confinement in the penitentiary for smuggling are now demanding that they be pardoned.

A statement issued by the treasury department says: It was directed by the president that Secretary Moody and Postmaster General Payne should investigate the entire subject upon their arrival at Porto Rico, and that the cases should be dealt with in accordance with their recommendation.

"The recommendation was that all criminal proceedings should be dismissed and discontinued upon the payment of the civil obligation, as above stated. In accordance with this recommendation, the attorney general directed the United States attorney for Porto Rico to dismiss the pending cases and to present no more cases to the grand jury until he was otherwise instructed. The cases involve certain officers of the army and navy, and certain civilian employes of the government of Porto Rico."

This attempt of the administration to squelch the scandal did not have the looked-for effect, for a dispatch from Porto Rico says:

"The grand jury to-day called many witnesses in the smuggling cases in which officers of the United States navy and other prominent men are involved, and secured from the court commissioner who presided at the former hearings, a copy of the testimony taken.

"The prisoners who are confined in the penitentiary for smuggling have presented a petition requesting that they be pardoned and released unless others guilty of the same offense are punished."

The Porto Ricans evidently believe that what is sauce for the native goose should be sauce for the United States gander, but they will find that official influence is a powerful lever to protect the influential criminal, and that those without such friends must bear the full brunt of the law.

That four influential members of the cabinet, at the instance of the president, should recommend such a perversion of the law is beyond comprehension, except that believing, as the imperialists seem to do, that the governing class have superior rights to those of the governed. The least the attorney general can do now, to show that favoritism is not the rule, is to order the release of the natives and that future cases shall be dealt with according to the strict letter of the law.

This republican favoritism is a breeder of anarchy and unless at once stamped out will lead to a deplorable diminution of respect for law and good government.

Time for Revision.

Secretary Root has some elevated notions about the revision of the tariff, but they can never be attained. The way to revise the tariff is to revise it; that is, go at it and have a party fight over it. The existence of parties is a necessary thing to our institutions, and while they are in existence they must be in almost constant opposition to each other. We hear a great deal about the tariff being revised, when it becomes actually necessary to change it, by its friends. The republican leaders call themselves its friends, in the sense that we have now a high protective tariff. That, though, will probably never be. The democrats will have to take another hand in the work. The time for revision has been ripe a long time. The excess in tariff is piling up an unnecessary surplus in the treasury. The republican leadership has been fiddling and dallying with the question, and will continue to do so till the people rise up in their might and make a change in the government at Washington. The tariff must be revised by the friends of good and honest government.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

URGE TARIFF REVISION.

The National Association of Manufacturers have been holding a convention, and amongst the resolutions reported for consideration was one "urging tariff revision on general lines." Last year at their convention at Detroit a similar resolution was adopted, but the republican congress paid no attention to such demands. Manufacturers have discovered that the tariff tax pinches them as well as the consumers, and by advancing the cost of living forces increased wages. They have also discovered that the tariff fosters trusts and that the trusts obliterate competition and advance prices, thus still more increasing the cost of living and wages. The manufacturers of farm machinery are paying enormous prices for their lumber and iron, both highly protected, and this comes out of the farmers in increased cost of farm machinery.

The boot and shoe manufacturers find that the duty on hides makes dear boots. The paper manufacturers complain that the duty on wood pulp increases the cost of paper, and the list might be continued to include all kinds of raw material. Most of these manufacturers have felt the pinch of the increased duties demanded by foreign countries on goods they sell for export; for all the European countries except England are trying in this way to keep out our goods as our protective tariff keeps out most of theirs. There is where the farmer is again interested, for most of these countries are increasing their duties on American agricultural products to protect their own agriculturists. If Europe should have good crops—which has not been the case for four years, and this country should be fortunate in having another favorable season—the price of some farm products will drop to those of ten years since, and our farmers will have a hard time to make both ends meet again.

When Europe has short crops they are compelled to buy of us, or of other countries who raise a surplus, but they purchase these necessities where they can buy them cheapest, tariff or no tariff.

In the end the farmers and the workingman pay the tariff tax, and the latter gets but a very small advantage by the increase of wages for his living expenses are advanced in proportion. The farmer who has to sell in competition with the whole world bears the greatest burden, for he also has to pay more for what he buys and has no protection on what he sells.

With the manufacturers demanding revision of the tariff to suit them, it should not be difficult for the people who pay the greater portion of the taxes it imposes from enlarging the revision to relieve them of the greater burden.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

——Most likely Americans could survive now with much less monopoly than the Morgans and the Hills bestow upon them.—Chicago Chronicle.

——Secretary Shaw takes an occasional turn at defending the high tariff, but still it does not improve in public estimation. It is, no doubt, understood that Mr. Shaw defends the tariff because he has to.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

——The existing high tariff could not for a moment continue to receive the approval of a majority of the voters but for the cunningly devised fable that it is in the interest of the laboring masses of the country. The inexorable logic of incontestable facts shows that this is not true. Whenever the masses of the voters that labor come to see this a lowering of tariff schedules will be inevitable.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

——Uncle Hanna declares that Mr. Roosevelt is undoubtedly the foundation of this great government, which is, of course, flattering to Mr. Roosevelt. It may be doubted, however, whether Messrs. Morgan, Hill and their downeast coadjutors entertain the same opinion, and those gentlemen cut quite a quantity of ice when Uncle Hanna makes the rounds with his historic skillet. The disagreement is most unfortunate.—Chicago Chronicle.

——Just as long as a great majority of the American people shall be willing to pay an enormous bonus to every industrial trust in the form of high prices, which are possible because of the Dingley tariff, so long will the Latin-American trade be absorbed by European manufacturers. Not only the American people, but the trusts themselves would be benefited in the long run by a modification of the tariff, by reciprocity and by the development of a steady foreign demand for our products.—Philadelphia Record.

MODERN CORN BREEDING.

It Is an Important Practical Science with Which Every Farmer Should Be Familiar.

That great results may be attained in plant breeding may be easily seen by comparing some of our house plants and cultivated flowers with the wild flowers from which they were developed. The same laws hold good in the breeding of corn that are recognized by the live stock breeder, of which the two most important are—"Like produces like under like conditions," and "Improvement is made by selection and culture."

In selecting the ear of corn the cob should be comparatively small, the stem small and the ear should taper as little as possible and still retain its cylindrical form. That is, the smaller end should not be large enough to be flat. It should be well filled out with kernels both at base and point of cob, see Figs. A and B. The grains should be long and thick, spreading out well at the outer end, so that there will not be deep fissures between the rows. A thick grain contains more nutriment in proportion to the hull than a thin, flat grain does.

CHART FOR CORN BREEDERS.

Corn, as every feeder knows, has a very wide nutritive ratio. This may be narrowed considerably by selecting grains with large germs, Fig. H and I. The protein lies in the germ. By germ I mean the part a mouse gnaws out of the grain. The endosperm, Fig. C, is principally starch.

Corn for seed should always be selected from the most fertile portions of the field, for there the plant has formed the habit of appropriating more plant food than has that grown on thin land. This may be demonstrated by planting seed from a rich river bottom by the side of the same kind of seed grown for a few years on a thin clay farm.—F. C. Murphey, in Ohio Farmer.

POINTS TO REMEMBER.

No class of grains will bear pasturing closer than rye.

Send the corn to market by way of the fat hog or steer.

It is not what is eaten, but what is digested that furnishes the strength and muscle.

Growing animals especially like a variety and do better thus than to be fed on one kind of grain.

Most farmers can raise young colts and develop them into mature and thoroughly broken horses.

If a hog is worth keeping at all it is worth keeping well; therefore it should be well fed and cared for.

The man who raises hogs for a profit should raise good hogs, so as to have the largest profit possible.

Don't get the idea into your head that anything is good enough for a hog. The hog is a good friend, and should be treated as such.—Prairie Farmer.

Alfalfa's Worst Enemy.

Alfalfa is not without its enemies, insects and weeds being the worst and dodder the most persistent. Dodder is a parasite incapable of producing its own food, and thus depends upon some other plant to elaborate its food supply. The alfalfa dodder or love-vine has seeds that from their small size can readily be distinguished from alfalfa seed and great care should be taken to purchase clean, pure clover and alfalfa seed. A few cents extra will pay for recleaned seed, but years of toil will not eliminate the tares from the field if they once gain a foothold. No one should sow alfalfa seed without first recleaning through a sieve of 20 meshes to the inch.

Beware the Floating Egg.

A new method of testing eggs for their freshness has been communicated to the Agricultural society of Saxony. An egg plunged in water tends to rise with more buoyancy, according to its age, owing to the enlargement of the empty space at the thick end by evaporation of water from the white. Hence the egg takes a different position in the water. Fresh eggs remain horizontal, an egg three to five days old makes an angle of 20 degrees with the horizon, one eight days gives an angle over 45 degrees, and at the end of 14 days the angle is 60 degrees. An egg three weeks old lies at 70 degrees. One three months remains vertical, and when it is older still it floats.

RAISE GOOD TURKEYS.

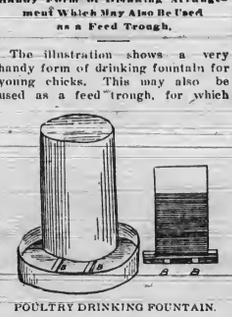
But few have any conception of the number of fowls consumed in a large city during Thanksgiving and Christmas weeks. For Thanksgiving week there were sold in New York city over 325,000 turkeys. In former years there has been sold a fourth more than this, and as many as 425,000 have been sold in one week, according to the New York Herald. This season turkeys have been scarce, not well finished and high in price. This is the explanation for the falling off in sales. Last year turkeys sold at from four to five cents per pound lower in price than this year. The same is true of chickens, ducks and geese, and even guinea fowls sell higher than ever before. All this should prove of advantage to the grower.



Corn has about gone by for low prices for poultry and eggs. All that is needed now is for us to have good quality in our poultry and eggs for market, and they will sell well. Now is the time to begin to plan for living better than ever before. Pull away from old-time methods of poor quality market poultry and work to have the very best. For example, turkeys sold in the New York market all the way from 11 cents per pound to 28 and 30 cents per pound. Now, it did not cost one more cent per pound to grow the higher priced ones than the cheaper ones. It is simply a question of care and feeding. Those who feed properly and well have the finer quality and the greater size or weight, while those who do not feed properly and well have the lesser weight and the lower price. Quality controls the market to a greater extent than is generally supposed.

It is all very well to allow the growing turkeys to hunt for bugs and grasshoppers so long as they are plentiful, but so soon as this kind of food dwindles we must supply its place with other food as good, for two reasons—to give them a full food supply and to prevent them from walking the flesh from their bodies going about in an aimless way in search of food they will not find. Just as soon as the cool or cold nights begin to lessen the supply of wild food of all kinds then we must feed the stronger. Always see to it that they have all the good, wholesome food they will eat at all times. That is the way to grow turkeys. If there are not plenty of bugs, worms, grasshoppers, berries and nuts for them, give them all the corn they will eat every night and also a good, strong feed of it in the morning.

FOUNTAIN FOR CHICKS.

it has no equal. In order to use it fill a small tin can with water or food, lay on it two pieces, B B, one-half-inch thick, and on these put a lid of a larger can. Invert the whole quickly and the lid will remain filled with water till the can is empty.—Richard Scheiderer, in Orange Judd Farmer.

Chicks Killed by Heat.

A great many chicks die from being kept too warm during the night in brooders. They get so warm they fairly steam, and when let out in the morning they get chilled, and this brings on bowel troubles. We are certain this is true from several experiences of our own and this agrees with what others say. On the other hand, a brooder can be kept too cool. We believe very few take into account the temperature of a chick's blood. A bunch of chicks can keep comfortable where a man would feel cold. When the chicks spread out on the floor of the brooder to sleep they are in a temperature that is just suited to them. If too cold they bunch up, and if too warm they are restless. —Commercial Poultry.

Hint for Angora Breeders.

One of the principal troubles to which Angora goats are subjected is sore feet. The remedy is simple. About once in three weeks dust their hoofs, one by one, with powdered blue vitriol, if the flock is small. For a large flock make a large, shallow trough and set it between two gates, where they must enter in reaching their shelter. Dissolve enough blue vitriol in sufficient amount of water to reach over their hoofs when stepping into the trough and there will be no trouble with sore feet.—Practical Fruit-Grower.

Overfeeding will likely produce diarrhoea, especially in warm weather. A few drops of camphorated spirits of opium in every pint of drinking water will usually effect a cure.

Less Noisy.

Dr. Patton was delivering a lecture recently in his course on ethics at the Princeton Theological seminary and experienced much annoyance because some of the students ate peanuts instead of attending to him. Finally he administered this rebuke: "Gentlemen, I have delayed starting the most important part of to-day's lecture hoping that the stock of peanuts would be consumed and a restful quiet be restored. As the quantity seems ample to meet the demands and the supply appears inexhaustible, I feel constrained to request that your appetites be restrained until the conclusion of the lecture. I would be greatly pleased if in the future anyone wishing to conduct a five o'clock tea in the classroom would confine the refreshments to sponge cake."—Indianapolis News.

For Your Vacation Trip.

The Yellowstone Park, the nation's playground, is larger than the State of Delaware and nearly twice as large as Rhode Island. As in size it exceeds all other national parks of the world combined, so in grandeur and scenery it is unequaled. Here are located the eight great geysers of the world. Mount Washburne, one of the peaks in the park, has an altitude of 10,388 feet. The whole park is an area of wonders unparalleled. It is from 1,000 to 5,000 feet above the level of the sea and is therefore within the zone of two seasons.

But to really know this wonderland you should take a trip through there. You cannot spend a vacation season more profitably or more pleasantly. The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway offers choice of routes to and from Yellowstone Park. If you are interested, complete information about the cost of the trip, choice of routes, train service and tickets will be furnished on request. F. A. Miller, General Passenger Agent, Chicago.

The Effect of Fast Time.

One result of the placing in service of the Twentieth Century Limited, the New York Central's twenty-hour train between New York and Chicago, is to bring not only Chicago but the entire West practically 200 miles nearer New York. For instance, a man can leave St. Paul or Minneapolis Monday evening and by taking the Twentieth Century Limited from Chicago be in New York Wednesday morning; thirty-six hours from home. Or if he is in Colorado he can leave Denver Saturday night, have several hours' layover in Chicago Monday morning, and, taking the Twentieth Century Limited, be in New York at 9:30 Tuesday morning. —From the Brooklyn Standard Union.

"PE-RU-NA SAVED MY LIFE,"

Writes Mrs. W. McRoberts.

Women Made Strong and Happy Mothers.

Pe-ru-na Eradicates Catarrh from the System.

"I Do All My Housework and Take Care of My Baby and I Feel So Good."

TO the woman of ancient Israel not to become a mother was regarded as the greatest of earthly calamities. To become a mother—more especially the mother of a strong, healthy boy—was the height of glory for the faithful woman of the good old Bible days. Even now, when maternity is not esteemed as of yore, the mother of healthy children is an object of admiration, and sometimes envy, by her neighbors. As compared with ancient peoples, the average American woman has a low appreciation of motherhood. There are, however, a great many exceptions to this statement.

The accompanying letters from grateful women who have been made strong, healthy and happy mothers need no added words of ours to make them convincing. Catarrh had weakened and impaired their entire systems. Peruna made them sound and well.

Mrs. L. M. Griffith, Arco, Idaho, writes:

"Your medicine did me a wonderful amount of good. It cured me of barrenness. I am 30 years old and never had any children; but since beginning your medicine I gave birth to a 10-pound baby girl. She is now six months old and weighs 25 pounds. My friends were all surprised. Some would not believe it until they came to see me.

"My husband says he never saw such a change in any one as there was in me after I had taken three or four bottles of Peruna. I am stronger than I have been since I was quite young. God bless you and your medicine forever. I can not tell you all. My letter is too long already; but I will say Peruna cured me. I never saw or heard of anything half so good. I can never thank you enough for your kindness. In cases of la grippe it works like a charm. It cured my baby when other medicines failed. She was real bad with la grippe."—Mrs. L. M. Griffith.

Mrs. E. E. Thomas, Alpha, Mo., writes:

"I have used your Peruna and Manalin. I had been doctoring for several years, but kept getting worse. One day a neighbor woman brought me your book, the "Ills of Life," and wanted me to take your medicine. I told her that I had given up all hope of ever getting well. I had tried so much medicine. My neighbors thought I was nearly dead with consumption.

"Finally I concluded that I would make a last trial. So my husband got me a bottle of Peruna and Manalin. I commenced taking them according to directions. That was two years ago. A year ago last November I gave birth to a 10-pound baby boy, who is well and hearty; and I am doing my own housework. I can never give Peruna too great praise. I think it is the best medicine I ever heard of."—Mrs. E. E. Thomas.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

A YOUNG MOTHER'S LETTER.

Delano, Miss.

Doctor S. B. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio:

Dear Sir:—"I feel perfectly well of catarrh. I did as you directed me to and took Peruna and Manalin. The third of March I gave birth to a 10-pound baby girl and we are both well and happy. I am very thankful to you, and Peruna saved my life. I recommend it to everyone and can't praise it enough.

"I send you my own and my baby's picture. She is so sweet and good,—she is a Peruna baby. I have such good health now. I do all my housework and take care of my baby, and feel so good.

"There are three or four of my neighbors using Peruna now, since it did me so much good. They were just run down, and they think it is fine. It is so good to give strength."—Mrs. W. McRoberts.

TAYLORSVILLE, MISS.—No man can tell the good of Doan's Kidney Pills until he tries them for a weak back. I tried everything and got no relief until I used Doan's Pills.—J. N. LEWIS.

WEST BRANCH, MICH., April 11th.—Many thanks for the sample of Doan's Kidney Pills. We had tried many remedies with little benefit but found Doan's act promptly, and lift the case, which was an unusual desire to urinate—had to get up five and six times of a night. I think Diabetes was well under way, the feet and ankles swelled. There was an intense pain in the back, the heat of which would feel like putting one's hand up to a lamp chimney. I have used the free trial and two full boxes of Doan's Pills with the satisfaction of feeling that I am cured. They are the remedy par excellence.—B. F. DALLAND.

GROWN IN KENTUCKY.

Thousands of Square Feet For Agricultural Products.

COLLECTION OF EXHIBITS BEGUN.

Everything That Springs From the Rich Soil of the Blue Grass State to Have a Place In the World's Fair Display—One Department For Freaks.

Kentucky will have 12,000 square feet of space in the Agricultural building at the Louisiana Purchase exposition next year. Five thousand square feet of this will be devoted to a collective exhibit of tobacco, 5,000 to general agricultural products and 2,000 to whisky.

Col. Ion B. Nall, State Commissioner of Agriculture, is chairman of the committee on exhibits of agriculture and horticulture for the Kentucky Exhibit association, and under his direction agricultural and horticultural products will be gathered for 5,000 square feet of space in the Agricultural and for 3,000 square feet of space in the Horticultural building. Col. Nall has just issued a general circular of instructions, known as No. 2, of the collection of the agricultural displays, to the subcommittees in the different counties of the state, the total membership of his committee and subcommittees numbering 449.

In introducing this second circular Col. Nall says: "The object of the exhibit is primarily to advertise Kentucky, her land, her opportunities and everything that will tend to attract attention of homeseekers and investors to her yet undeveloped resources.

COL. ION B. NALL,
Chairman Committee on Agriculture.

Her prospects in many respects are unequaled and, in a few, exclusively her own. While much of her land is in profitable production, there are many thousands of acres lying idle or only producing half what should be grown. These need only the touch of skillful cultivation to bring the maximum of crops. We need the help of the educated farmer, from whatever source he may come. We need capital to further develop the state and improve her lands. he World's Fair gives us the opportunity of obtaining this needed assistance by letting the world know what we can do. 'By their fruits shall ye know them.'"

Following this the chairman takes up different agricultural products and gives minute instructions to county committeemen on the collection of same. He asks for samples of grain as follows:

Corn—Entire stalk, 10 in number, with blades, ears and tassels complete; ears, 10 in number, shelled, one-third gallon in strong cotton bag. The varieties should all be shown, white, yellow, red, mixed, popcorn, Kaffir corn, etc.

Wheat—Sheaf, nine inches in diameter, bound with twine or wire; threshed, one-fourth bushel in cotton bag; should be shown in every variety grown in the state. The macaroni and Emmer wheat should be shown.

Oats—Sheaf, nine inches in diameter, bound with twine or wire; shelled, one-fourth bushel in cotton bag. Black, white, mixed, winter and every other variety.

Rye—Sheaf, nine inches in diameter, bound with twine or wire; threshed, one-fourth bushel, in cotton bags. White, black and any other variety known to be grown in the state.

G. W. Waddy of Waddy and J. B. Walker of Hopkinsville are chairmen of the subcommittees on grain for the eastern and western districts of the state respectively.

On grasses, Col. Nall says that all grain in the state, whether for meadow, pasture or forage, should be included. These samples, he states, should be about six or seven inches in diameter for the long grasses and less for the short ones, and should be carefully cured so as to retain bright color and sweetness. He wants the seeds of each variety of grass shown in samples of one gallon each. J. W. Smith of Glendale is at the head of the subcommittee collecting grasses. The Hon. J. J. Johnson of Louisville is to look especially to a display of grasses from the mountains.

While a special committee, of which Mr. Chas. D. Campbell is chairman, will have charge of the tobacco exhibit at the fair, Col. Nall has deemed it wise to include in the general agricultural display a section for tobacco, and has placed in charge of the collection of same H. M. Froman of Ghent, for the burley type, Samuel R. Ewing of Owensboro for the dark export type and Judge T. T. Gardner of Bardwell for "the purchase" types. These gentlemen will only undertake to get two or three good samples from each tobacco growing county for exhibition among other products of the state. Col. Nall says it is proposed in this space to also show the tobacco plant from the seed in quart jars to samples of 10 pounds, as it is sold on the market. He instructs that samples should be six to ten hands, of about ten leaves each. He also wants an exhibition in all their stages of growth of the destructive insect enemies of tobacco. The committee will erect, the chairman announces, a small section of tobacco barn and secure enough sticks of tobacco to show the curing process. It will also have seed stalks and seed capsules on display.

One of the most attractive exhibits in the agricultural department will be that of hemp, Major David Castleman of Pleasant Hill having consented to look after the collection of this display. This plant will be shown in all its stages, from seed to lint, and it is contemplated that an old-fashioned "brake" will be secured and an exhibition of breaking hemp will be given by the champion breaker of Kentucky. An old negro in Mercer county holds the 1902 record for hemp-breaking. It is possible that some hemp-breaker will lower the Mercer county record during 1903. The Exhibit association wants to send to the exposition the champion hemp-breaker, and will be glad to have reports from different hemp sections on any exceptionally large "breaks." The samples of hemp seed will be one-half bushel in cotton bags, and samples of the bundles about eight inches in diameter at the middle.

Mr. Clarence Sale, of Louisville, will be in charge of the display of garden products. He expects the greater part of his display to be made from the crop of 1904.

Quite a large space is to be devoted to silos and forage plants, Dr. P. W. Foote, of Irvington, having accepted the chairmanship of this committee. Colonel Nall says an effort will be made to secure a large glass tube in which to exhibit silage. Leguminous plants useful for forage and hay will be gathered under this department.

Mr. M. F. Johnson, the president of the Kentucky Horticultural society and chairman of the horticultural committee of the Exhibit association, will have 3,000 square feet of space in the Horticultural building in which to make a display of Kentucky fruits. He is laying plans for the biggest exhibit of this kind ever attempted by Kentucky. It is his purpose to keep a continuous exhibition of fruits in season during 1904. Not trusting, however, to uncertainties of seasons, Mr. Johnson will endeavor to secure some of the finest fruits this year and will keep same in glass or in cold storage for the Fair. The display of fresh fruits will be requested from all the counties and Colonel Nall says should be looked to locally from each county under instructions to be given later.

The floral display is to be made under the direction of Henry Nanz, of Louisville.

Space is also to be devoted in the agricultural display to novelties. Under this head will come any freak of nature in the way of the largest pumpkin, the twin ear of corn, the stalk with most ears on it and in fact anything savoring of the soil and yet unusual in its way. It will also include all the native wild products, such as nuts, grapes, paw-paws, black and red haws, and many other things that are about to be lost as the country is settled. Colonel Nall asks county committees to take special interest in this department, as it will show the range of production the soil is capable of.

"I dreaded the change of life which was fast approaching. I noticed Wine of Cardui, and decided to try a bottle. I experienced some relief the first month, so I kept on taking it for three months and now I menstruate with no pain and I shall take it off and on now until I have passed the climax."

Female weakness, disordered menses, falling of the womb and ovarian troubles do not wear off. They follow a woman to the change of life. Do not wait but take Wine of Cardui now and avoid the trouble. Wine of Cardui never fails to benefit a suffering woman of any age. Wine of Cardui relieved Mrs. Webb when she was in danger. When you come to the change of life Mrs. Webb's letter will mean more to you than it does now. But you may now avoid the suffering she endured. Druggists sell $1 bottles of Wine of Cardui.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXVIII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, MAY 13, 1903. NO. 30

County Correspondence.

COMMISSARY.

May 9.—W. B. Walton and wife went to Petersburg, Tuesday evening.

Miss Artie Ryle visited in East Bend and Bellevue the first of this week.

Miss Bessie Berkshire visited Miss Fannie Carpenter, of Gallatin, last week.

Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Rouse called on Mrs. John Decker, near Covington, Tuesday.

Mrs. B. A. Brady has been quite sick for several days with Lagrippe, and is no better at present.

Richard Louden and wife visited their son, Jessee and wife, and son-in-law, Elbert Kelly and wife, last Sunday.

Elmo Ryle and wife, of Gunpowder, and James Smith and wife of Bellevue were Sunday guests of Ransom Ryle and wife.

Mrs. Ben Cason called on Mrs. H. P. Parsons Thursday, the first time she has been out since her recent sickness with Lagrippe.

John Popham, of South Hogan, Indiana, an old and valued friend and neighbor, was a guest of William Snelling last Sunday.

Hubert Rouse and mother, and Karl Rouse and wife were guests, last Sunday, of the Misses Marquis near Florence. Judging from the praise given the dinner by the guests, it was a most excellent one.

Bro. Tolin, I don't think I can win the prize in the writing contest, if one is given, and I know I am not the only "tin can on the dump," for there is at least, Bro. Tolin of Petersburg, I can try as hard as anyone. What I have ever said that led you to believe that I thought I could win is beyond my comprehension.

Mrs. H. P. Parsons is having Tom Marshall build another kitchen to their house, and will use the present one as an office to her store. The one being built places a window between her room and the kitchen, so she can watch her old man and the hired girl which she is compelled to keep, as all her time is occupied with her numerous customers. She thinks the Beaver man kissed the hired girl in the kitchen, and as her old man spends most of his time in the kitchen when about the house, she thinks it best to keep an eye on him.

The sales of the week are as follows: Albert Kelly sold a cow and calf to Jesse Louden on Middle creek, price, $40. Ed Cloud a horse to Sheriff Allphin of Burlington,—price unknown—and a cow and calf to John Critchfer, of Sedamsville, Ohio, price, $35. Tom Goodridge sold a horse to Chritchfer, price, $25, and two heifers, price unknown. Will Goodridge, a horse, price unknown. R. A. Brady sold or traded to James Thompson, of Petersburg, two yearlings for a new $55 dollar buggy. W. I. Rouse sold a cow and calf to Willie Watford on Woolper, price $40.

Bro. Flicker, the flickered of Flickertown, the first of your three reasons given for thinking my proposed contest an unfair one, calls in question the intelligence of the readers of the Recorder. The second, their honesty and sincerity, and the third is without a shadow of foundation. Each contestant will have an equal chance to talk to the voters; not by begging for their votes, but by making public use of the best items. This is the kind of talk that will win. I have a better opinion of the intelligence of the readers of my neighborhood, than to think they don't know good from bad, and I have a better opinion of their honesty than to think they would vote for me because I am their neighborhood correspondent if they thought another's better than mine. Bro. Flicker, the general drift and tone of what you have said on the subject leads me to believe that you are afraid of the intelligence and honesty of the readers of the Recorder, and that they will vote as their intelligence and honesty dictates, instead of voting for their neighborhood correspondent regardless of merit. Who will be next to Flicker? Speak out Bro. correspondent.

WALTON.

Kirtley Roberts has given Walton the shake and moved to Covington.

Wm. Tillman, who has been at work for sometime at the Krell Piano Factory, in Newcastle, Ind., has been laid off. There was an explosion in the works which it may take sometime to repair. He reports Steve Ingram as well and hearty, and as busy as he can be.

F. E. Curley, sent in two snap shots, one of Mrs. Curley and Maris, their daughter at play, which is really very good. The other exhibits Miss Curley in a bad humor and is the truest copy of an angry child that can be imagined. They ought to have the photo enlarged and hung up so that she could realize how horrid she looks when she is in a bad humor. No one would recognize the usually bright and pretty Marie in the sullen angry picture. Read this to her and tell her that I want you to keep the picture in sight. Whenever she is taking on for a bad spell merely pointing to the photo will work wonders. Tell her that it almost makes me ill to look at her when in a bad humor.

Bro. Thomas, I have the kindest regards for my fellow men, but when other parties take the Recorder as a medium to put obstacles between you and me or any one else, then you must be on the lookout. A common saying is part of the people can be fooled part of the time but all of the people can't be fooled all of the time. As I am not a professed M. D., although I keep a little medicine layed upon the shelf for future use, I am willing to divide with any one that is in any way complaining.

Richwood, that little incident you related of an unruly stove pipe has inspired us to write an article entitled, "The necessity of having to set up stoves and to cut stove wood, as a cause of conjugal incompatibility, or why we are still a bachelor." His last illness was of short duration and all that willing hands could do or human skill could suggest, was done to alleviate his sufferings and restore him to health, but all in vain, and after a few weeks of patient endurance his gentle spirit plauned its flight for an entrance into the everlasting city, whose Maker is God. The remains were interred in the Hance cemetery. The sympathy of many friends is extended to the bereaved family, into whose loving home circle death has entered. A few years ago quartz mines that would not yield $50 to the ton were despised and rejected as unprofitable. Now, with improved methods of extracting, ore containing as low as $3 per ton pays fair dividends to the stockholders.

AN ATTORNEY KILLED.

J. B. Marcum Assassinated at the Jackson, Ky., Courthouse.

The Person Who Did the Shooting is Unknown, and Made His Escape During the Excitement That Followed the Tragedy.

Lexington, Ky., May 5.—Just after he had finished filing papers re-opening the contested election cases of ... county, Hon. James B. Marcum was shot and killed by an assassin. He fell in his tracks in the front entrance of the court house at Jackson and never spoke, death being almost instantaneous. He fell within a few yards of where Town Marshall James Cockrell was shot down in July, the assassin being stationed in the court house in each instance.

Marcum was counsel for the fusionists, who are contesting for the offices of county judge, sheriff and other places. As a result of his efforts and his sympathy with the Cockrell faction in a feud he had for a year been regarded as a marked man.

Various plots to assassinate him have been reported. The bitterness of the feud somewhat abated, however, and the election cases were allowed to sleep until Monday. Despite warnings Marcum felt safe in resuming his interrupted practice some time ago and felt secure in filing a motion to re-open the cases which had imperiled his life months before. At 8 o'clock Monday morning he went to the court house at Jackson and the papers were filed. He walked from the clerk's office to the front door of the court house and, facing the street, engaged in conversation with Ben Ewing, a friend. The corridor stretching out to his back was full of men. The men had been talking about three minutes when a shot rang out in the rear of the corridor. Marcum staggered and as he sank to the floor another shot was fired. The first bullet entered the back to the right of the spinal column and passing through the breast and body struck the door facing. The next passed through the top of his head and was aimed as he reeled. The shots appeared to come from a doorway or possibly from behind a door in the corridor, but as the passage was quickly cleared amid great confusion no one seemed able to state accurately where the shots came from.

A dispatch from County Judge Hargis, received at 8:30 o'clock Monday night, states that the assassin is still unknown, after a diligent search, and no arrests have been made.

Marcum's body lay for ten minutes untouched. Men feared to approach the body. It was finally picked up by friends and carried to a drug store opposite and from there taken home.

Some say that the assassin ran out of the rear door and it seems certain that he made his escape that way during the confusion. It is believed that he was recognized by some, but no one has thus far had the courage to name him, though this question is on every one's lips.

Marcum was a trustee of the Kentucky state college, United States commissioner of his district and represented the L. & E. railroad and other large corporations. He had practiced in Breathitt county for 17 years. He had avoided feuds and until he took charge of the election cases had been a friend of all factions. For three months, beginning last July, he did not leave his home and after that for months was always accompanied by his wife and women friends or carried one of his children for protection.

There was no disturbance during the funeral services Tuesday.

Frankfort, Ky., May 7.—Gov. Beckham Wednesday afternoon, on the request of the county judge of Breathitt county, offered $500 reward for the apprehension and conviction of the unknown assassin of J. B. Marcum. This is the highest reward permitted by law.

IMPORTANT DECISION.

A Court of Appeals Has Power to Issue Naturalization Papers.

St. Louis, May 5.—The question of the right of appellate courts to naturalize aliens was passed upon Monday for the first time by a federal court, when Judge Elmer F. Adams, of the United States district court, decided that the St. Louis court of appeals had the power to issue naturalization papers. Owing to former decisions of the supreme courts of several states to the contrary, notably of South Carolina and California, the point has been a mooted one.

A GIGANTIC STRIKE.

All Construction Work in Western Pennsylvania Stopped.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 9.—All of the union bricklayers in Western Pennsylvania, the members of the International Stone union, the members of the National Association of Brick and Tile Makers of America, their helpers and the clay miners and their helpers, all of which are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, quit work at noon Saturday. The entire trouble is on account of unionism. Fully 50,000 men will be idle until a settlement is effected and all construction work in ... Pennsylvania will be stopped. This was decided Friday night at a mass meeting of the bricklayers and the stone masons.

The contention dates back to June 1, 1901, when a dissension arose among the members of the International Stone union, resulting in a division. The faction leaving the International Stone union organized the National Stone Masons' union and since that time the two associations have been at loggerheads. The animosity has increased in intensity until the stone masons of the union would not work with the members of the other.

Omaha, Neb., May 9.—Strikers Friday acted as deputy sheriffs to protect non-union men. The Business Men's association promised Sheriff Power to furnish 100 trustworthy men for the service, but only a few appeared. Then the sheriff asked the labor union to furnish 25 men. They were picked out by the labor leaders and sworn in at the court house. Sheriff Power said that two or three of the strikers had shown an inclination not to give wagons proper protection and that their places had been promptly filled by others.

A plan for the settlement of the strike which now involves more than 3,000 teamsters, restaurant workers, freight package handlers and members of the building trades was reached late Friday afternoon in which Gov. Mickey will be a prominent figure.

Chicago, May 9.—The Laundry Owners' association Friday reversed Thursday's decision not to treat with striking employes and appointed a committee with full power to meet a like committee from the workers and to arrange for arbitration.

This action was in part brought about by dissension within the owners' association. Twenty-three members broke away from the association Friday and signed the wage scales of the laundry workers and laundry drivers unions. All the hand laundries in Evanston have announced that they will be open for business on Monday.

Chicago, May 9.—Stationary firemen Friday made a settlement of their wage demands with the packers at the stock yards. Oilers will receive 20 cents an hour, firemen 25 cents and water tenders 26½ cents. About 400 men in all the plants in the yards are covered by the agreement and all will receive material increases in wages. The engineers' strike is unchanged.

Lancaster, Pa., May 9.—Eighty boys and girls employed in the spinning room of the Columbia silk mill at Columbia, struck Friday for an advance of 33⅓ per cent. The management locked the strikers in the spinning room, but the boys got out by means of a fire escape. The girls then barricaded down doors and left the building.

FRENCH CONVOY ATTACKED.

The Baggage Train Was Captured and 30 Men Were Killed.

Algiers, May 9.—A French convoy has been attacked by tribesmen in the Feguig district. The baggage train was captured after fighting in which 30 men were killed.

The attacking force was composed of 600 horsemen and 900 men on foot of the Uladperis and Benagull tribes. On the night of May 7 they attacked the convoy near Taghit, 70 miles from Feguig. The French baggage train was composed of 500 camels loaded with provisions and clothing. The tribesmen carried off everything. Thirty men were killed and 18 were wounded. The tribesmen displayed great tenacity in their onslaught. They are camped in the middle of French territory at the confines of the Zousfana valley.

ON THE PACIFIC SLOPE

President Roosevelt Received a Hearty Welcome to California.

Was Greeted by School Children at Redlands—In His Address He Spoke of the Possibilities of the West.

Redlands, Cal., May 8.—President Roosevelt was officially welcomed to California Thursday by Gov. Pardee, ... Anderson, members of the state legislature, Mayor Fowler, of Redlands, members of the state militia and of the Grand Army of the Republic, uniformed cadets, organized societies and 10,000 citizens and school children. The military contingent met the presidential party at the railroad station and led a parade containing the president's carriage to Hotel Casaloma. At the hotel the governor and his friends formally welcomed the president.

President Roosevelt spoke to the ... about his trip and the possibilities of the west. On the corner opposite the balcony from which the president spoke 1,500 school children were seated on a grand stand. As the president approached each of the children waved a flag, cheered and sang national airs.

In his address here the president, among other things, said:

"The young must be impressed with the idea that whatever we have of soil, climate or conditions it must be the man who does the most toward making a state or a nation's progress and greatness, I congratulate you on your country, your oranges, your ... your ranches, your industry, your agricultural development, and, above all, on the quality of your citizenship.

"The sight of these children convinces me of the truth of the statement just made to me by Gov. Pardee when he said that in California there is no danger of race suicide. You have done well in raising oranges and I believe you have done better in raising children. Children. I have just one word for you, and it will apply to the older people as well. It is this: When you play, play hard, and when you work, don't play at all. That's common sense for all of you.

"What strikes me most of all on this trip is that good Americans are good Americans from one end of the land to the other."

Los Angeles, Cal., May 8.—Acting under instructions from the secret service bureau at Washington the police Thursday arrested a man who is suspected of being one of the four brothers of Czolgosz, the assassin of the late President McKinley. No charge has been lodged against Czolgosz, the police simply detaining the man on suspicion until after the president shall have left Los Angeles. It is said that Czolgosz has been living in Los Angeles for several months, working in a tamale factory. His actions have not been out of the ordinary.

Hotel Del Monte, Cal., May 11.—President Roosvelt Sunday spent one of the most restful Sundays he has encountered since his trip began. In one of the most beautiful spots in California, two miles from the nearest city, unhampered by curious crowds, he had a chance to thoroughly rest and prepare for the coming week, which promises to be one of the busiest of his journey. His train arrived here at midnight, but he did not leave it until about 9 o'clock Sunday morning. At that time Col. Ward and a detachment of the Fifteenth Infantry, who are stationed at Fort Monterey, arrived at his car. After the president had greeted the colonel and his staff he was driven to the hotel, where he and his party had breakfast. At the conclusion of the meal the president and a small party rode horseback over the famous 17-mile drive along the sea. Gov. Pardee and some others of the party drove over the route in carriages. The weather was perfect and the trip was greatly enjoyed.

San Francisco, May 11.—H. M. S. Grafton, the flagship of the British squadron of the Pacific, with Adm. Bickerford on board, arrived here Sunday evening from Requimmault to take part in the reception to President Roosevelt on Tuesday afternoon.

The appearance of the Grafton was the signal for the firing of a deafening salute in honor of the visiting admiral.

A feature of Tuesday's parade will be the part taken by the British sailors, who will march side by side on American soil with the sailors of the United States.

LOVES THE PRAIRIES.

Miss Anna Gray Is Delighted with Her Western Canada Home.

Anna C. Gray is a young lady, formerly of Michigan. She is now a resident of Western Canada, and the following published in the Brown City (Mich.) Banner are extracts from a friendship letter written about March 15 to one of her lady friends in that vicinity. In this letter is given some idea of the climate, social, educational and religious conditions of Alberta, the beautiful land of sunshine and happy homes. Over one hundred thousand Americans have made Western Canada their home within the past five years, and in this year upwards of 50,000 will take up homes there.

Miss Gray took her leave for Didsbury, Alberta, the home of her sister and other relatives and friends on Jan. 10 last, and after a two months' sojourn in her western prairie home, she writes of it as follows: "I know I shall grow to love the prairies. We have a beautiful view of the mountains, and it seems wonderful to me to see home after home for miles, ... looming thickly dotted all around us. With the exception of the last few days, which have been cold and stormy, we have had beautiful spring weather ever since I came. The days are beautiful. I call this the 'land of the sun,' as it seems to be always shining, the nights are cold and frosty. On arriving here, I was so greatly surprised in every way. Didsbury is quite a business little town. All the people I meet are so pleasant and hospitable. They have four churches in Didsbury—the Baptist, Presbyterian, Evangelical and Mennonnite. The Evangelicals have just completed a handsome church, very large and finely furnished, costing $2,500. They have a nice literary society here, meets every two weeks. They have fine musical talent here.

THE PINKHAM CURES

ATTRACTING GREAT ATTENTION AMONG THINKING WOMEN.

Mrs. Frances Stafford, of 243 E. 114th St., N.Y. City, adds her testimony to the hundreds of thousands on Mrs. Pinkham's files.

When Lydia E. Pinkham's Remedies were first introduced skeptics all over the country frowned upon their curative claims, but as year after year has rolled by and the little group of women who had been cured by the new discovery has since grown into a vast army of hundreds of thousands, doubts and skepticisms have been swept away as by a mighty flood, until to-day the great good that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and her other medicines are doing among the women of America is attracting the attention of many of our leading scientists, physicians and thinking people.

Merit alone could win such fame; wise, therefore, is the woman who for a cure relies upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

These circuit tour tickets are sold at very low rates. The trans-Pacific service has grown and improved very rapidly in recent years and tourists find the trip filled with scenes of picturesque interest not equalled in the old journeys made by tourists through England and on the continent.

The transcontinental train service and the trans-Pacific steamship service are of the highest possible character and the time required for making these journeys is much less than ever before.

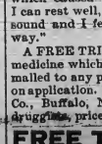
TIRED BACKS



Come to all who overtax the Kidney. Don't neglect the aching back. Many dangerous Kidney troubles follow in its wake.

Mrs. C. B. Pare, of Columbia Ave., Glasgow, Kentucky, wife of C. B. Pare, a prominent brick manufacturer of that city, says: "When Doan's Kidney Pills were first brought to my attention I was suffering from a complication of kidney troubles. Besides the bad back which usually results from kidney complaints, I had a great deal of trouble with the secretions, which were exceedingly variable, sometimes excessive and at other times scanty. The color was high, and passages were accompanied with a scalding sensation. Doan's Kidney Pills soon regulated the kidney secretions, making their color normal and banished the inflammation which caused the scalding sensation. I can rest well, my back is strong and sound and I feel much better in every way."

CURTIS JETT CAUGHT.

Is Charged With the Assassination of Attorney Marcum.

He Was Found at His Mother's Home, and Made No Show of Resistance —Landed in Jail at Winchester.

Lexington, Ky., May 11.—The capture of Curtis Jett, charged with the assassination of J. B. Marcum in Jackson Monday, was accomplished without bloodshed at 3 o'clock Sunday morning. He is now in the Clark county jail at Winchester. Bearing a warrant which had been sworn out by Sam Jett, uncle of the accused, Sheriff McChord and a posse of seven left Winchester at midnight Saturday. Reaching Jackson's Ferry, 10 miles distant, at 2:40 a. m., they put away their buggies and crossed the Kentucky river to Madison county above canoes.

They proceeded on foot to the home of Mrs. A. Haggin, Jett's mother, two miles from the ferry. Six of the posse were stationed about the dwelling, and Sheriff McChord and Deputy Stokeley approached the front door and rapped. Jett's mother answered, and after some parley admitted that Curtis was within. At length they were admitted and found Jett awake but still in bed. He shook hands with the sheriff and said that he would give no trouble. Reaching under his pillow, he drew out his pistol, which was nothing less than a baby rifle, and turned it over to his mother to keep. He made no show of resistance, and was landed in jail at Winchester at 6 a. m. Jett's stepfather charges that when Jett arrived at his house Saturday evening from Jackson he proceeded to draw his pistol and give him minutes in which to get out of the neighborhood. Haggin went to Richmond and swore out a warrant charging Jett with breach of the peace by assault with a pistol.

Seen in the jail Sunday, Jett was communicative on all matters save the killing of Marcum. "I'll get out of this all right," was the only statement he would make that could be construed as a reference to the charge. He said he wanted to be tried in Breathitt. He was bitter in denouncing his uncle who had him arrested, and said that the score would be evened up when he was at liberty. When asked in reference to the statement that five men would testify that he killed Marcum he simply sneered and replied; "What's that to you?" To Sheriff McChord he was equally non-communicative as to the Marcum tragedy.

Jett is 28 years of age, athletic in build, with deep-set, keen eyes, and has bushy red hair. That he submitted to arrest was an agreeable surprise to the officers, who feared an encounter. Jett denied that he drove his stepfather from home. He will be arraigned Tuesday, and it is supposed will be transferred to the Jackson district for trial.

SPOTTED FEVER.

Philadelphia, May 11.—Deadly cerebro spinal meningitis, popularly known as "spotted fever," and one of the hardest contagious diseases to combat, has broken out in the ranks of the 1,200 men aboard the receiving ships Minneapolis and Puritan, at League Island navy yard.

Already it has killed three young recruits, while five more victims are hovering between life and death. Grave fears prevail that others among the embryo blue jackets who ate, worked and slept with the stricken may fall into the fever's embrace.

This prospect has alarmed the officers at the yard to such an extent that an [illegible] will be made to prevent a spread of the disease, not only by constantly watching the men, but by removing them entirely from the two receiving ships.

Sunday the work of raising 35 tents will be started as soon as the canvas shelters are in place the 1,200 young tars will be put to camp, giving them plenty of fresh air and more room for exercise, which it is thought will materially lessen the chance for a further inculcation of the disease.

When the men leave the Minneapolis and Puritan both ships will be subjected to a thorough fumigation.

"I am doing everything in my power to prevent the development of any more cases of this fever," said Adm. Sigsbee, the commandant. "Nothing that will protect the lives of our men will be left undone."

At the hospital of the naval home, to which the sick from League island navy yard are treated, Dr. Lung, the surgeon in charge, declared that the results from the outbreak on the receiving ships are not so bad as is usually the case with the disease. "Three have died," he said, "and we still have five others suffering from the fever, but those, unless something untoward develops, we hope to pull through.

"The hospital is very much crowded with patients from League Island. Besides those who have the cerebro spinal meningitis we have many patients suffering with mumps, measles and other complaints."

It Is Feared Some of the Lumbermen Lost Their Lives.

Johnstown, Pa., May 10.—One of the fiercest and most damaging forest fires in the history of the Allegheny mountains has been raging since early Sunday morning about Dunle, the big coal and lumber town in this county. At 8:30 o'clock Sunday night much apprehension was felt for the safety of several camps of lumbermen working for Kuhns & Goodwin, who were in the great district which had been swept by the flames. Some of them may have perished. They would have to flee from the camps ahead of the fire, and as no tidings have been received from them, there is much alarm.

THE JAIL SURROUNDED.

Mob Violence For a Time Was Threatened at Fremont, O.

Otto Mischke Shot and Killed By One of Three Negroes in His Doorway —They Became Angered Over a Woman's Question.

Fremont, O., May 11.—Mob violence, which was narrowly averted in this city Saturday night as the result of the alleged killing of Otto Mischke by one of three Negroes, subsided at 4 o'clock Sunday morning. The three Negroes who are charged with the crime are now safely locked in the [illegible] jail. Walk and the excitement that was rampant for several hours Saturday night has about subsided.

From 1 o'clock until 4 o'clock Sunday morning the jail building was surrounded by the angry crowd calling upon Sheriff Mason to deliver the prisoners. For an hour or more the sheriff stood on the front steps of his residence and admonished the threatening crowd to be careful and quiet and not commit an act that would forever shame Fremont in the eyes of the world. Sheriff Mason said he had taken an oath to do his official duty and do it he would, and he said he would shoot the first man who made an attempt to break down the jail door and enter the building.

For fear of further trouble during the day and Sunday night Mayor Engler ordered every saloon in the city closed.

Sunday's story of the tragedy is to the effect that the Negroes who were in the street were offended at a question of Mrs. Albert Gommell as to who they were. Mrs. Gommell was on her way home with her husband and children. Mischke, the victim, was living at the Gommell house, which was in the vicinity of the affray, and when he came to the door to see what the loud talk was about, a bullet struck him in the stomach, inflicting a fatal wound.

TRAIN DERAILED.

Knoxville, Tenn., May 11.—Southern passenger train No. 12, which leaves Knoxville at 9:35 a. m. for Asheville, N. C., jumped the track about noon Sunday one mile west of White Pine, Tenn. The train consisted of engine, combination express and mail car, baggage car, two day coaches and two sleepers. All were derailed except the sleepers. Engineer Robert B. Hollo—[illegible] of Knoxville, was caught beneath his engine and crushed to death. Of the injured, all of whom were painfully hurt, Sylvia Smith is the worst injured; she may die. The train was running 30 miles an hour when the accident occurred. No cause can be assigned for it. The rails were torn up for 200 feet, and a delay of over six hours occurred to travel.

Mahoney, of the Knights of Columbus of this city, to be offered as a reward for the detection of the murderer of Agatha Reichlin, which occurred a week ago Thursday night. This sum will be added to the $1,000 already offered by the county. More money will be asked of the friends of the Reichlin family, both in Lorain and elsewhere, to make a larger fund and thereby it is hoped to induce experienced detectives to work upon the case. A detective from a Cleveland agency has arrived to take up the clues that are believed to be worth following.

THE CZAR'S COUP.

Reoccupies New Chwang With a Large Force of Troops.

Peking, May 9.—The Russians, it is announced, have reoccupied New Chwang with a large force and have also put garrisons in the forts at the mouth of the Liao river. They are further reported to be making extensive warlike preparations. The news of Russian activity, which comes from a most trustworthy source at New Chwang, adds that on their return to New Chwang the Russian troops brought with them several guns. A large force has been ordered to reoccupy Tien-Chwang-Tai. The Russians have 14,000 troops between the mouth of Liao river and Port Arthur. The Russians are reported to be construct[illegible] on one [illegible] commanding the road between there and the Yalu river, and they have arranged to have a large quantity of provisions delivered at New Chwang.

Russia's coup has caused profound surprise here, as recent developments had led to the expectation that Russia would compromise her demands, since they had been revealed to the powers. The latest maneuver is interpreted as being intended as a reply to China's refusal to grant Russia's demands, to the protests of the powers, and as a declaration that she is ready to fight in order to maintain possession of Manchuria. It is considered significant that the Russian army reoccupied certain strategical posts at just about the time naval reinforcements were reaching the gulf of Pechili. The temporary withdrawal of the Russian troops from New Chwang is believed to have been a feint to avert suspicion from the contemplated policy until the Russian squadron was within useful distance. It has been reported recently that Russia was accumulating great stores of provisions and war materials. It is impossible to confirm these reports, but it is known that the Russian military authorities have been buying many horses. All the available information indicates that Russia is preparing to increase and not decrease her forces in Manchuria.

Nowhere has a suggestion been heard that China will resort to arms in order to resist Russia.

It is stated here that Russian influence is being exerted to conciliate American opinion, and that apnesia are being made to the traditional friendship of the two nations, with the argument that Russian development of Manchuria will open a great field for American commerce, while the opposition of the United States to Russia's plans might provoke retaliation against American trade.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 9.—The attention of President Roosevelt was Friday called to a dispatch from Washington stating that Secretary Hay was in communication with him regarding the increase of the Russian garrison at New Chwang, Manchuria. It was further asserted that the secretary of state was only awaiting the president's approval of his course to take vigorous action even to the extent of a joint protest by Japan, England and the United States.

President Roosevelt said that he had received no communication from Secretary Hay regarding the affair. He had not been asked to approve of the course indicated and, in fact, had never heard of the matter before.

STATE NEWS HAPPENINGS.

WILL SEND TROOPS.

Jackson, Ky., May 9.—Circuit Judge Redwine left Friday for Salyersville, Magoffin county, where he is to open the May term of the circuit court Monday. He will continue all cases possible and hurry through the week, so as to return here the last week in May, when a special term of the circuit court will be called to take up the feud cases. [illegible] term of the Breathitt circuit court begins June 1. This will give him a full week for the feud cases.

Gov. Beckham has assured Judge Redwine that he will send him all the militia necessary, and it is probable that a battalion of the Second infantry and a battery of the First artillery will be sent. With ample military protection witnesses can be brought before the grand jury, and as the assassins of Marcum, Dr. Cox and Jas. Cockrell are all known to many, indictments are certain.

Meantime an unknown representative of Gov. Beckham is keeping that executive in touch with the situation, and should there be any outbreak he will find a way to act without waiting for a request from County Judge Hargis.

ITALIANS MURDERED.

A Request For An Investigation of the Matter Will Be Complied With.

Frankfort, Ky., May 9.—The state executive department has received from the Italian consul at Chicago a request for an investigation of the alleged murder of four Italian laborers at Regina, Pike county, this state.

The consul writes that affidavits have been filed with him that the laborers were under contract with C. D. Langhorn and that the contractor had guards stationed to prevent their escape from the camp. County Judge Ratliff, of Pike county, has been directed by the governor to look into the matter. The judge says the Italians camp in a thickly settled section of the county and he doubts the truth of the murder charge.

THREE LIVES WERE LOST.

Engineer Shecgog was missing for several hours, but his mangled corpse was taken from beneath the debris.

KENTUCKY LIFE INSURANCE.

The Thirty-Fourth Annual Report of the Commissioner.

Frankfort, Ky., May 7.—The 34th annual report of the Kentucky commissioner of insurance on life insurance written in the state was issued Wednesday. It shows that the companies operating in Kentucky had in for at the beginning of the year 46,955 policies, insuring $171,362,077.86. They issued during the year 176,403 policies, insuring $58,459,794.76. There ceased to be in force during the year 72,615 policies, in policies, insuring $29,936,519.46, leaving in force December 31, 1902, 250,773 policies, insuring $199,885,353.16.

The premiums received by the companies in Kentucky amounted to $5,962,297.04, and the losses and claims paid $2,312,688.48.

State Commissioner Chenault says: "Rebating by life insurance solicitors has reached such a state that stringent measures must be resorted to and a stop put to this manner of procuring business, as it is a detriment to the interests of all companies and causes dissatisfaction among the policy holders, some of whom, at the same age and same plan of insurance, pay twice as much as others for the first year's protection."

BOONE CO., RECORDER

Wednesday, - - May 13, 1903.

W. L. RIDDELL, - - - Publisher.

THE Republican convention of this district which was held at Paris, last week, nominated A. T. Siler of Whitley county, for Railroad Commissioner.

NEVER in the history of a State campaign for nominations for offices was there as much printed matter used as was shoved in the campaign which closed last Saturday. Each candidate had slathers of cards, and some of them several different styles. The several candidates evidently believed in a free use of printer's ink.

GOV. BECKHAM has shown his willingness to do all in his power to bring to punishment the assassin of J. B. Marcum, in Jackson, Breathitt county. He has offered a reward of $500 for the arrest of the guilty party, which is the highest amount the law will permit him to offer. If the local authorities will cooperate with Gov. Beckham the apprehension of Marcum's slayer will be a question of only a short time.

UP to now Britain retains from 20 to 25 per cent of the total trade of the universe. No other nation has yet come within half of this remarkable percentage. Nearest is Germany, with nearly 11 per cent; France claims about nine per cent; the United States secures rather more than 9 per cent. If we add the output of the colonies the British Empire shows a record of about one-third of the trade of the visible world.

A light vote was polled in the State, last Saturday. It will rebuire the official count to determine the following nominees: for clerk of the court of appeals, attorney general and superintendent public instruction. W. P. Thorn was nominated for lieutenant governor; S. W. Hager, for auditor; Henry Bosworth, for treasurer; Hubert Vreeland, for commissioner of agriculture and statistics. There is great dissatisfaction among the defeated canditates over the manner in which the election was conducted in Louisville, and there are threats of contesting the vote there, but it is likely to result only in talk.

THE impaired condition of the turnpikes of Boyle county has begun to alarm the people and the Fiscal Court. It has been a great annoyance to the members of the grand jury, to whose attention it has been called almost daily. The roads are said to be in a worse condition than they have been for years, and the country people say it is nearly impossible to travel over a greater part of them during bad weather. The grand jury, in its final report sent a very spicy message to the Fiscal Court, urging them to take up the matter at once. Scott and other counties are also having their troubles with their free pikes.

IT use to be considered very bad taste in a candidate to promise official positions under him in case of his success, in order to secure the friendship of influential persons in his canvass; but now nearly every candidate pledges everything in sight, and in some instances numerous persons are promised the same position. The objectionable feature of that business would be elliminated were the promises made public over the signature of the candidates making them. If that was done deception would not be practiced on so many men who are enlisted in behalf of candidates through the promise of "something good if I am nominated and elected."

A DISPATCH from Washington says Senator J. C. S. Blackburn, in an interview, is quoted as saying that the only way to stop assassinations in the mountains of Eastern Kentucky is to kill off all the inhabitants. If Senator Blackburn is correctly reported he is guilty of making another very bad break. A statement of that kind coming from one in the position occupied by the Senator is calculated to do Kentucky a vast amount of harm. While the mountain section of Kentucky contains a great many bad men in that same section are thousands of men who are not connected with the feudests, and deplore the condition of affairs that has called from Senator Blackburn the above declaration. It is hoped that the Senator will prove to the people of Kentucky that he is not guilty of the uncalled for declaration ascribed to him in the Washington dispatch.

In many sections where farmers have succeeded in growing crimson clover, the crop rotation is clover, potatoes and corn. This has been found to give excellent results provided the clover is turned under at just the proper time, and this time is when the clover is in the condition where the greatest amount of nitrogen can be put into the soil. Experiments have proved that, regardless of calendar dates, this condition of the clover is very soon after it begins to bloom, for at that time the nitrogen the plant has gathered from the air is in the plant, and hence can be put into the soil by plowing under. It is true that the growth of clover may be quite heavy at that time, and hard to plow under, but this is certainly offset by the added amount of nitrogen gained. It is not meant to infer that this rotation of crops will do away with the necessity for the use of fertilizers, although if previous fertilizing has supplied phosphoric acid in sufficient quantities and cultivation has released the potash, so that only nitrogen is needed, the use of crimson clover will after all, render unnecessary the fertilizer. However, this is a condition of affairs that can only be ascertained by demonstration.

The Post-office Department is preparing a book to be issued to persons doing business with the post office throughout the country. It is to be a sort of manual, calling their attention to matters which are not generally understood about the post-office business. One of the subjects treated will be torn stamps, on which, the post-office officials say, the ignorance of the public is almost universal. A torn stamp cannot be used, under the rules of the department, and yet thousands of people are in the habit, when a stamp has been accidently torn, of pasting it together and putting it on an envelope. Envelopes so stamped are not permitted to be delivered, under the postal regulations. Sometimes the torn stamp is pasted together so well that the tear is not detected, and the letter is delivered. But where the tear in the stamp is discovered, the sender runs the risk of losing his letter.

A curious case involving a leper soldier from the Philippines is before the War Department, having been referred to the Judge Advocate General to determine in what manner the afflicted soldier shall receipt for his pay. The leper is an enlisted man in the artillery, and at present is isolated in South Carolina. Pay officers do not care to have him handle the rolls to sign the receipts for his pay, so an arrangement probably will be made whereby the soldier can be paid through a power of an attorney. But then the money he receives and handles will go into circulation, and leprosy may be spread broad cast. Better keep his money for him, or have somebody to handle it for him.

A man doesn't necessarily believe he means the extravagant terms of endearment he uses to a woman, but he knows they are necessary.

The remodeling of the Bellevue Baptist church building will be pushed as rapidly as possible in order to have everything in readiness for celebrating together, this fall, the centennial of that church organization and the centennial of the North Bend Association of Baptists. Bellevue church was, originally, Middle Creek, and the building was erected in Bellevue several years ago, a storm having destroyed the building that was located about half way up the hill near Garnett's mill, and which was the second building occupied as a house of worship by that congregation, the first being a frame, and stood in the yard where the second one was blown down.

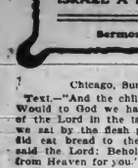
HANKERING AFTER THE FLESH POTS OF EGYPT

ISRAEL A FIGURE OF THE UNSANCTIFIED BELIEVER.



Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

Chicago, Sunday, May 10, 1903.

Text.—"And the children of Israel said: Would to God we had died by the hand of the Lord in the land of Egypt, when we sat by the flesh pots, and when we did eat bread to the full! . . . Then said the Lord: Behold, I will rain bread from Heaven for you."—Exodus 16:3-4.

"Now these things were our examples, to the intent that we should not lust after evil things, as they also lusted."—1. Cor. 10:6.

THE record of the children of Israel lives to this day, that it may teach us of the waywardness, stubbornness and blindness of the human heart, and the faithfulness, the patience and the generous care of God for His children in all ages. Israel is a mirror which God holds up for us to look into. It is a mirror which has the penetrating power of the X ray, and reveals in the human heart and life that which lies beneath the surface, and it is a mirror, also, whose polished surface catches the light of Heaven and reveals God in all His fullness. Let us look into this mirror that we may drink in the picture which God paints of the redemption of His people from bondage, of His leading of His deliverances, of His care for them, and of His wonderful patience with them in their waywardness and rebellion. And as we sit before the picture may we learn its lessons, for "these things were our examples (or, as the margin of the revised version puts it, 'in these things they become figures of us'), to the intent that we should not lust after evil things, as they also lusted.'"

On the night on which death (the full fruitage of sin) reigned in Egypt, and when the children of Israel had been delivered from that death by the blood of the lamb sprinkled upon the lintel and side posts of the door, God by the hand of Moses led them out of the land of bondage towards the promised land. The unregenerate sinner dwells in the land of bondage to sin. The death angel hovers over that land, for "the wages of sin is death." The soul that abides there is lost. But should he heed the warnings of God and flee to the refuge upon which has been sprinkled the blood of the Lamb of God, he is safe, and then will begin his march towards the promised land. Satan's forces will hotly pursue and try to draw back his slaves to the old land of sin, but God's hand will deliver. Difficulties will be met with in the journey. There will be weary marches, and little to eat and bitter waters to drink sometimes, but all of these experiences will be given only to stir the soul up to eagerness to gain the promised land of the fullest blessings in Christ Jesus.

SOME Bible exegetes, in interpreting the history of Israel's bondage, deliverance, wilderness journey and possession of the promised land as figures illustrating the spiritual life, have held the wilderness journey as a type of the Christian walk in this life, the crossing of the Jordan as a type of death, and the possession of the promised land as setting forth the soul's eternal dwelling place in Heaven; but there are so many difficulties in the way of such interpretation, and it fails to harmonize in so many essential details with the teaching of Scripture regarding the Christian life and of Heaven, that we are inclined to accept the interpretation of other commentators, who believe that the wilderness journey is a type of the redeemed but unsanctified believer in Christ Jesus, and that the crossing of the Jordan typifies full surrender to God, and the possession of the promised land illustrates the sanctified and victorious life of the saint.

Some of the difficulties which present themselves against the reasonableness of the first-named interpretation are that the crossing of the Jordan marked the beginning of real conflict with evil and the enemies of God, while death marks the passage of the soul from the scene of conflict with evil and the enemies of God in this world to the bliss and peace and joy of Heaven. The promised land was filled with the enemies of righteousness. Heaven cannot be such a place. The promised land was the scene of desperate fighting, but no such conflicts await the saint in Heaven, while on the other hand in this life the sanctified saint is the one who has the most desperate fighting to do against the enemies of God. Satan is not troubling very much with the saints who are wandering around in the wilderness, but when they cross over into the promised land of the consecrated and sanctified life in Christ Jesus then he begins his bitter and relentless warfare. The promised land witnessed the wandering from God of His children, their rising idolatrous worship, their punishment by famine and pestilence, and even their captivity, but none of these things can be true of the Heavenly experience.

Paul in the seventh of Romans draws a fine picture of the saint who is struggling through the wilderness experience, and when at last in utter despair he cries: "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" he suddenly lifts his eyes and the vision of the promised land of the higher Christian life bursts upon his soul and he triumphantly cries: "I thank God, through Jesus Christ our Lord." And then in the eighth chapter he gloriously unfolds the life of the saint who has entered the promised land of full blessing in Christ Jesus. He scales height after height until . . . all the possibilities of that promised land lie spread out in their rich beauty and wide extent before him and he shouts: "We are more than conquerors, through Him that loved us, for I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

BUT to return to the children of Israel and the circumstances and events surrounding our text. Wonderful have been their experiences during the month which has elapsed since they escaped from slavery in Egypt. The wind has plowed a pathway through the midst of the sea, the waters with a mighty roar of judgment have swallowed up their relentless enemies, the wilderness tree has yielded its boughs to sweeten the bitter waters of Marah, the camp has been made at Elim under the sheltering grove of palm trees and beside the gurgling, cool wells of water, and there the weary people have rested. How God always brings the soul to the oases of Elim after the trying wilderness journeyings and the bitterness of the pools of Marah have been passed! But finally the cloudy pillar lifts and moves on and the children of Israel reluctantly strike camp and follow. On into the wilderness of Sin they go towards Sinai. The way is rough and hard, and the food they have brought with them is growing scarce. They are face to face with—they thought starvation and death, but instead they were face to face with God's fullness and bounty. The barren sandy wastes of the desert were to spread the table and Heaven was to rain her bread upon it from which the hungry children could eat their fill and want nothing, neither have anything over. But notwithstanding that the cloud was still hovering over and leading them, assuring them of God's presence, forgetting how the mighty hand of God had stricken Egypt, had divided the sea, had sweetened the pools at Marah, had guided them to the refreshing gardens of Elim, they take the last handfuls of corn from their bags, and while the taste of the cakes made therefrom is still fresh and sweet in their mouths they fall to worrying about the morrow and lusting after the flesh pots in the land of slavery which but so short a time before they had left behind. And the cry which goes up from that camp and beats in rebellious discord against the sheltering, guiding cloud of God's presence is: "Would to God we had died by the hand of the Lord in the land of Egypt, when we sat by the flesh pots, and when we did eat bread to the full!" And Paul, by whom was revealed unto us the exceeding riches which are in Christ Jesus, has declared that "in these things they became figures of us, to the intent that we should not lust after evil things, as they also lusted."

THE redeemed but unsanctified believer stands before us. The blood of the Lamb, Christ Jesus, has been sprinkled upon the lintel and door posts of his heart and he has gone out of the land where darkness and death reign. He has had some blessed experiences. Oh, the sweetness and joy of those first days of the new life, Jesus' presence has been felt. He has led unerringly. He has delivered mightily when the Devil has pressed hard. The bitter pools have been made sweet, and the soul has rested in the shade of the date palms of Elim and drank of her refreshing waters, but the Lord leads the soul out into the wilderness again, and there in the place of discipline the soul falls to lusting after the flesh pots of Egypt. The faith which has delivered, and the hope which has led out towards the promised land of a better life, have been obscured and forgotten as the strong impulses for the old life, its pleasures, its associates, its unrestricted activities gain the upper hand. The most unhappy person on earth is the wilderness Christian.

HOW could the children of Israel murmur so? we ask. We wonder with exceeding and impatient amazement that they could think that death amidst the flesh pots of Egypt was better than the feeding of the Lord in the wilderness. And while we marvel we forget that Israel is but a figure of us and plainly illustrates the spiritual condition which prevails in our lives so often. Hankering after the flesh pots of Egypt prevails to the present day. God's children don't get very far into the wilderness experiences of the Christian life sometimes before they begin to long for the indulgences of the old life. They forget that their hunger can be satisfied by the Lord Who is leading them, that the manna of God's bounty is so much better than the leeks and onions of Egypt as is life better than death and Heaven better than earth. Esau was willing to sell his birthright for a mess of pottage, and the Christian sometimes is almost ready to give his soul's hope for the indulgence and pleasure which the world has to offer. Lot's wife, hankering after the luxuries and pleasures of doomed Sodom, looked back, and with the longing look came lagging footsteps until the brimstone and alkali which were raining upon the city fell also upon her and encrusted her, and she was lost.

JESUS said: "No man having put his hand to the plow, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of Heaven." The children of Israel were not fit for the Promised land while their desires were back in Egypt, and the longing for the flesh pots there had to be all disciplined out of them before they could cross the Jordan and gain possession of the land flowing with milk and honey. And so with the Christian. He is unfit for the kingdom of Heaven while he is murmuring at God's providences, doubting His thought and care and turning back in longing desire for the old life and the old indulgences. The flesh pots of Egypt stand for the world and the things of the world. The Christian is no longer to be fed from them. They were all well enough while he was in bondage to sin, and serving the Devil. But now that he has passed from the darkness and death of Egypt into the wilderness journey of the new life with God, God is to feed him. Egypt's flesh pots in the wilderness are dishonoring to God and destructive of self. You cannot successfully bring the pleasures and desires of the world into the Christian life. One or the other must be given up. Jesus said: "Ye cannot serve two masters." And John plainly: "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. . . . For the world passeth away and the lust thereof, but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever."

WHY was it that the children of Israel fell into this sad condition, this yearning for the flesh pots of Egypt? If we had gone into that camp and passed from family group to family group and talked with the murmuring people we would have discovered at least two reasons for their discontent. First they had forgotten the glorious land for which they had set out, and second, they had taken their eyes off the cloudy pillar of God's presence and were looking into their meal bags. And the Christian to-day falls into an error similar to that of the children of Israel when he forgets the high calling of God in Christ Jesus for which he has set out and which is realized in the promised land of full surrender to God, and when he takes his eyes off of the Lord and begins to look into the meal bag of his own paltry mean possessions and then lusts after the things of the old life. Human nature is ever the same. Israel is a figure of us. The dreary wastes of the wilderness made them utterly forget the promised land of fullness towards which they were journeying, and the backward look put out of the vision of the glowing cloud. And with us the temporary desolation and weariness of the wilderness journey, the cross we have to bear, the trial we have to endure, the failure we experience and the disappointment and discouragement we have to face, all drive from mind and heart the good land toward which the soul is journeying, and then, instead of looking upward towards the hills from whence cometh our help, we look within ourselves for comfort and satisfaction, we turn our gaze backward toward the old life with its indulgences, and is it any wonder that like the children of Israel we fall to lusting after the flesh pots of Egypt and murmuring against God?

BUT God's voice sounded out over that rebellious camp. Oh, what a God we have! Instead of abandoning those ungrateful people! Instead of chiding and punishing them, He says: "Behold, I will rain bread from Heaven for you." And that is what God says to your soul and mine. Bread from Heaven! Feeding from the hand of God! Daily supply; enough for the day's needs; the gathering of the manna the first business of the day Egypt's flesh pots could no longer nourish Israel. The world can no longer feed and satisfy your soul's hunger. God must feed you. It will be a daily supply, it will be only enough for the day, and the gathering must be done before the heat of the activities of the day have melted the manna and robbed you of your portion. Oh, how sweet and blessed it is to hear God say to the soul: "I will rain bread from Heaven for you." Listen! oh, soul. Is the murmur of discontent upon your lips? Are you hankering after the flesh pots of Egypt? Listen! God is speaking in the present through the experiences of the past in His dealings with Israel and saying to you that He will feed you abundantly. The needy Samaritan woman at Jacob's well was promised Living Water that would satisfy forever. The multitudes that had eaten of the loaves and fishes were pointed to the Bread of Life which could satisfy the soul's hungerings, and the Living Water and the Living Bread from Heaven are for you and for me. Let us strive the backward glance of the old life and the old indulgences by keeping our eyes on the well of Living Water! Let us forget the flesh pots of the old life in the abundant and full partaking of the Bread of Life which God gives! Then instead of murmuring we shall find the song of praise and rejoicing rising to our lips, and instead of the backward glance toward the country of sin out of which we have been delivered by the mercy and grace of God we shall be looking forward as the Lord leads out of the wilderness into the fullness of blessing of the promised land.

CONSERVATIVE REPUBLICANS.

Do-Nothing Policy When It Comes to Abolishing the Tariff on Trust Productions.

The Chicago Journal recommends that the trusts be let alone until the supreme court decides just where we are at, and other stalwart republican organs are following in the same path. The argument used is that it will disturb business. "A wholesale attack upon them would be so disastrous to business prosperity," says the Journal, "that it is not to be contemplated for a moment, and we can depend upon the conservatism of the administration to prevent the adoption of any such policy." As President Roosevelt said that "caution" was necessary in dealing with this issue, and declared that the tariff must not be touched, it is fair to assume that there will be no more trust-busting for a season. The political exigencies of the republican party demand "conservatism" and that means no relief from trust exactions, but to stand pat until after election. How the public, who are paying trust prices, will like this do-nothing policy is the question. Unlike the republican politicians they have no interest in checks from the corporations to fatten the campaign fund. It is their own bank account they are interested in and which they know the trusts are depleting so they will vote for the party that will help them to keep their savings.

It is results that tell, in curbing the trusts as in other legislation, and every one knows that no relief has so far resulted from the so-called anti-trust legislation. The beef combine is still charging what it pleases for meat and the railroads included in the merger suit continue to charge "all the traffic will bear." Not one of the hundreds of trusts have reduced the prices of their commodities in consequence of the legislation of the last congress and no railroad has reduced its charges because the attorney general instituted a suit against one of the combinations into which they have all entered.

Can anyone point to any other effort that has been made to curb a single trust or take from them the monopoly that gives the bad ones their power? The trust or combine that has no monopoly or special privilege back of it is not to be feared, it is the hundred and one that are so protected that are the bad trusts that need controlling.

To be "conservative," which is to do nothing, about curbing these bad trusts, is deserting the people by those who have been intrusted with the power to act. If the coming congress would abolish the tariff that protects them, or even reduce it, the prices of trust products, that are protected, would fall accordingly. Such a reduction of the profits of the trusts would be a decided advantage to the people and should therefore help instead of being "disastrous to business."

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

—The suppression of Gen. Miles' report of the conditions in the Philippines would indicate that there was something in it that hurt Secretary Root and the administration.

—Mr. Hanna does not even try to tell us how it is that we are building so many ships while that subsidy bill is still slumbering in a pigeonhole at Washington.—Newark News.

—Attorney General Knox thinks the decision in the merger case is a "cinch," and ex-Attorney General Briggs does not see how it can possibly stand. Lawyers, like doctors, will differ.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

—Senator Martin, of Virginia, says that the only hope of tariff revision lies in the democratic party. That is not true yet, but the "standpatters" are doing their best to make it true.—Providence Journal (Rep.).

—Candidates for the republican nomination for president who count high on the negro delegates from southern states may get so excited that they will forget about a lot of delegates from the north.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

THE TRUST ISSUE STOLEN.

In the same breath with his intimation that he means to make a very polite and lady-like use of the weapon against trusts which congress gave him, Mr. Roosevelt announces that he will not touch the really deadly weapon of tariff revision. As far as he is concerned, the tariff-protected trusts may continue to hide behind the Dingley law, and utilize its aid in preying upon the consumer, says the New York Post. The president is not willing to go even as far as Secretary Root, and admit the possible need of legislation to prevent the tariff from being abused by trusts, and to compel them to sell their goods at home as cheaply as abroad—or, at any rate, at a "fair" price. Mr. Roosevelt pushes all this away, with schoolboy cock-sureness, as a plan for "putting an end to the prosperity of the country." Congressman Babcock is nearer right. He declared that the next congress is "pledged to a revision of the tariff," and that, but for such a pledge, the republicans would have lost their majority. Now Babcock personally does not count. He ran away like a frightened hare last winter, when courage and backbone on his part would have forced tariff revision to the front, and will doubtless do so again. But he clearly states the situation. His forecast of an immense lift to the democratic party by means of the tariff issue, if the republicans show that they are unwilling or unable to correct the flagrant injustice of the existing law, is only what thousands of republicans are echoing. President Roosevelt's friends say that he has shrewdly stolen the trust issue from the democrats. But if he hands them over the tariff issue, he will be profited nothing; and all that he says about trusts will be only as much water for the democratic mill.

IS UNCLE SAM WORKING FOR THE PUBLIC OR FOR THE TRUSTS?

THE PROTECTED ONES.

Mr. Edward Atkinson has been figuring on the tariff question, and has given the result in the Quarterly Journal of Economics. His conclusions are interesting, and he gives tariff data to justify them.

In 1901 there were 29,074,117 persons engaged in gainful pursuits in the United States. Of these, according to Mr. Atkinson, there are 26,077,822 who are not subject to foreign competition and not affected by the tariff except that they pay enhanced prices caused by protection. There is a second class not subject to foreign competition, but whose industries would be promoted by the removal of duties, and these number 2,396,293. Of those who might be disastrously affected by the sudden removal of all duties whatever there are 600,000. Of these some 200,000 are engaged in agricultural pursuits, and yet a majority of the farmers of the country are somehow made to believe that their prosperity is wholly dependent upon the existence of a protective tariff.

As nobody proposes to dispense with all the duties at once, it is not at all apparent that even two-thirds of a million of people out of more than 29,000,000 would be in the last hurry for abolition of the tariff to a revenue basis, says the Louisville Courier-Journal. In other words, the present high level of tariff rates is maintained by a gigantic confidence game of which the majority of the people are unconscious victims. It is now up to the minions of monopoly to do some figuring.

The Union Veterans' union are not satisfied with the treatment the old soldiers are receiving at the hands of the last congress, and Commander Pettys is so excited about it that he says: "Every bill introduced favorable to veterans was killed in one house or the other, and we have a great majority of those who have worked and voted in favor of the veterans were representatives of the democratic party." Whoop it up, Brother Pettys, and tell the truth, whoever it hurts.

The president admits that some of the tariff schedules are too high, but says that it is better for the people to suffer the wrong than to risk injuring the system by tariff revision. This is the same argument that he used to defend the frauds. Better tolerate the 100 ones than risk injuring the good one.—The Commoner.

MAN OUT OF PLACE.

A Shopping Incident Which Illustrates His Unfitness for Buying Artificial Flowers.

It is one of the inconsistencies of things that a man should look so much in his element when buying flowers in a florist's shop and so out of his element when shopping at the artificial flower counter, relates the New York Sun.

"I wish to get a rose," a man of pale clerical look said to the flower seller in a great store.

"Single or double rose?" the girl inquired. Then, as he hesitated, "A bud or full bloom?"

"I don't know," he said, doubtfully, tugging at his mustache, and the girl put before him a medium-sized straw-colored rose, well placed on a green spray.

"Something larger," he said, decidedly.

The girl dodged down and brought from under the counter a full-petalled rose a size bigger, and her neighbor, who was unoccupied, fetched a monster white rose, full a hand's width across, for inspection.

The man still looked unsatisfied. His eyes roved over the boxes back of them.

"Haven't you something—er—more rosy?" he asked.

"A blush rose?" the girl suggested.

"A tea rose, perhaps?" her neighbor put in as the customer looked dissent. "A General Jack, American Beauty," putting forward specimens of each class.

But the rose buyer shook his head.

"None of those names sounds like it," he explained. "I expect it's not one big rose I want, but several tacked to one stem." And he walked further on up the aisle eying the array of blossoms in bunches and garlands.

"This kind," he said at length, pausing before some big-faced scarlet beauties grouped in a mass.

"Those are poppies," the girl said. "You asked for roses."

"Well, no matter," he answered. "But these are what I want, and I'll thank you to put me up three bunches."

"Three bunches?" the girl asked, turning the flowers broadside so that he could see the size.

"Yes, they'll fade, likely, and new ones will be needed now and then, so I might as well get a plenty while I'm about it."

The man was stout and wore an overcoat of considerable weight, and perhaps that was why he took out his handkerchief just then and mopped his forehead.

"You think they're for his wife or his daughter?" one salesgirl said to the other when he moved away.

"They're enough for the whole family," was the reply.

"But ain't he a dandy shopper! He wanted em—er—rosier."

And she mimicked the customer's manner and tone as he had debated about his purchase.

WASHING BABY'S CLOTHES.

Something That Every Mother Should Make Sure Is Properly Done.

I wonder if all mothers realize how much the baby's comfort depends upon the way the little garments are laundered. Of course, where the mother does the family washing herself, the handling of the tiny wardrobe is a labor of love; few women, however, are strong enough to undertake such heavy work in addition to other duties, nor is it advisable for them to do so when it can possibly be avoided, says the American Tribune.

But every mother can see that her baby's underwear is properly washed, and this she can only be sure of when the work is done under her directions. Nearly all laundresses now use inferior soap and strong washing powders which are very injurious to the delicate skin of an infant; then if the little flannel skirts are carelessly handled, they will thicken and draw up. For this reason the knitted skirts are better than flannel. Have enough flannel so they will only have to be washed once or twice a week; then rub them out in water that is warm, but not hot; unless they are very badly soiled, do not rub soap on them, but dissolve a tablespoonful of borax and a little castile soap in the water. Have the rinse water the same temperature as the first; dry in the shade and iron while damp between two cloths. For the white clothes that need washing, use the borax and castile soap also as one can not be too careful in preventing chapping and other ills.

Dutch Apple Pudding.

Core, peel and chop fine enough one egg, one-fourth cupful of butter, one cupful of sweet milk, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, one teaspoonful of cream tartar, one-half teaspoonful of soda, a pinch of salt, one pint of flour. Rub the flour and butter together; beat the egg and mix with the milk, then stir this with the flour; put in a shallow cake tin; pare and core five sour apples and press into the dough after it is in the pan; sprinkle with sugar and bake 25 minutes. Sauce: One cupful of sugar, one egg; cream together with one-half cupful of boiling water, and let it set on top of the teakettle for 30 minutes. Flavor to taste.—Detroit Free Press.

Molded Prunes.

Wash one pound of prunes, place in a saucepan with three tablespoonfuls granulated sugar and boil until very soft. Then remove the stones, crack the kernels and with one ounce of gelatine dissolved in a little cold water, the juice and rind of one lemon, add to the prunes, mixing all thoroughly. Turn into a mold, set away in a cool place until cold, then turn out into a pretty dish and serve with whipped cream or boiled custard.—Los Angeles Herald.

AGRICULTURAL HINTS.

CATALPA SPECIOSA.

Figures Calculated to Show That Forestry Can Be Made to Be a Profitable Occupation.

There are two varieties of Catalpas indigeneous to the United States. One, Catalpa bignonioides, is found along the south Atlantic coast, and is not hardy north of the Ohio river. The other Catalpa speciosa, is a native of Ohio, Indiana and the southwest, and is perfectly hardy throughout Ohio. It is a very rapid grower, and the wood is almost indestructible. The wood is used for fence posts and ties. It takes on a fine polish for inside work. As it is naturally a spreading-top tree it should be planted closely to force it to grow upright. There has been planted about 600 acres to Catalpa speciosa at Farlington, Kan., for the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Gulf railroad, and about 400 acres for Mr. Hunnewell, the president of the road.

INDIANA CATALPA SPECIOSA.

about four miles southwest of the Farlington plantation. These plantations were made on land so poor that the railroad company could not sell it. While the surrounding sections were sold at $12.50 per acre, these sections went unsold at five dollars. In no place was there over two feet of good soil. In a large part of the plantations it was not to exceed ten inches, and in places the subsoil or gumbo came to the surface and could only be plowed in the driest weather. These plantations were sadly neglected after the contractors turned them over; 2,720 trees were planted per acre, or four by four feet. The weaker trees were to have been cut out when the trees began crowding. This, however, was neglected for a number of years longer than it should have been. But now, at the end of 21 years, the government has sent foresters who thoroughly inspected the plantations, and their reports are issued in bulletin No. 37, "The Hardy Catalpa." I take the following figures from their reports. The total cost per acre at the end of 21 years for the Farlington plantation is $124.05. This includes cost of establishing as per contract $30, rent of land 21 years at two dollars, $42; cost of thinning, 62 cents; estimated cost of marketing products at one cent per post, $36.14; cost of superintendence 21 years at 75 cents per year, $15.30; total, $124.06. Basing their estimate on what had been already sold and estimating the remainder the value of an acre when 21 years old was $390.21, or $265.70 as the net return on the investment. The Honnewell plantation, planted three years later than the above, averaged a total cost per acre at the end of 18 years of $110.30. Timber sold and still standing, $376.30 per acre, or a profit of $266.10.

The Catalpa is grown from seed, and is sold very cheaply by nurserymen. Unless one wants to make a very large plantation this is the best way to get the plants. At the Farlington and Hunnewell plantations the land [illegible] kept off crosswise with a corn marker set at four feet, the trees being planted at the intersections. Two men and one boy to carry the trees would plant 4,000 to 4,800 per day. I would advise those interested in Catalpa speciosa to write to the forestry department at Washington for bulletin No. 37.—Thomas H. Douglas, in Rural New Yorker.

Food Taints Milk Flavor.

The flavor of milk is influenced by the food that the cow consumes. A cow fed on turnips will show the nature of the food by the flavor of the milk. All the brassica family, like cabbage, rape and all the Swede turnips, will cause an unpleasant taste in the milk. When these are fed several hours before milking time the flavor is not so apparent, some claiming that it cannot be detected, but the condensing companies have a clause in their milk contracts to the effect that no roots of any kind shall be fed to cows furnishing milk for their factories.—Midland Farmer.

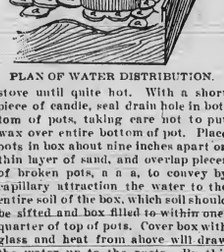
SUGAR BEET GROWING.

Some Important Facts That Have Been Ascertained After Seven Years of Experience.

The growers of sugar beets in Nebraska declare that the sugar beet is a great drought resister. This is certainly one point in favor of the sugar beet, whether for sugar making or for stock feeding. Whether the sugar beet can be best produced on light or heavy soil is a question yet in dispute. In some experiments the largest yields were on the heavy soils, but the largest average yields were on the light soils. On the whole, the results were more favorable to the heavy soils. The use of commercial fertilizers has resulted in increasing the sugar contents of beets, but frequently not enough to pay the cost of the fertilizers used. The phosphates made the best showing as to returns.

In the cultivation of sugar beets, it is desirable to provide a dust mulch, and the depth of cultivation will be generally regulated by the depth required to keep up a dust mulch, which differs in different soils. In some cases it cannot be maintained by anything less than a three or four-inch deep cultivation. The distance apart of the rows will have much to do with the size of the beets and something to do with sugar contents. About 18 inches seems to be the ideal distance apart for the rows, and the beets in the rows should not be separated by more than eight inches. Too much room means too big beets with too little proportion of sugar.

It is rather surprising to learn that the weeds that are sometimes allowed to grow in the sugar beet field have the power of stealing the sugar from the sugar beets or of at least keeping the beets from getting all the sugar they would otherwise acquire. A test to prove this was made at the Nebraska station. On four plats of beets some were left weedy and some were kept clean. Beets from the four weedy plats were analyzed and gave respectively 12.9, 12.0, 9.8, 9.2 per cent. of sugar content. From the clean plats the beets analyzed 13.2, 12.5, 11.0, 10.7. In all cases the difference was in favor of the plat that was kept clean. It is true that this was but one experiment and a great law should not be laid down on a single experiment, but it must be considered as having some weight.



It is not desired to have beets very large, nor is it desirable to start a growth in the fall after the beet is properly mature. A season of wet weather in the fall is very likely to start a new growth of the beet, which increases in size without increasing the amount of sugar contained. If the buds form and expand on the crown of the beet there is an actual loss of sugar.—Farmers' Review.

WATERING SEED SOIL.

To avoid disturbing small seeds by watering, when planted in forcing boxes, I have devised a plan which not only assures against the disturbance of the seed, but keeps the soil of the entire box in a moderate state of moisture, which is an essential feature in early growth.

I make a box of any desired size to suit the occasion, and about three inches deep. Then get a few small unglazed flower pots and place same on stove until quite hot. With a short piece of candle, seal drain hole in bottom of pots, taking care not to put wax over entire bottom of pot. Place pots in box about nine inches apart on thin layer of sand, and overlap pieces of broken pots, a n a, to convey by capillary attraction the water to the entire soil of the box, which soil should be sifted and box filled to within one-quarter of top of pots. Cover box with glass and heat from above will draw the water up to the roots. By this method you will not be troubled with surface baking, which is so troublesome with surface watering. If so desired, you can cover the pots with circular pieces of pasteboard or tin and avoid surface evaporation from the pots as [illegible] pots with warm water.—Arthur M. Knight, in Farm and Home.

Pruning Old Peach Trees.

Remove all the dead branches and interfering limbs. Be sure to paint all the cuts that are larger than half an inch in diameter. Then head back the other branches as much as one-fourth of their entire length, if no crop is expected the current season. If there will be a crop that season, head back most branches over one-half of last season's growth. In subsequent pruaings the tree must have care and thought until it conforms to the ideal tree. The two principal objects of pruning are a more vigorous growth and better fruit. The first is obtained by giving each branch the maximum amount of sunlight and air. The second by removing part of the fruit buds and such weak wood as cannot produce fine fruit.—Frank Horsfall, in Orange Judd Farmer.

A lazy man would better not engage in fruit growing.

JAPAN OF MODERN TIMES.

Comparison with the United Kingdom in Size, Population and Other Particulars.

Concerning the United Kingdom the following points of resemblance between it and Japan are remarked by the Anglo-Japanese Gazette: Japan consists of a group of islands lying to the east of the continent of Asia, as the United Kingdom consists of a group lying to the west of the continent of Europe. Both groups extend from north to south; the main islands of the Japan group are about the same length as the United Kingdom—viz., about 700 miles; both groups have a similar population—Japan 44,000,000 and the United Kingdom 42,000,000; both groups have a similar area—Japan 147,000 and the United Kingdom 120,000 (English) square miles; both groups are washed and their climates modified by important ocean currents—the Kuro Siwo or the gulf stream and Japan by the Japan current.

The resemblance ceases, however, when the two are contrasted as empires. The one is the land of the rising sun, the other that on which the sun never sets, while the population of the British empire is about 400,000,000, nearly a quarter of the population of the globe and nearly ten times that of Japan.

The revenue of the United Kingdom is more than four times that of Japan, but the foreign trade is 17 times and the national debt 12 times greater. The marked contrast between the national debts of the United Kingdom and Japan is that the former has been raised almost entirely for carrying on the wars in which that country has been engaged during the last 200 years, while that of Japan has been chiefly for public works and industrial enterprises.

In the United States the population is, roughly, twice the number in Japan, its size is 23 times as large, its revenue four times as great, while the foreign trade of the United States is nine times and its national debt seven times that of Japan. Russia covers one-seventh of the surface of the globe, is 60 times the size of Japan, but its population is less than three times greater, consequently population in Japan is 20 times thicker than in Russia. France has an area nearly 40 per cent. larger than Japan, but a population 10 per cent. less, and not growing. Its national debt is enormous—the largest of any nation in the world—nearly double that of the United Kingdom and 20 times that of Japan. Germany, which now aims at becoming a world power, is about the same size as France, or 40 per cent. larger than Japan, while its population is one-fourth greater. A striking feature of the population of Germany is that it is growing at a much greater rate than that of the United Kingdom or Japan, and justifies, in some measure, the desire for expansion.

NO BUCKET BUSINESS.

When Sam and Bill Met There Was No Hugging or Any Other Nuisance.

"On the train, as I was going to Chicago the other week," said a Detroiter, according to the Free Press, "I fell in with a man who was on his way to visit his brother in a certain town. The two had not met for 30 years, one having lived in New Hampshire and the other in Michigan all that time. I became somewhat interested in the affair, and in imagination I pictured the greeting between them after such a long separation. Indeed, I was more enthusiastic than the traveler. He had given no notice of his coming, but when we reached the town he picked up his satchel and looked out of the window and said:

"I followed him out and he walked up to the other and queried:

"'Ain't your name Sam Blank?'

"'Yep, and ain't your name Bill Blank?' queried the other in reply.

"'It is. Howdy do, Sam?'

"'Purty well, Bill.'

"'Come to visit me?'

"'Then come along to the house.'

"After 30 long years Sam had happened to be at the depot as his brother Bill got off the train, and Bill went home with Sam. It made me so vexed that I didn't enjoy the rest of the day at all."

Coffee-Drinkers and Alcohol.

A traveler has made the observation that coffee-drinking people are very seldom given to drunkenness. In Brazil, for instance, where coffee is grown extensively and all the inhabitants drink it many times a day, intoxication is rarely seen. The effect is not only noticeable among the natives, but the foreigner who settles there, though possessed of ever such a passion for strong drink, gradually loses his liking for alcohol as he acquires the coffee-drinking habit of the Brazilian.—Detroit Free Press.

THE SIZE OF AMERICA.

Something of a Nation, According to a Traveled Irishman's Description.

Col. Abraham Gruber is the master of more Irish jokes, it is said, than any other man in town. In making a speech at a recent public dinner he told this one, says the New York Mail and Express:

"Micky Finnigan, who had been an American citizen for about a year and had traveled about this continent considerably, returned home to Hibernia for a visit. This is the way he described his new country to one of his relatives:

"'Pawy, Amer-r-rica is so big, begorra that if you wor to dr-rag England thr-rough the shtates you wouldn't have a mar-rk in the dirrt; an' you could lose Oireland in one of them gr-reat inland oceans we hov phwat we call lakes; an' if you had Scotland to get rid of, there are a thousand corners you could hide her in, an' nobody could tell where you had put her except, begorra, for the bad smell o' the whisky.'

A Tight Squeeze.

Brazil, Ark., May 11th.—To be snatched from [illegible] at the [illegible] is what thrilling experience and one which Mrs. M. O. Garrett of this place has just passed through.

Mrs. Garrett suffered with a Cerebro-Spinal affection, and had been treated by the best physicians, but without the slightest improvement.

For the last twelve months two doctors were in constant attendance, but she only grew worse and worse, till she could not walk, and did not have any power to move at all.

She was so low that for the greater part of the time she was perfectly unconscious of what was going on about her, and her heart-broken husband and friends were hourly expecting her death.

The doctors had given up all hope and no one thought she could possibly live.

In this extremity Mr. Garrett sent for a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills. It was a last hope, but happily it did not fail.

Mrs. Garrett used in all six boxes of the remedy, and is completely cured. She says:

"I am doing my own work now and feel as well as ever I did. Dodd's Kidney Pills certainly saved me from death."

DOCTOR ENSOR

Endorses the Catarrhal Tonic Pe-ru-na---A Congressman's Letter.

Dr. J. F. Ensor, Postmaster of Columbia, S. C., late Superintendent and Physician in charge of State Insane Asylum at Columbia, S. C., writes:

"After using your Peruna myself for a short period, and my family having used and are now using the same with good results, and upon the information of others who have been benefited by it as a cure for catarrh and as invigorating tonic, I can cheerfully recommend it to all persons requiring so effective a remedy."—Dr. J. F. Ensor.

Hon. C. W. Butts, ex-Member of Congress from North Dakota, in a letter from Washington, D. C., says:

"That Peruna is not only a vigorous, as well as an effective tonic, but also a cure of catarrh is beyond controversy. It is already established by its use by the thousands who have been benefited by it. I cannot too highly express my appreciation of its excellence.—C. W. Butts.

Dr. R. Robbins, Muskogee, I. T., writes:

"Peruna is the best medicine I know of for coughs and to strengthen a weak stomach and to give appetite. Beside prescribing it for catarrh, I have ordered it for weak and debilitated people, and have not had a patient but said it helped him. It is an excellent medicine and it fits so many cases.

"I have a large practice, and have a chance to prescribe your Peruna. I hope you may live long to do good to the sick and suffering."

Only the weak need a tonic. People are never weak except from some good cause. One of the obscure causes of weakness and the one oftenest overlooked is catarrh.

Catarrh inflames the mucous membrane and causes the blood plasma to escape through the mucous membrane in the form of mucus. This discharge of mucus is the same as the loss of blood. It produces weakness.

Peruna stops the catarrh and prevents the discharge of mucus. This is why Peruna is called a tonic. Peruna does not give strength by stimulating the nervous system a little.

It gives strength by preserving the mucous membranes against leakage.

It gives strength by converting the blood fluids and preventing their draining away in mucous discharges.

Constant spitting and blowing the nose will finally produce extreme weakness from the loss of mucus.

A. N. K.—E 1900

Good salaries well-appointed studies and soft bottomed chairs seem to have played havoc with that hardy spirit of endurance which once characterized the country person in this neck of the woods.

The days when the preacher slept on his horse, carried his sermons in his head, his Bible in his pocket and a clean shirt in his saddlebags have gone glimmering.

When Peter Cartwright was shouting the gospel across the prairies and over the hills of Southern Illinois, half a century ago, he never stopped to inquire whether the roads were good or whether there was a bed and a beefstake at the other end of the line. He simply laid the lash on his nag and sailed away, one mile or fifty, and trusted to Providence for food and a congregation. If there was no "meetin hvuse," he chose a stump, and if there was no stump he stood on the groundf and if his audience was not respectful, he thumped it into submission with his bare knuckles.

Old Peter had no salary, no study and no soft-bottomed chairs —no organist, no choir leader, no thousand-dollar soprano, no beautiful white tie and no $40 Prince Albert and he was no D. D., but he was right there with the goods in a religious way, and he had made the whole of the middle West thoroughly acquainted with the doctrine of the strenuous life long before Theodore Roosevelt was ever heard or thought of.

Now what is this we heai? A Missouri preacher has been relieved of a portion of his pastorate at his own request because he considered it too much of a hardship to ride nine miles to a certain point Sunday afternoon, conduct services and then return to the starting point in time for evening services there.

Oh, very well! But what would the old fashioned circuit riders say, were they here, to the soft muscled young dominies who shy at so easy a stunt as that? Are pipe organs and velvet cushions enervating?—Post Dispatch.

The more relatives he has by marriage the harder it is for an ordinary man to understand the point of view of a Mormon.

H. P. Parsons from down on Middle creek, passed through town Sunday en route to the city to visit his son, Bert and family. He brought one of the grandchildren home with him.

John Furlong, who is working insurance in Covington, spent Sunday with his sisters here. John is very popular with the company for which he works, and holds a good position.

Joseph Love, of Buffalo neighborhood, was in town Saturday. He said the farmers over there, generally, are very much behind with their work, some not yet done breaking ground for corn.

Rankin Revill, Secretary and Treasurer of a Telephone Co., with headquarters at Memphis, Tenn., is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Revill. He is recovering from a severe spell of sickness.

Mr. Robert Fowler, who has been with Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Blyth for the last fourteen months, left this morning for his home in Illinois. His friends here (and that is everybody) were sorry to see him leave.

Mrs. John Palmer and a lady friend, of Dry Ridge, Grant county, were in town a few hours last Saturday. Mrs. Palmer was a daughter of the late W. H. Nelson, and a sister of Prof. B. W. Nelson, of Rabbit Hash.

Met our old friend, Clinton Smith, of Hebron, at Limaburg, one day last week. Although about recovered he was obliged to use his cane because of the injuries he received a few weeks ago in Cincinnati when his team tried to run off with a load of hay.

Misses Birdie and Daisy Rouse, two handsome and accomplished young ladies, of Milan, Indiana, made the RECORDER a brief call last Saturday. They came over and took the examination for teachers' certificates, last Friday and Saturday, and were guests of Miss Sadie Crisler, while in Burlington.

John W. Berkshire and son, Bernard, of Petersburg, were in town Monday. Mr. Berkshire reported everything in good shape in his town, and that Ben R. Berkshire has 100 acres of corn up and growing nicely, notwithstanding it was generally considered that he was wasting his time when he was planting it.

The following persons were examined last Friday and Saturday touching their qualifications to teach in the common schools: Arreida Hind, Verona; J. H. Johnson, Beaver Lick; Birdie and Daisy Rouse, of Milan, Indiana; Stella Carpenter of Florence; Nora Ryle and Sadie Crisler, of Burlington; Omer Waller, of Verona.

Miss Bessie Berkshire entertained very handsomely at her pleasant home out on the Bellevue pike, last Sunday. Her guests were Miss Stella Fenton, of Newport; Misses Jessie Woodyard and Birdie Horner, of Covington; Mrs. Mattie Hoover, and Misses Elizabeth and Minnie Hilker of Erlanger; Homer Jameson, of Columbus, Ohio, and Messrs. Edgar Berkshire, Leslie Goodridge, Hubert Rouse, John Cloud. A sumptuous dinner was served.

Mr. Ira Kemper, a very pleasant young gentleman, of Monterey, Owen county, made the RECORDER a brief call, last Saturday afternoon. Mr. Kemper is to be cashier of the Farmers Bank of Petersburg, which he said would be ready to begin business about the middle of next month, with good prospects for its share of business. Mr. Kemper will soon discover after locating in Petersburg that he has cast his lot with a community that will make him feel like he is in the midst of his home people.

Thomas Cowen, who is engaged in the insurance business in Memphis, Tennessee, spent from last Friday evening until Monday morning with his mother and sisters here. He is looking as fine as a fiddle, the only change in him being an increase in his crop of silvery locks. He was in excellent spirits, and says Memphis is growing rapidly, and is the greatest business city in the south, but he says for social qualities there are no other people on earth that are in it when compared with those "born and bred in old Kentucky." He is superintendent of the company's business in Memphis, and has charge of five or six men. On two subjects he was entirely silent while here—that of his marriage, and coming back to Burlington to live.

TIM SANDFORD AND CHILDREN.

FLORENCE.

Abel Carpenter was born Dec. 26, 1824, died, May 12, 1903, aged 78 years 6 months and 16 days. He was married to Harriet Arnold Feb. 20, 1845. To them were born six children, only two of whom survive him, viz: Wm. Ell and Everett Carpenter.

On the 5th day of March, 1870 occurred the death of his wife, and nearly 4 years thereafter he married Mrs. Mary Rice, widow of the late Buford Rice. Brother Carpenter was a man of rare qualities. As a business man, he, by dint of persistent industry and wise management of his farm and finances, amassed a comfortable competency. As a neighbor, he was ever ready to extend courtesy and to oblige; as a friend he was constant and true; as a husband and father, kind and indulgent.

While yet a young man he was led to embrace Christ as his personal Savior and united with the Christian church at Florence. From that time until his death he remained true to his faith and thus for nearly 50 years, and though a great sufferer for years past, he strove to exemplify in his life the teaching of his Master. When the end became near he said that he was not only ready but anxious to go and be at rest. He stated to the writer that his trust was fully in Christ, and through His mercy he felt prepared to go. Peacefully closed the long life of Uncle Abel Carpenter, leaving a widow, two sons, one step son, Dr. Eugene Rice, several grand children and a large circle of relatives, besides a host of friends to mourn his death. But we will not sorrow as those who have no hope, for we are pursuaded that our loss is his eternal gain.

On Thursday last a funeral service was conducted by his former pastor, Rev. E. D. Jones, assisted by Rev. Slater, of the Lutheran church, after which the remains were interred in the Florence cemetery.

Mrs. Carpenter expresses her grateful thanks for the kind sympathy and assistance rendered by neighbors and friends during the last illness of her husband. F. L. UTZ.

GUNPOWDER.

May 18.—W. N. Surface was on the sick list several days last week.

John Crisler had the misfortune to lose a valuable horse a few days since.

B. A. Rouse had a narrow escape from a serious accident, the other day. While harrowing on a steep bluff the harrow caught on a root, causing it to spring over on the horses. They started to run and dragged him a short distance, but he finally stopped them. The horses were bruised and scratched up considerably and will not be fit for service for several days.

We received word last Saturday morning of the death of Mrs. Lucy Rouse, wife of Perry Rouse, of Bank Lick, Kenton county. About a week ago she ran a nail in her foot, which resulted in lockjaw. Every possible means was resorted to to give her relief, but nothing had the desired effect, and she passed to her reward early Saturday morning. The funeral service and interment was at Walton Sunday afternoon. She leaves a husband and two little children, who have the sympathy of this entire community.

The writer and family and a number of other friends spent a pleasant day and enjoyed a good dinner with J. C. Hankins, last Sunday.

Mrs. Thomas Horton died of consumption and the measles, last Friday night, and was buried at Big Bone Sunday at 11 o'clock. Rev. Sam Adams preached the funeral.

Brady, selling 20 suckling pigs to John Christner for the round sum of $100, and Gilly Weisickle a sow and 6 pigs to an Ind. man for $26. It's impossible for me to hear everything. The majority of the people don't put themselves to any trouble to report; don't as much as tell me if we meet, then kick like hay steers if I don't report everything.

Cecil Snelling and brother, Napoleon, were setting in the yard one night last week before the moon had risen. The faithful old watch dog was taking a nap near by, when all of a sudden he jumped up and barked at something attracting his attention up a ravine running near the house. The dog kept up his barking, and the boys looked up the ravine to see what was attracting his attention, and saw a ball of fire the size of a two gallon bucket. It was very bright and red and remained stationary. They watched it for 15 or 20 minutes when it commenced throwing out sparks of fire in every direction, thick and fast. The ball gradually grew smaller as the sparks were thrown out. In five minutes it was all gone.

In the writing contest so much agitated by the pencil showers up north—they if like unto ourselves, give the news, when, where and how it occurs, will lose some votes, as it keeps us crossing the highways and byways dodging friends (?) seeking that fellow who wrote that item about ma, pa, brother, sister or me, and of course, they will vote for you if you give their news an airing, but not for the best writer.

The Offerings of Cain and Abel

What They Teach Us of the Way of Acceptance With God.

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

Chicago, Sunday, May 17, 1903

Text:—"And the Lord said unto Cain, Why art thou wroth? and why is thy countenance fallen? if thou doest well, shalt thou not be accepted? and if thou doest not well, sin lieth at the door."—Gen. 4:6 and 7.

HERE are two brothers recognizing their obligations to the Lord Jehovah, and bringing their offerings. One is accepted of God, the other is not. "And Cain was very wroth, and his countenance fell." Then it is that the Lord confronts him and asks him three questions, which lay bare his wickedness of heart, his rebellion toward God, and the reason his offering was not acceptable to God. The Lord then proceeds directly to the root of the matter (He always does when dealing with a soul), and lays the charge of sin against Cain. There is no intimation in Scripture that Cain attempted to reply to the Lord's questions or His charge against him. Like the man without the wedding garment on in the presence of the Lord, he was speechless. Cain could not answer the Lord or offer any defense to the indictment against him, but a good many people since Cain's time have dared to reopen the case, ask God questions, and adjudicate the case by the aid of human wisdom and according to human standards. Man rushes blindly and heedlessly, sometimes, into places where angels dare not tread. "Michael, the archangel," Jude tells us, "durst not bring against him (the Devil) a railing accusation," but man dares sometimes not only to pass judgment upon the Devil, but to bring God to the judgment bar and charge Him with partiality and injustice. God's piercing glance searches beneath the surface of human reason and human conduct, and lays bare the hidden recesses of the heart, and we must let God's indictment against Cain stand without question. Cain had no defense to make. Dare anyone attempt to make it for him? There is no appeal from the judgment bar of God. The case can never be reopened, but thousands of years after, the Lord, by His Holy Spirit, speaking through the Apostle Paul, gives this final and clear explanation of the incident: "By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts: and by it, he, being dead, yet speaketh."

AND in view of Cain's silence before the Lord how striking is it when Scripture goes on to declare in the next sentence that Cain talked with his brother Abel. He dare not try to justify himself before the Lord, but when the Lord has withdrawn and he is alone with his brother, his tongue is loosened. I have often thought that I would like to have been a listener to that conversation, and yet I am inclined to think that it differed little from discussions which have continued to take place to this day between those whose offerings have been accepted of God because given in faith, and those whose offerings have not been pleasing to God, because, as Jude puts it, "they (the offerers) have gone in the way of Cain." There stand the brothers. Nature fresh from the hand of God unfolds its grandeur and beauty all about. The birds resting in the trees overhead are busy picking out new and melodious notes to add to the sweet song which God a few years before had taught them. There is a busy hum in the air as the insects, flashing in the glad sunlight, speed hither and thither. Fleecy white clouds floating through the blue of the heavens build themselves into a stately city with buildings and streets and busy inhabitants, until it would almost seem as though the unseen hands of the angels were shaping a model of the eternal city to inspire in the hearts of these brothers a richer hope of a better destiny than that which it was possible to realize upon earth. There they stand, these two brothers. They have been boys together. They have played together. And now that they have grown to manhood, they have both entered upon their business careers. Cain chooses farming, and Abel becomes a keeper of sheep. Until this day of crucial testing before the Lord we have no reason to suppose that any difference had ever risen between them. But there stand these two brothers now, one with anger filling his heart and the other with the sweet presence of God's love filling his. One has a black and forbidding frown upon his face as he talks; the other has his face lifted heavenward, and it is lit up by the presence which rules within. One who has been mute before God is now pouring forth bitter words of complaint and criticism; the other with earnest words and pleading tones is trying to point out the error and reveal the pathway of faith which leads to acceptance with God.

HIS was no quarrel. It must not be so intimated in telling the story to the children. The soul that is in rebellion against God quarrels with itself in the presence of righteousness, but righteousness never enters into unholy strife with evil, and righteous Abel did not provoke his brother that day. No angry word of rebuke or condemnation passed his lips. If there had, Cain would not have felt so bitter and transferred his quarrel with God to the person of his brother. But God had laid the charge of sin at his door and he was not willing to recognize it. He wanted to talk about the excellent qualities of the fruit he had brought. He wanted to talk of his abilities as a farmer, and his faithfulness and steadfast habits. And there has been a long line of the descendants of Cain, which reaches to the present day, people who recognize their obligation to God and who bring their offerings, but who fail to realize the way of approach to God and the secret of acceptance with Him. They love to dwell on the excellencies of that which they have given; they compare their outward lives with the lives of those who have been accepted of God through the sacrifice of the Lamb, Christ Jesus, but they fail to answer the direct question of God or reply to the charge which He brings against them. "If thou doest well, shalt thou not be accepted?" and thou hast not done well, because "sin lieth at the door." Let us consider this question and this charge of the Lord against Cain.

IN the first place the question which God asked of Cain is one which He has been asking of man ever since. "If thou doest well, shalt thou not be accepted?" The human heart yields ready assent to this question, if it is granted the privilege of judging its own motives and conduct, but to this the Lord of all the heaven and the earth will not and cannot consent. He who searcheth the heart and knoweth the hidden thoughts (and, by the way, did it ever occur to you that that term "hidden thoughts" does not imply alone those conscious thoughts which you withhold from others and cherish in your inmost heart, but include many thoughts of which the heart is not really conscious. God tells us that "the heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked. Who can know it?" and no man knows the lurking enemies which invade the natural heart); and He Who searcheth the heart and knoweth the hidden thoughts is the One Who must decide. To Cain and his offering God had not respect. It was a great surprise to Cain. It came as a terrible shock to the hitherto complacent view which he had taken of himself and of his attitude towards God. God's question should have set Cain to thinking. Instead of rebelling against God's estimate of his offering, and arguing with his brother to prove its worth and acceptability, he should have sought to discover wherein the offering of Abel was acceptable to God while his was not.

WHAT are the terms of acceptance with God? Surely it is not a fluctuating condition which God places upon man, by which the Abels are accepted and the Cains rejected. In the question which God asks He reveals the terms upon which He is able and willing to accept man and his offering. Well doing is what God demands. Absolute perfection (for that is what "well doing" means when tested and estimated by God), absolute perfection is what God requires before man can be accepted by Him. God has but one standard, and if man cannot measure up to that standard he cannot hope to see God or be accepted of Him. God's solemn command is: "Be ye holy, for I am holy." Did Abel measure up to this standard, and Cain fall short of it? Scripture does not say or imply that up to the time of this incident Abel was any better boy than was Cain. They were undoubtedly both model young men. They both observed their outward religious obligations, as is attested by their offerings to the Lord. But the time of testing came when they brought their offerings. There was an element in Abel's offering which made it acceptable to God, because it met God's requirement. "By faith, Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain." It was faith which transformed the offering. It was faith which bore it aloft to the very presence of God. Cain's offering was not made in faith, but was the natural expression of the natural man. It is the plain declaration of God's Word that "whatsoever is not of faith is sin," and because faith was lacking in Cain's offering God declares that sin lay at his door. And again God's Word says: "Without faith it is impossible to please Him."

LET us now consider these two facts in their relation one to the other and see how beautifully they fit together. There is God's requirement of perfect righteousness before man can be accepted of Him, and then there is faith which bridges the chasm which separates the natural man from God and which claims as its own the righteousness which is in Christ Jesus. That which it is impossible for man to gain by his own merit, he may obtain through the medium of faith. Cain, trusting in himself, with an offering which did not reach beyond the hands which had plucked the fruit, was rejected with his offering by God, because all of his good qualities, all his "righteousnesses were as filthy rags." Abel, with the vision of his soul quickened by the faith which reached up after God, obtained recognition not only for himself but acceptance for his offering. His offering not only testified of his own unworthiness in the sight of God, but was prophetic of the way of salvation which God was to work out in the world through the person of His only begotten Son, Christ Jesus. It was not the offering of itself which God desired, but the man behind the offering which God wanted.

THE Psalmist David, in the experiences which gave birth to the Fifty-first Psalm, learned this and declares: "Thou desirest not sacrifice, else would I give it: Thou delightest not in burnt offering. The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit: a broken and a contrite heart, O God, Thou wilt not despise." During those long months which intervened between David's awful sin and his conviction and repentance under the bold, fearless ministry of the Prophet Nathan, there is no possibility of doubt that David sought to whitewash the foul scandal which he had committed in Israel by special faithfulness to his religious obligations. His devotions in the tabernacle were marked; his sacrifices were regularly brought and offered, but when the arrow of conviction of sin had pierced his heart he realized that what God wanted was not offerings, but the heart and the life, of which the offering was but the expression. And the mistake which David made is one which Christians are constantly making. There is no service which man can render to God which will blot out the stain of sin. The devotion of a lifetime cannot cover up the failure which lies behind. Only the blood and merits of Jesus Christ can cleanse from sin and give the soul access to God.

WEIGHED commercially, there is no doubt that Cain's offering equaled or even exceeded in value and in excellence that of his brother. Weighed by God, Who looked behind the offering to discover the attitude of the heart towards Him, we find that He could not have respect unto the offering of Cain, but that Abel's offering was worthy of acceptance because faith prompted it, faith suggested the kind of offering faith showed the way to make the offering. Abel by faith knew more of the way of approach to God and acceptance with Him, in that primeval day when yet the way of salvation was veiled in mystery, than does many a churchman to-day who rejoices in the greater light and revelation of this Christian age, and to whom God has given the perfect revelation of His will in His written Word. Abel did not have the theology of the nineteenth century to help him out, but God testifies of him that he had faith, and that faith taught him two things which Cain was not willing to recognize. First, it revealed to Him the absolute righteousness of God, and, secondly, it showed himself a sinner, separated from God. Faith then made it plain to his heart that his offering must meet these conditions, that his offering must satisfy God's righteousness and testify of man's need. It was not a mere matter of offering. It must needs be a fitting offering. And so we find Abel taking a lamb without spot or blemish. We see him shed its innocent blood. We behold him place it upon the glowing coals and watch the fire and smoke rising as a sweet smelling savor before the Lord. Why the lamb, instead of the golden fruits of the field? Why the shed blood instead of the ripened grains and full rounded and luscious product of vine and tree? Why the smoking altar instead of the heaps of glorious gifts from field and orchard? Ah! need we ask such questions in this day of the full revelation of God? Need we enter into full explanation of what the lamb, the shed blood, the smoking offering typified? Abel's faith pointed towards the cross on Calvary, and the salvation which God was to accomplish for the lost human race. Our faith looks back to the cross and sees accomplished that which Abel's faith taught him was sometime, somehow, to be realized. And so, "by faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witness that he was righteous." Righteous, not by deed, but righteous by faith, or as God's Word puts it, "the righteousness which is by faith."

BUT, you ask, how came Abel to know that sacrifice was needed? How came he to take the lamb? Go with me back into the garden of Eden. The guilty pair stand before God with their clothing of foliage which they have woven together for themselves. But, God does not suffer it thus, but makes them coats of skin. God must provide the covering for guilty men. And so in the garden there sacrifice is made as a testimony against sin and to point the way of cleansing from sin. God has just said that the consequence of sin shall be death, and here is death witnessed by the slain animal from which is taken the skin to cover their nakedness. As they wore those dresses of skin how they must have been a perpetual testimony to them of what death was and suggested that God would provide a way of redemption for them. And since the plan of God was wrought out on Calvary, the way of approach to and acceptance with Him is still by way of the sacrifice made once for all for sin in Christ Jesus. Abel, though dead, yet he speaketh. Let the lesson of his offering teach you, O soul! the way of approach unto God, and the way of acceptance with Him.

SCANDALS OF ADMINISTRATION

Government Departments Honeycombed with Fraud and Corruption.

The Porto Ricans are thoroughly aroused upon discovering that the natives who smuggled are in the penitentiary, and the United States officers who committed a like offense are, by order of the administration, set free. The message of Attorney General Knox to the United States district attorney, sent just after the grand jury had indicted the government officials, created a great stir. It ordered:

"Dismiss pending proceedings in smuggling cases, and present no new cases to grand jury unless otherwise directed hereafter. Report fully by mail the nature and status of all said cases."

This telegram evidently led the district attorney to inquire if he was expected to refuse to prosecute American offenders against the law, for it was followed by another from Mr. Knox which caused even greater astonishment and much speculation as to its exact meaning. It said: "Considerations of moment, not confined to Porto Rico or to the individuals involved that caused the administration after full deliberation, investigation and thought, to pursue the course already outlined."

The interpretation of the last dispatch must be, that a cabinet meeting of the president and his advisers was held to consider this Porto Rican scandal, and it was decided to hush the matter up, for "considerations of moment not confined to Porto Rico." What did President Roosevelt and his cabinet mean by this? What great considerations urged them to order the pending proceedings in this scandal to be dismissed? They say they arrived at this decision, "after full deliberation, investigation and thought." What were the momentous reasons, "not confined to Porto Rico or the individuals involved," that caused the administration to punish Porto Ricans for smuggling by imprisonment, and to allow United States officers and civil employes to go free for the same offense against the laws? There is no doubt that scandals of a similar nature have permeated the government of the Philippines, for some have come to light, but have been squelched by Secretary Root. These scandals in the insular department of the government, added to the serious scandal in the post office, land office and other departments coming to light as they have on the eve of the presidential campaign, may wreck the political fortunes of President Roosevelt, which would certainly be "considerations of moment" to himself, and the shady politicians, Root and Payne, who are his principal political advisers. Attorney-General Knox and the other members of the cabinet are equally interested in the renomination of their chief, and are, therefore, obliged to join in the conspiracy to prevent scandals from being exposed to the public gaze. If this is not the reason for suppressing the scandals, will anyone suggest a more satisfactory explanation.

For an administration that prides itself with having the brand of civil service reform burnt into its hide, the present one certainly eclipses all its predecessors. It could not be much worse if Hanna and his crew were in the saddle.

Reform is needed in every department of the government, and nothing but a clean sweep will bring it about. Turn the rascals out!

—The New Orleans Picayune remarks: "It is doubtful if Senator Hanna can afford to stand as surety for a man like President Roosevelt, who is the most uncertain factor possible, as to his position in any public policy. Nobody can assert with any degree of confidence what Mr. Roosevelt will do under any set of circumstances or at any time." But the Louisville Courier-Journal says: "Mr. Roosevelt is a very consistent man, but as he is consistent in doing invariably what he thinks will strengthen his political fortunes, his record of consistency is made up of picturesque inconsistency."—Albany Argus.

—Secretary Root is getting worse and worse. He says that the tariff should be revised only by a congress that is not playing politics. This would be putting off revision until the arrival of the millennium, and that is a little farther than anyone else has gone.—Peoria Journal.

THE LAW'S INCONSISTENCY.

What we call the law sometimes vexes us with apparent strange inconsistencies. When the judges of the eighth circuit court of the United States decided the merger case, it was generally considered that the railroads involved would have to abide by that decision, unless it was reversed by the supreme court. The railroad attorneys, however, applied to Judge Sanborn, who was one of the judges of the circuit court that rendered the decision, asking a modification of the judgment, and he granted it, notwithstanding the protest of the attorney general of the United States and the district attorney. Thus we see the extraordinary judicial spectacle of a judge acting en banc and deciding with the other judges that a corporation, the Northern Securities company, was created illegally and is therefore not in existence, and a few days after the same judge acting alone modifies that judgment and admits the merger company is legally in existence by issuing a decree allowing the merger company to pay its dividends. This defeat of the attorney general and the administration leaves the matter in statu quo until the case is decided by the supreme court.

If the supreme court should decide that the merger in effect restrains trade and confirms the circuit court decision, there would be no relief for the people for the merger railroad stocks will be returned to their original owners. The only object of the public in wanting the merger declared void is to re-establish competition, and this is impossible, as Mr. Hill and Mr. Morgan jointly control the majority of the stock of the railroads and of course will not enter into competition with themselves. Competition ended when they brought the control of the competing railroads under one management, and no law can prevent one man or two men owning stock in two competing railroads, and now they own a controlling interest of both railroads, from ceasing to compete one against the other.

If the administration and the attorney general had expended half the time and money of some of the industrial trusts, that are charging the people an exorbitantly for their products, the result might have been of much greater value to the consumers. The trouble is that the attempt to fight the trusts is entirely a political play and not intended as a serious demonstration against them, if it had been intended to punish the most obnoxious and oppressive trusts, the criminal section of the anti-trust law would long ago have been invoked.

Now the republican leaders have determined to throw overboard the "Iowa idea" and have agreed to let the trusts continue their robbery under the protection granted them by the Dingley bill, there can be no reliance placed in their efforts to prevent railroad consolidation.

If the merger suit would result in lowering the freight and passenger rates on the railroads it would be a great victory for the people and the administration would be entitled to the credit. But no one claims that one cent of the exorbitant rates will be taken off, or that one dollar will be saved to the people even if the supreme court confirms the decision of the lower court.

DAME FASHION'S DICTATES.

The lace collar will be almost ubiquitous on spring gowns and smart ones in ecrue and cream lace of heavy patterns make lace departments attractive.

Blouse sleeves in silks, muslins and other such fine fabrics are either simply gauged at the top, tucked by hand, or, more effective still, inserted with silk veining, sometimes in a contrasting shade. This is a pretty fashion and one that appeals to the clever worker.

It is curious to note with what enthusiasm we have returned to the revival of Irish crochet lace, the preference being for ecru tones rather than dead white. For mixing with cloth, coarse linen and indeed velvet and satins there is nothing more effective than this heavy make of lace.

The keynote of the best fashions, in spite of the intricacies of beautiful hand-work and glorious colors and material, is simplicity—costly simplicity, if you like, but still simplicity. Great discretion is shown in the matter of trimmings. The worst of trimmings is that once they are used the unitiated are apt to overdo them.

The chief difficulty in making a pelerine is the fitting on the shoulders and the amateur must guard against making the woman with an already too-sloping shoulder look ridiculous. Our heavy, three-quarter wraps were cut to accentuate the sloping shoulder and the addition of the collar or overcape was a distinct improvement.

Pretty veils are shown in such shades as blue, brown, black, and green, with the dot in the same color, and the dot may be either chenille, velvet or embroidered in silk threads. For those who prefer the less showy veils there are handsome dotted ones in a variety of styles. Last come heavily dotted with velvet or chenille, those having the spot of velvet being especially new.

French canvas is being made up extensively in shirt waists, a favorite pattern consisting of stripes of color separated with a hairline of black. Mercerized chevlots, Oxford shirtings and mercerized madras are among the desirable fabrics for shirt waists. For shirt waist suits linen etamine is a favorite, as it develops so smartly, while foulard is as popular as ever, for nothing is cooler or more serviceable for hot weather wear.

Of equal importance with the cape collar or pelerine is the sleeve, which every day becomes more intricate and elaborate. In soft materials the big sleeves look charming and admit of a fair amount of tucking and gauging at the top, falling full from the elbow to the wrist. But in a cheap wiry fabric there should be an adherence to the severer styles, the only permissible trimming being shaped pieces of stitched cloth, braid or gimp, the top being kept as plain and flat as possible.

OUR SPOILED CHILDREN.

The girls of to-day have been petted and made much of from their cradles. Everything has been done to make the hard places easy and the rough places smooth. There is a grading and leveling in the schools nowadays in order that children may learn without their knowing it. A sort of "ignorance extracted without pain system" it is, from kindergarten to college, says Woman's Home Companion. At home, if not at school, American children are regularly and unblushingly spoiled; and while the effects of such wholesale injury to the childish life often wear off with boys as soon as they go out into the world to compete with their equals on every side, in the case of girls the tonic of mingling in the affairs of life and work, without flattery or favor of any kind, is usually denied. With girls the petting and coddling continues long after womanhood is reached, and so the daughters do not get over the effects of the American manner of spoiling children as promptly and as thoroughly as do the sons. These spoiled children will have to love very earnestly and tenderly if they are to be really successful home-makers. The ability they have; the training needed they often have, and can always get if they see their need of it, even if the illumination comes after marriage. It is the disciplined nature which will be most needed; the habit of doing distasteful things, and doing them cheerfully and continually; the power to give up cherished plans, to devise ways of helpfulness about things of small interest in themselves, and the regular practice of forgetfulness of self and remembrance of others in the recurring trifles of daily life.

Asparagus Soup.

Cut a bunch of asparagus into small pieces and boil in a quart of water until very tender. Heat one pint of milk and thicken with one tablespoonful of butter and one of flour, which have been rubbed together. Rub the asparagus through a colander, return to the water in which it was boiled, and add the thickened milk. Season with salt, pepper and a little nutmeg. FARM WATER SUPPLY.

Ohio Farmer Describes a System That Has Been Used for Years with Great Success.

I send a sketch of my water supply which may be of interest to some. I find it very handy in summer. I hardly ever put my mill out of gear, and I an never out of water, and water always cool in house. A is the windmill; B, the pump. C is the manhole or dry well. D is pipe leading to house tank. E is house tank, holds 30 gallons. F is overflow to house tank leading back to supply tank. G is sink where I also have hot and cold water and well water.

STOCK FARM WATER WORKS.

H is waste pipe to sink. I is tile drain for sink, cellar and dry well, and supply tank overflows. J is pipe leading to supply tank. K is a 35-barrel supply tank about 100 feet from house and 40 feet from windmill. L is outlet for supply tank. M is pipe leading from supply tank to stock tank about 60 feet off; the supply is governed in stock tank by a float, and other tanks sit on a level with main stock tank that are supplied and governed by it.

I used three-quarters pipe for all, but the outlet to house tank and supply tank, which must be 1¼ pipes are laid 3½ feet under ground, through cellar wall and up into kitchen.

Now comes what led me to send this sketch—the inquiry asking how to keep tank from freezing. My supply tank is near my feed yard, where I put a stack of corn fodder around it and over it in the fall, and feed it off in late spring. My stock tanks are away from buildings far enough so I can heat them with tank heater and a little coal.—C. Ottgen, in Ohio Farmer.

GREAT PROGRESS MADE.

Rural Free Delivery Service, Organized Ten Years Ago, Now Employs 12,000 Men.

The fact that the farmers in a territory representing 300,000 square miles of the United States have their mail delivered and collected by government carriers indicates not only the remarkable development of what is termed rural free delivery, but its broad and deep significance to the country at large. When it is remembered that this area comprises nearly one-third of the territory at present devoted to agriculture, and that the beginning of the present service dates back as recently as 1896, a more intelligent conception can be gained of its expansion. Yet the permanent organization of this department of the post office was not affected until July 1, 1902, when its necessity was emphasized by reports which showed that 8,466 routes were in operation, an increase of 4,165 in one year, while on June 30, 1900, but 1,276 routes were being served, requiring an appropriation for expenses of $450,000, which in 1901 was raised to $3,993,740. Since the date of the permanent establishment, however, the force of carriers has been increased, until at present it constitutes an army of about 12,000, who daily travel over nearly 300,000 miles of highway for the benefit of a population of about 7,000,000.—Review of Reviews.

Teach the Pigs to Eat.

Be sure and give the pigs plenty of exercise, and as soon as possible the little pigs should be taught to eat. By providing a little pen where in they can get cracked corn and sweet milk, they will soon be able to get away with lots of feed and will transform it into bone and flesh, thereby decreasing the drain on the sow. If the sow does not lose in flesh they should be allowed to suckle for eight weeks; but this must be governed by conditions. One of the great secrets of successful hog raising is to watch both ends of the hog and feed accordingly.—Farmers' Review.

Variety in Horse Rations.

As a man grows tired of the same food day after day, so does a horse. He appreciates a change of diet, and is in every way better for having it. When horses are on grass, their digestive organs are kept in order, and nothing beyond one feed of oats a day is required, but in the winter, when they are confined so large a part of the time, they should have warm mashes once a day, with a quart or so of chopped carrots mixed therein twice a week. In severe weather the water for all stock should have the chill taken off it.—Rural World.

WATER FOR THE BEES.

They Need It and the Wise Apiarist Will See That It Is Always Within Their Reach.

It seems a little out of season to talk about watering your bees, if, as in a good many localities, they are snugly housed in the cellar at the present moment. However, it is well to anticipate their wants. Indeed, there may not be any anticipation in the case where the bees are wintered out of doors. Just as soon as there comes a day warm enough for them to fly, one of the first things they will do is to start in search of water, says a writer in the Bee Journal.

Bees are hard drinkers, and it is a matter of some importance that they have easy access to plenty of pure water without being obliged to fly some distance to secure it. Especially is this true in teh early spring, when cold winds and sudden changes in temperature work such havoc with our bees. Water they must have, and if they do not have it supplied near home they must seek it else where. More bees are lost in spring by flying some distance, becoming chilled and never getting back to their hive, than some bee-keepers are aware of. We don't want anything that will induce them to take long flights, much less anything that will oblige them to. Bees are largely creatures of habit, and when once they have established a drinking place it is not so easy to change them from it. And one of their favorite selections is the watering tank, causing much annoyance to stock, and to the people taking care of our stock as well. It is also a great nuisance to have them around the well or cistern pump. Especially is this the case if there are small children in the family.

All this bother may be avoided if we select their drinking place for them, and get them started in the right place before they have learned to go anywhere else. This is not difficult to do. A large jar filled with water, with a number of pieces of wood put into it, for the bees to alight upon (if they are somewhat rotten all the better), is all that is needed to make a good watering place. If this jar is kept supplied with water, after the bees once get started there will be no more trouble about their bothering you anywhere else. It is a good plan to put a little salt into it once in awhile. Then it will not be a breeding place for mosquitoes, and the bees seem to like it better when it is a little salty.—Bee Journal.

The Music of the Bee.

The honey bee is an excellent coworker on the farm, even if he is not absolutely necessary to the pollenizing of fruits. The bee can be denied many of the advantages it is claimed to possess and still be worth much more than the little labor required to care for it. The music alone of the busy hive compensates many for the trouble it costs, to say nothing of its garnered sweets, that make of good bread and butter a morsel fit for the gods.—Midland Farmer.

THE INTELLIGENT JUROR.

One Who Had to Inquire the Meaning of "Plaintiff" and "Defendant."

It is a common and natural practice of lawyers in addressing a jury to single out one member who seems to them the most intelligent, and to deliver their appeals to him. They usually feel that if they can impress him, his influence will be valuable in its effect upon the other members. If they make a mistake they rarely discover it, says the New York Sun. But the stenographer of one division of the supreme court tells an incident of a mistake that was found out.

All the testimony in a case had been taken, the lawyers for both sides had summed up, and the judge had charged the jury, when up rose the intelligent juror whom both counsel had singled out as the recipient of their impassioned appeals. He wanted the court to give him some information.

"I have been bothered a good deal," said the juror, "about two words the lawyers use here all the time."

"What are they?" asked the court, expecting to be called upon to expound recenter alios acta or a fortiori, or some other dead terms.

"Why, 'plaintiff' and 'defendant,'" said the juror. "I don't just know what they mean."

HIS WIFE'S FAULT.

They were speaking of the pessimistic member, relates the New York Times.

"He never looks on the bright side," said one.

"No," added another. "Moreover, if there's any way for him to snift the blame for his misfortunes on others, rest assured he'll do it."

"Quite so," concluded a third. "Why, the other day they told me of his wife's devoted nursing of him during his recent attack of rheumatism. In spite of his faultfinding, his spouse did everything she could to alleviate his pain. Often his sufferings would cause the poor thing to burst into tears as she sat by his bedside. Well, one day a friend dropped in to see how the invalid was getting on.

"'Badly, badly,' wailed the pessimistic one. 'And, do you know, it's all my wife's fault.'

"'Impossible!' gasped the friend in surprise.

"'Quite true, I assure you,' murmured the sick man. 'It is this way. Damp places are bad for me; yet there is that woman sits and cries just to make the air moist.'"

Birth of a Great American Railroad.

May 17, 1903, marked the Fiftieth Anniversary of the incorporation of the New York Central Railroad; a fact interesting in the history of the State of New York, for it was the consolidation of the ten separate small roads into one line, that formed a continuous route from Albany on the east to Buffalo on the west, was the beginning that made possible the enormous industrial and commercial development in the country contiguous to it.

Articles of agreement were filed May 17, 1853, the first Board of Directors was elected July 6th, and the whole line delivered to the new company August 1st, 1853; insuring better service, more complete connections between all points, and a more general stimulus to development than was possible under separate and rival corporations. This also opened the way for the consolidation of the New York Central Company with the Hudson River Railroad in 1869, which event presaged that era of wonderful progress in the undeveloped west, for it created a direct line from the ocean to the inland seas, known as the great lakes, and brought distant territories into close connection with the seaboard.

It is a picturesque fact that this line traverses the one break in the whole Appalachian chain between the Gulf of Mexico and the St. Lawrence River, and it would seem as if Nature meant this to be a roadway for travel. Certainly the Indian found it so, for the Mohawk trail, the pathway of the confederated Iroquois tribes, is almost identical with the New York Central Railroad of to-day. This trail was also the pathway of war during the French and Indian and the Revolutionary Wars, and later, in its offering of easy travel, it lured the pioneers of the West to the Mohawk Valley, which is so rich to-day with the product of agricultural industry, on to broad and fallow fields of the Genesee, to build up and develop the traffic of the west upon the great lakes.

It is a far cry indeed from that primitive little line of the New York Central of fifty years ago to the great Railroad of to-day with its Twentieth Century limited, speeding like the wind, carrying its passengers on luxurious palace cars, over smooth roadbeds, with a scarcely perceptible jar, and fifty years of progress could not find a better illustration than is related in an interesting letter of reminiscences written by Mr. Joshua Wilber, of Lockport, New York, describing railroad travel from New York in 1839.

The writer says: "We took the cars on State Street in Albany; these cars were drawn to the city line by horses, for locomotives were not then allowed in the city. The cars were of the ancient pattern, entered by doors on the side, with seats across the car, the passengers facing each other, as in the old-fashioned stage coaches.

"The speed was tremendous—about twelve miles an hour. Arrived on the ridge opposite Schenectady, our cars were let down an incline plane, secured to a large rope cable, the other end being attached to the cars weighted with stone, which were drawn up on a parallel track as we went down. At Schenectady we changed cars and traveled west to Utica, reaching there in the afternoon. That was then the end of railroad travel.

"A canal packet was boarded which landed us in Syracuse next morning. There another packet was taken for Rochester, which we reached early the following day. A third packet brought us from Rochester to Lockport in six teen hours.

"The time consumed in coming from New York City to Lockport was nearly four days, being on the move all the time, except the night spent at Albany.

"Not long after the roads built from Albany westward, and from Buffalo eastward met, and a continuous line was formed, but with many changes of cars and other inconveniences.

"Then the Hudson River road was opened, and Buffalo and New York became neighbors."

Hope is a vigorous principle; it sets the head and heart to work and animates a man to do his utmost.—Colher.

ABERDEEN, WASH.—I had a bad pain in my back; I could hardly walk or stand down. I could not write for sample, but got a fifty-cent box of druggist, and they have made me all right. No other medicine did me any good.—ARL. CARSON, 55 1st St., East.

CHICAGO, ILL.—When I received the sample of Doan's Kidney Pills I was suffering terribly with my back, was sick and unfit to do anything. The several remedies I had used, though highly recommended, did no good, but rather irritated the trouble and made me worse. Before I had used up the sample I was feeling so much better that I got more from the drug store. I could not sleep at night. Had to get up six or eight times, and the urine was so red, would almost think it was part blood—there was a thick sand, like brick-dust sediment. I cannot tell one-half that I suffered, nor how good I feel now that I am cured by Doan's Kidney Pills; but here I am, sixty-six years old, able to do my own work, feeling well as I did twenty years ago, for which I thank Doan's Kidney Pills ten thousand times.—Mrs. E. T. GOULD, 914 W. Lake Street. Doan's Pills cure when others fail.

Miss Rose Peterson, Secretary Parkdale Tennis Club, Chicago, from experience advises all young girls who have pains and sickness peculiar to their sex, to rely on Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

How many beautiful young girls develop into worn, listless and hopeless women, simply because sufficient attention has not been paid to their physical development. No woman is exempt from physical weakness and periodic pain, and young girls just budding into womanhood should be carefully guided physically as well as morally.

If you know of any young lady who is sick, and needs motherly advice, ask her to write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., who will give her advice free, from a source of knowledge which is unequaled in the country. Do not hesitate about stating details which one may not like to talk about, and which are essential for a full understanding of the case.

Miss Hannah E. Mershon, Collingswood, N. J., says:

"I thought I would write and tell you that, by following your kind advice, I feel like a new person. I was always thin and delicate, and so weak that I could hardly do anything. Menstruation was irregular.

"I tried a bottle of your Vegetable Compound and began to feel better right away. I continued its use, and am now well and strong, and menstruate regularly. I cannot say enough for what your medicine did for me."

How Mrs. Pinkham Helped Fannie Kumpe.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it is my duty to write and tell you of the benefit I have derived from your advice and the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The pains in my back and womb have all left me, and my menstrual trouble is corrected. I am very thankful for the good advice you gave me, and I shall recommend your medicine to all who suffer from female weakness."—MISS FANNIE KUMPE, 1922 Chester St., Little Rock, Ark. (Dec. 16, 1900.)

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will cure any woman in the land who suffers from womb troubles, inflammation of the ovaries, kidney troubles, nervous excitability, nervous prostration, and all forms of woman's special ills.

BOTH Lexington and Louisville were billed for hangings, last Friday, but Louisville only filled the appointment.

The Augusta Chronicle installed a new Country Campbell press, last week. The Chronicle is a good and prosperous county paper.

SENATOR HANNA declares that he will not be a candidate for President, and that Roosevelt will be nominated by acclamation.

THESE Breathitt county fellows who engaged in that bloodless pistol duel, one day last week, were not up in marksmanship with the average mountain feudist.

DR. J. T. SCOTT, of Grant county was nominated for the legislature at the primary election on the 9th inst., defeating his opponent, Homer J. Northcutt, 72 votes.

A great deal of money has been spent on the White House just at a time when it is practically demonstrated that we can get along very well without a President in it.—Enquirer.

MCCARTHY, the Lexington wife murderer who was to have been hanged last Friday at 8 a. m., cheated the gallows by taking a dose of poison shortly after Thursday midnight.

TENNESSEE State officials have gone to Washington to push the claim of the State against the Federal Government for $1,000,000 growing out of the confiscation of railroad properties during the war.

SOIL capable of growing tobacco equal to that in Cuba has been found by the Agricultural Department in Texas; Alabama and South Carolina. Secretary Wilson says it also exists in other Southern States.

THE Illinois Legislature has passed the agricultural college bill, which appropriates $135,000 annually for the work of the experiment station, for live stock improvements, soil fertility investigations, etc. Illinois will now be able to bound.

IT is claimed that the action of the Republican State Committee calling the convention to nominate a State ticket to meet in Louisville, is a blow to the aspirations of Attorney Pratt to the Republican nominee for Governor. The machine is against Pratt.

ABOUT one hundred thousand votes were polled at the primary election on the 9th inst. Never before in the history of Kentucky did as many members of any political party participate directly in naming the nominees of the party to be voted for at the regular election.

THE Democrats of Boone appear to be very well satisfied with the result of the recent primary election, and consider the ticket nominated as a very strong combination, well distributed over the state, every section having representation in the person of a good man.

Out of a total of over 200,000 Democratic votes in the State only a little over 60,000 were cast in the primary Saturday.—Blue Grass Clipper. You have a little over half the number. Beckham received over 103,000. The returns were not all in when you made your figures.

A CASE of boodle has broken out in the Massachusetts legislature and an investigation is under way. In this instance it is charged that a senator wanted money as an inducement to him to assist in preventing legislation which was objectionable to a business man, who gave him away.

THE first monument in memory of the Confederate soldiers to be erected in Indiana will be built in Evansville. The members of the Fitzhugh Lee Chapter, Daughters of the Confederacy, in that city, have formulated plans to erect the monument to the memory of the 24 soldiers buried at Oak Hill cemetery.

A KANSAS feeder recently sold the last of 8,400 sheep which he feed the past winter. They cost from $2.80 to $3 10—per 100 lbs, were fed 30-cent corn and $3 hay made an average gain of 23 lbs., began to go to market in February sold at from $5 to $6.25 per 100 lbs., and cleared for feeder over 9,000.

THE growers of Burley tobacco believe that they can combine and accomplish as much in their own interest as did the Iowa farmers, who combined successfully against trusts, and now do the larger part of their buying through an agent. The Iowa plans has proved a success.

AT a meeting of the Republican State Central Committee held in Louisville last Thursday it was decided to hold a convention there on July 15 to nominate candidates for State offices. Delegates will be selected in the counties on the Saturday preceding, and the basis of representation will be one delegate for every 100 votes cast in the last general election.

IT was a very great piece of presumption on the part of that newspaper man in New York City, who wrote Gov. Beckham, asking him what measures he proposed to adopt in the Breathitt county trouble; but the Governor gave him a knockout blow when he answered by saying that when New York discovers a means by which to suppress crime, if he would report, that the plan would be tried in Breathitt county.

AN agreement is about to be made between the Burley Tobacco Growers' Association and the Louisville Tobacco Warehouse Company by which the entire output of the Burley tobacco districts of Kentucky, Indiana, Ohio and West Virgina, will be handled in Louisville. The association will buy from the growers at a standard price fixed for five years in advance. The warehouse contract involves the handling of 140,000 hogsheads each year.

AT Richmond, the bazar which has been held for the benefit of the Jefferson Davis memorial fund is expected to net about $22,000, and this amount, with the $48,000 in the treasury, will practically complete the sum which the ladies having the matter in hand have aimed it. It is understood that the form of memorial is not likely to be an arch, as a handsome monument can be ereected for $70,000, whereas an arch, worthy of the person and cause to be remembered would cost much more.

THE weather bureau crop report says: Early planted corn was extensively killed by the freeze of May 1, in Missouri, Oklahoma and Texas, and the crops throughout the South suffered from the cold weather. Winter wheat escaped material injury. Throughout the cotton belt low temperatures have been detrimental in retarding germination and growth, while drouth continues in Northern Texas. Poor stands are generally reported. In the eastern districts planting is finished.

The value of the press in the practical affairs of public life was forcibly illustrated last week. The public was about to look upon the Marcum assassination as an appalling incident of mountain life, that, however deeply regretted, must be borne as a part of the nature of that section. The Courier Journal took the matter up and in both editorial and news columns so plainly adorned the tale with facts, and pointed the moral with truth, that the assassin is not going to escape justice, and the spirit of assassination in the feudal territory will be checked.—Crittenden Press.

ALBERT HALSTEAD, a regular eastern correspondent for the Louisville Evening Post, Republican, says:

"President Roosevelt has successfully broken down all the healthy Republicanism of the South that was built up by President McKinley. In many Southern cities good business men were getting ready to vote with the Republican party, so long as it was managed by such men as Mr. McKinley.

"The great majority of Southern Republicans are against Mr. Roosevelt. But the average Southern Republican will surrender any conviction, if, by doing so, he can attach himself to an office. It is this that makes them cling to Roosevelt at present. They think his nomination a foregone conclusion, and are scrambling for the highest seat on the band wagon. If they thought Senator Hanna, Senator Fairbanks, or any other good Republican, could get the nomination, they would fail in line with the same agility as they are now following Mr. Roosevelt."

Stephen Helm, of Bullittsville, who was an attendant at Lakeland asylum, died there of perotonitis. The remains were interred at Sand Run, last Sunday, in the presence of a large crowd of sorrowing friends and relatives.

While people are condemning the Ben Davis and wondering why it is still planted in this country to the exclusion of other and better apples, we always remember what David Brothers said of it: "It is red and no apple, although it may combine all the good qualities of a dozen of the best varieties, can hope to be popular if it is not red—the public will have none of it. It is large, fine looking and if bruised the spot turns corky instead of decaying. The tree comes into bearing early, is hardy and rarely fails to yield a good crop. A given number of Ben Davis trees in a certain period will give a much larger money return than any other variety. True, it sells for only about half what that queen of beauty, the Jonathan, brings, but then we have the Ben Davis to sell nearly every year, while the others are uncertain quantities. So long as the public demands it and ignores quality why should the fruit grower try to cultivate its taste at his own expense?"—Field and Farm.

Joseph Scott, the registered Jersey cattle breeder of Florence, attended the Case-Walker sale of Jersey cattle, an importation of September 10, 1900, and purchased 4 head—Lady Hamby, 168533; Venus, Kate, 168503; Miss Constance, 161181, and Golden Relic, 161069. For further particulars in regard to these cattle enquire of Mr. Scott at Florence, this county.

Sheriff Allphin will be ready to receive and receipt for 1903 county and state taxes next county court day.

A very durable whitewash can be made to use on the outbuildings and that will last much longer than common lime, which must be made by taking one-half bushel unslaked lime, slake with boiling water, covering it during the process to keep in the steam strain the liquid through a fine sieve or strainer, and add to it a peck of salt, previously dissolved in warm water, three pounds of ground rice boiled to a thin paste, one-half pound of Spanish whiting and one pound of clear glue, which has been previously dissolved by soaking it well and then hang it over a slow fire in a small kettle within a large one filled with water. Add five gallons of water to this mixture, stir it well and let it stand a few days, keeping covered to keep out the dust. Put on hot. Colors may be mixed to this if desired to add to the appearance. One pint will cover a square yard.

THREW RED PEPPER.

The Victim Was Hurried to a Private Hospital Where It Was Said His Eyesight Would Be Preserved —Will Not Prosecute.

Cincinnati, May 16.—Displeased over the outcome of a case in police court early Friday, Mrs. A. E. Leland, whose place of residence is unknown to the police, tried to blind Judge William H. Lueders by throwing cayenne pepper into his eyes. The assault occurred on the stairway of the building at 429 Walnut street, just outside the law office of Lueders & McCabe. It is believed that the woman must have thrown at least a half pound of the pepper into the face of the jurist, on the floor near by and into the faces of Oscar Keidel, an office boy employed by the law firm, and into the face of Robert Grear, a colored porter, who is employed by Theodore Foucar, a saloonkeeper. Mrs. Leland had been in police court Friday morning as a prosecuting witness. She was prosecuting Mounted Officer Ogden, of the local force, on a charge of assault and battery. Judge Hiram Rulison was the attorney for the woman and assisted Police Prosecutor Holmes in the case.

The testimony showed that the woman had thrown stones at the officer and had acted otherwise in such a way that the court held that Officer Ogden was justified in any action of a forcible nature that he may have taken toward her. The officer was acquitted. After the trial in police court was over the woman met Officer Ogden in the city hall corridor and tried to assault him with her umbrella. For this offense she was not arrested, but was allowed to go with a warning.

She left the city hall crying vengeance against Officer Ogden and Judge Lueders. After leaving the city building the woman evidently purchased a large quantity of cayenne pepper. She went to the office of Lueders & McCabe, and remained there until Judge Lueders made his appearance in the afternoon. She appeared calm and did not attract any attention from the Judge's aged father, John H. Lueders, and Oscar Keidel, the office boy, who were in the office. "Bob" Grear, a colored porter, was cleaning the brass railing in the stairway, when Judge Lueders started to ascend the stairway leading to his office. When the judge had almost reached the top of the stairway, the woman took a package from the folds of her dress and with deliberate calmness, said:

"Here, Judge Lueders."

The judge looked up and the woman threw the pepper into his face with all her might, completely blinding the unsuspecting jurist. The pepper also went past Judge Lueders and went into the face of the colored porter. Oscar Keidel rushed into the hallway and the woman threw the remaining pepper in the paper package in his face.

"Oh, my ——!" exclaimed Judge Lueders, as he clasped his hands over his eyes.

"Now I'm even with you," said the angry woman. The screams of the judge and colored porter attracted the attention of Mrs. Theodore Foucar and the members of her household, and they ran down from the third floor. The father of Judge Lueders ran into the hallway and grabbed the woman, who tried to maim his distinguished son. By this time Mr. Foucar had dashed up the stairway and a large crowd had congregated. Special Policeman Tom Neely ran up the stairway and the pepper filled the air to such an extent that he could scarcely make his way to the top. Officer Herman Luechtenberg had a similar experience. The officers took charge of the woman who showed fight and was shoved through a glass partition near by before she could be quieted. A cab was hastily summoned and Judge Lueders and his office boy, Oscar Keidel, were taken to Dr. Holmes' hospital.

The woman was taken to police headquarters on a charge of assault to maim.

Judge Lueders says he will not prosecute his assailant.

CONFEDERATE CEMETERY.

An Ohio Association Refuses to Take Part in Memorial Services.

Columbus, O., May 15.—The Hilltop Improvement association, an organization of citizens in the vicinity of the confederate cemetery at Camp Chase, after a stormy session, refused to participate in the annual services which are to be held next month at the cemetery in memory of the confederate dead. President W. B. Potts had planned for the association to take part in the ceremonies but when the matter was brought before the association it met with stormy opposition. A resolution was at once presented declaring the refusal of the association to participate in the exercises.

Dr. Warner, a member of the association, declared the war was not over. He said it would never be over until the confederate recognized the 14th and 15th amendments to the national constitution. President Potts tried to prevent the adoption of the resolution. He said the confederate grave yard at Camp Chase was the largest of its kind in the north and annually in June the eyes of a united country were on Columbus and this city had gained the thanks of all the people of the southern states because of its care of the graves of the dead confederates. He said he was one of those who thought the war of the rebellion was over. He had been laboring under the impression that the sons of ex-confederates and sons of ex-union soldiers fought side by side in the Spanish-American war and for the protection of the Christians in China. The resolution was adopted by a majority vote.

PISTOL DUEL IN A ROOM.

Kansas City, Mo., May 15.—George E. Spencer, formerly a clothing merchant at Birmingham, Ala., Thursday was shot and killed, and Policeman Stephen Flanagan was probably mortally wounded during a pistol fight in a room in West Fourteenth street. Patrolman Flanagan had gone to arrest Spencer. There were no witnesses to the tragedy, and when persons, attracted by the shots, entered the room Spencer was dead and Flanagan lay unconscious, blood oozing from three wounds in the breast and abdomen. By the side of each man lay a pistol. A half dozen shots had been exchanged.

Spencer had been visiting J. Cox. He had been annoying women and children in the neighborhood and complaint had been made to the police. Spencer was requested to leave the house but refused and the Cox family had moved out and left him in possession. Flanagan lay in wait for Spencer and Spencer, expecting trouble, began shooting as soon as he entered the room.

WAS IN A SNOW STORM.

He and His Party Encamped Sunday Evening in the Bridal Veil in a Grove—Memorable Day in His Life.

Berkeley, Cal., May 15.—The citizens of Berkeley united with the members of the faculty and students of the University of California Thursday morning in tendering a tremendous ovation to President Roosevelt and party. School children, gaily festooned with flowers, assembled on either side of the street leading to the university. The thoroughfare had been brilliantly decorated for the occasion, and when the presidential party passed the gates were completely carpeted with blossoms.

As the president stepped from his carriage and made his way to the amphitheater, he was surrounded by 16 cavairymen. He wore a hood and gown, in conformity with the degree of doctor of philosophy. The presidential party arrived just before the conferring of degrees.

After the cheers which greeted the appearance of the president had subsided the rulers of the student body greeted the head of the nation with the Harvard yell. He gave approval by nods and smiles. President Benjamin Ide Wheeler and Gov. Pardee then conferred degrees upon 400 collegians who sat on the stage with cap and gown. After this the president was introduced by President Wheeler.

Then as the president, attired in black academic robes, trimmed with purple, stepped into the sunlight, President Wheeler said:

"Theodore Roosevelt, by authority of the regents of the University of California, I confer on you the degree of doctor of laws. This is the highest honor the state knows how to confer on you. Its best it gives gladly."

President Roosevelt addressed the assemblage, eulogizing the state, its people and the university, speaking in affectionate terms of his old time friend, President Wheeler.

At the conclusion of the exercises the president left for Oakland, where he was driven through the principal streets, accompanied by Gov. Pardee, Senator Perkins and the reception committee. In front of the high school the president delivered a short address. He was then driven to the water front and took a steamer to the Mare Island navy yard.

Yosemite, Cal., May 18.—President Roosevelt, John Muir and Rangers Leldig and Leonard were encamped in the Bridal Veil Sunday night. Near the banks of the Merced in a grove of pines and firs almost within the spray of the beautiful Bridal Veil falls the chief executive rested after one of the most memorable days of his life. Sunday afternoon the party arrived from the Vernal falls at the Happy isles.

Although the party had been hovering above the Yosemite since early morning, first at the heights of Glacier Point, then above the great panorama wall near the Vernal falls and later at the Nevada and Vernal falls, yet it was their first entrance to the floor of the valley. There were but few there to meet him because this point of entrance was not known to any one, not even the members of his party. He spoke kindly to those there and then came down the valley via Camp Curry and to the Sentinel hotel.

Shortly before 4 o'clock the party was seen approaching the Sentinel hotel. A few moments later the president alighted and for a few minutes he spoke pleasantly to a few members of his party.

"We were in a snow storm last night, and it was just what I wanted," said he, smiling. The president was dressed in a khaki suit, army hat and around his neck was a dusty-looking handkerchief much the worse for wear.

"This is the one day of my life," said he, "and one that I will always remember with pleasure. Just think of where I was last night. Up there," pointing toward Glazier Point, "amid the pines and silver firs in the Sierran solitude, in a snow storm, too, and without a cent. I passed one of the most pleasant nights of my life. It was so reviving to be so close to nature in this magnificent forest of yours."

Near the Jorgensen studio, 200 feet up the river, a small boy said, "Hello, Teddy." The president stopped his horse and a frown darkened his face. He rode up to the boy, the dignity of the president gone and in its place the face and severity of the father and parent. He gave the youngster a short lecture on manners that he will never forget.

Sunday was a hard day for the president. Since early morning he had been in the saddle viewing and admiring some of the grandest scenery in the world. Tuesday morning he took the Raymond limited stage at 6 o'clock, lunched at Wawona and will arrive at Raymond in the evening, where his special train awaits him.

A Beautiful Young Society Woman's Letter.

St. Paul, Minn.
531 Wabasha St.

Dr. Hartman, Columbus, O.,
Dear Sir:

"I took Peruna last summer when I was all run down, and had a headache and backache, and no ambition for anything. I now feel as well as I ever did in all my life, and all thanks is due to your excellent Peruna."—Bess F. Healy.

The symptoms of summer catarrh are quite unlike at different cases, but the most common ones are general lassitude, played-out, tired-out, used-up, nervous feelings, combined with more or less heavy, stupid, listless, mental condition. Relish for food and the ability to digest food seems to be lost.

Skin eruptions, sallow complexion, biliousness, coated tongue, fitful, irregular sleep, help to complete the picture which is so common at this season.

Peruna so exactly meets all these conditions that the demand is so great for this remedy at this season of the year that it is nearly impossible to supply it.

If you do not receive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

POISONED WHISKY.

Five Express Handlers Partook of It and Became Sick.

A Memphis Woman is Suspected of Sending the Package to a Cincinnati Woman—Bottle Became Broken in the Warehouse.

Cincinnati, May 15.—Five men, freight handlers, were poisoned by drinking poisoned whisky Wednesday night. The men were employed at the Adams Express Co.'s warehouae, at Butler street and Friendship alley, in handling goods they came across a broken package which contained, as they thought, a bottle of whisky. The five men partook of the contents and soon became deathly sick. One of the men, John B Flicker, died and the others recovered.

The bottle was sent from Memphis, Tenn., it is alleged, by Mrs. Lizzie McCormick to Mrs. Kate Nobbe, of this city.

Mrs. Nobbe believes that Mrs. McCormick sent her the poison in a fit of jealousy. The handwriting of the woman who has written alleged objectionable letters to Mrs. Nobbe and the handwriting of the address on the bottle are similar.

Mrs. Nobbe at police headquarters stated that Mrs. McCormick was a housekeeper for her brother-in-law, Edwin Pell, saloonist, of Memphis.

Memphis, Tenn., May 16.—Upon request of the state the habeas corpus proceedings for the release of Mrs. McCormick was continued until Tuesday, May 19. The request was made upon the ground that the requisition papers could not be secured until that time. Mrs. McCormick was taken to the Selby county jail.

Detective Al Sweeney, of Cincinnati, reached Memphis Friday morning and held a long conference with Mrs. McCormick. She told the Queen City officer that she had changed her mind and would not go to Cincinnati without requisition papers.

Detective Childs has sworn to the warrant, charging murder, here. If Mrs. McCormick is released she will be rearrested on charges of being a fugitive from justice and administering poison. There is no possible chance at this time to hold Pell. A thorough search of the Pell house is to be made after the habeas corpus trial.

Pell says both Mrs. McCormick and Mrs. Nobbe, his sister-in-law, are insanely jealous and that both want to marry him. He will marry neither one, he says, but his preference is Mrs. McCormick. He says the person guilty of the poison crime should be punished, but he likes Mrs. McCormick and will stick to her. He is well to do. All Memphis is intereated in the case. The people here say the woman should be sent to Cincinnati to clear herself.

Cincinnati, May 16.—The widow of John Ficker, who was killed by drinking from the contents of the broken express package, swore out a warrant for Mrs. McCormick Friday afternoon, and it will be sent along with the requisition papers. Chief Millikin received a message from Gov. Nash that he would issue requisition papers to bring Mrs. Elizabeth McCormick from Memphis to Cincinnati. It is possible that Mrs. Ficker will go to Memphis with an officer later to appear at the hearing of Mrs. McCormick.

Memphis, Tenn., May 18.—The local police force with the assistance of Detective Al Sweeney and Lieut. Renkert, of Cincinnati, are daily gathering new evidence in connection with the bottle of poisoned whisky which was sent from this city to Mrs. Kate Nobbe, of Cincinnati.

Lieut. Renkert arrived in the city Sunday morning bringing with him the pasteboard box in which the deadly bottle of whisky was forwarded. Upon close examination it was discovered that the name of L. P. Sutton was written upon the bottom of the box. Sutton keeps a grocery store about four squares from the home of Edward Pell, where Mrs. Lizzie McCormick was arrested. Upon this information the police are working and they seem confident that it will lead to the uncovering of additional information of value.

Nashville, Tenn., May 18.—Gov. Frazier Sunday received by mail a requisition from Gov. Nash, of Ohio, for Mrs. Lizzie McCormick, of Memphis. Mrs. McCormick is wanted in Cincinnati on a charge of murder in connection with the package of poisoned whisky which caused the death of John B. Flicker, an employe of the Adams Express Co. at Cincinnati. Gov. Frazier stated Sunday that he would act on the requisition Monday.

M'CARTY TOOK POISON.

Died Shortly After the Hour Set For His Execution.

Lexington, Ky., May 16.—Wm. McCarty, white, aged 32, who was to have been hanged here at 8 o'clock Friday morning for the murder of his wife, Lucy Hubbard, took poison about 1 o'clock Friday morning and at the hour of execution his condition was such that Sheriff Wilkerson postponed the hanging indefinitely. The murderer, however, died at 8:22 o'clock, and his remains were turned over to the undertaker. McCarty was noticed at midnight to have what appeared to be a capsule between his fingers, and the death watch, Alexander McKeever, notified Jailer Wallace. A search was made of his cell and clothing, but nothing found. The murderer was then locked outside the cell in the hallway. An hour later he called for a drink of whisky. Ten minutes later he asked for another drink, and Jailer Wallace insisted that he take a cup of coffee, to which he agreed, and this was given him. McCarty then lay down on the couch and within a few minutes he was noticed to be breathing heavily. A doctor was summoned. He continued to sink, dying shortly after the hour set for his execution.

It is said that Death Watch McKeever and William McCarty, the dead man, were school boys together.

County Judge F. A. Bullock and County Attorney W. P. Kimball announce that, under the law, the persons who furnished McCarty the poison are guilty of murder and they will begin investigation of the case Saturday morning. Police and detective authorities have been put to work on the case. Both have suspicions and will not announce them. It is certain that McCarty did not have poison concealed when put into jail, making it necessary for some one to have supplied it. It is proposed to make the investigation exhaustive. The governor was notified and approves that course.

RECEIVED CRUEL TREATMENT.

Investigated Italian Laborers' Complaints in West Virginia.

Washington, May 16.—Mr. Speranza, secretary of the society for the protection of Italian immigrants of New York, who has been in West Virginia for several days investigating complaints of ill treatment made by a number of Italians who went to West Virginia to work on a railroad, stopped in Washington Friday on his way back to New York and acquainted Senor Mayor des Planches, Italian ambassador, in a general way of the facts ascertained. Mr. Speranza will prepare a statement of the facts as he found them.

Mr. Speranza asserts that he has corroborative evidence to support the charges which have been made by Italian laborers. These laborers said that they left work and went to Brickley and that they were tied to a mule to be dragged to work. Speranza says the laborers' hands were tied in a grand jury room at Brickley, and that this was done under the direction of a Mr. T. C. Harmon, a sub-contractor. A justice of the peace is said to have cut the ropes. The district attorney, he added, had promised to bring the matter to the attention of the grand jury.

STRIKERS RIOTING.

At Least 35 Men Were Injured at Bridgeport, Ct.

Another Such Outbreak Will Make the Calling Out of the State Troops Inevitable—Sheriffs and Police Were Powerless.

Bridgeport, Ct., May 18.—The attempt made by the officials of Connecticut Railway and Lighting Co. to run their cars with non-union men Sunday resulted in a riot in which at least 35 men were injured. The sheriff says that another such outbreak as occurred Sunday will make the calling out of the state troops inevitable. At the present time it is possible that no county sheriff will supercede the police in the control of the city.

Sunday morning six trolley cars were started out on the Barnum and Stato street lines. There were large crowds around the car sheds at the time the cars were manned by 12 of the 130 strike breakers brought to this city Saturday by the trolley company. There was no disturbance of any kind for a couple of hours. When the first car, however, had completed its third round and was directly in front of the Wheeler & Wilson factory, where a crowd of at least 1,000 persons had gathered, a bombardment of stones began. Deputy Sheriffs Hendrue and Plumb, who were riding on the car, plunged into the crowd to arrest a man whom they had seen throwing a stone. He was seized, and with considerable difficulty dragged 50 feet to the car. The stone-thrower was a big fellow and struggled so fiercely that a policeman who was standing nearby went to the assistance of the sheriffs.

Immediately Mayor Mulvihill was seen hurrying through the mob. He rushed up to the policeman and ordered him to take his hands off the prisoner. He then told the deputy sheriffs that they had better let the man go. During the argument the stone-thrower wrenched himself free and dashed away. In the meantime stones were flying in a shower, and one of them struck Mayor Mulvihill on the head, bruising it badly. The two sheriffs jumped on the car and ordered the motorman to proceed to the car sheds, a quarter of a mile distant. The bombardment did not abate. The stone throwing soon became so furious that the sheriffs drew their revolvers and fired five shots in the air. This caused the bombardment to let up a little and the car reached the barns and was run inside. The other five cars, operated on the same streets, received exactly the same treatment, as they followed the first car into the car barns.

When the last car had passed within the doors there was a crowd of 4,000 people gathered in a vacant lot opposite and violence once more broke loose. Brickbats, stones and everything that could be thrown were hurled at the barns and anything that belonged to the company in the vicinity.

Mayor Mulvihill sent for Chief Coffin, of the fire department. After a short consultation the latter ordered out an engine company with a steamer and line of hose. Superintendent Birmingham also ordered every available man to the spot to co-operate with the firemen and soon a stream was being played on the mob, which slowly fell back before the water. One of the strike breakers was assisting the firemen in holding the hose when a well-directed brick struck him on the head and knocked him to the ground senseless. When the mob had dispersed the firemen and extra policemen were ordered back to their quarters and the regular detail remained guarding the car barns.

Gilman, president of Carnegie institute, declared that similar meetings should be held in all parts of the United States to the end that the public opinion of this country should compel Russia to adopt a humane policy. Letters from many people throughout this country denouncing the outrages were received.

A series of resolutions were adopted calling upon the United States to "Bring such influences to bear on the Russian government as may tend to bring about a cessation of these inhumanities" and upon members of congress to protest "Against the outrages to which the Jews of Russia are subjected".

A quarrel followed and Hager put a bullet through Strong's coat. Strong [illegible] warrant issued and Deputy Elijah Noble undertook to serve it, finding Hager at Comb's drug store. Hager declined for reasons not known to submit to arrest and walked away. When about 30 paces Noble ordered him to halt. Hager ignored the order and Noble fired. Hager wheeled with a pistol in either hand and fusiladed Noble to cover. Friends of the several parties had armed themselves and were ready to enter the affray had any development warranted interference. In the exchange of shots the glass front of Bohaman's drug store was shattered. Neither of the men were hurt and since friends took no part the incident is considered closed. Ashland, Ky., May 14.—When it was learned that J. W. Mahan & Co., operating the planing mills at Normal, had employed two non-union men, all the employes struck. The company is negotiating with the men, and have agreed to discharge two of the objectionable parties.

Quarrymen Badly Injured.

Paris, Ky., May 14.—While blasting rock for the Paris-Lexington Interurban Electric line, James Boyle, white; Aaron Norris and Geo. Smith, colored, were blown up Wednesday afternoon at the quarry of Hedges & Adair, and terribly injured. The first two may die.

Appointed a Commissioner.

Frankfort, Ky., May 16.—Col. Roger D. Williams, of Lexington, was appointed by Gov. Beckham a member of the board of commissioners of the Eastern Asylum for the Insane, vice Richard P. Stoll, deceased.

A Destructive Fire.

Shelbyville, Ky., May 16.—Shelbyville was visited by a destructive fire and property to the amount of between $25,000 and $30,000 was consumed. The belief is strong that the fire was of incendiary origin.

The Closing Exercises.

Jackson, Ky., May 16.—The closing exercises of the Lees collegiate institute, lasting four days, were largely attended, between 400 and 500 people crowding the institute chapel every night.

The New Dormitory.

Barbourville, Ky., May 16.—Work has been renewed on the dormitory to Union college. This will be the largest and most handsome building in the city. The school has been running for 22 years and has never had a dormitory.

A New Circuit Clerk.

Versailles, Ky., May 16.—Claude A. Witt has been appointed by Judge Cantrill to fill the vacancy in the office of clerk of Woodford circuit caused by the resignation of Clerk Lewis A. Berry, who has gone to Kansas.

An afternoon paper in Covington appears to think that because the Judges of the Court of Appeals and the lawyers in Kentucky were for Robert Greene for Clerk of the Court of Appeals his defeat was not possible in an honest primary election. In this county the lawyers and Judges were all for Mr. Greene and he had assurance that he would carry the county by from 300 to 500 votes, but when the count was made Chinn had a majority of 129. Mr. Greene was given a fair deal in Boone county, and yet he was beaten, and what happened in Boone happened in other counties, and there is no proof that Mr. Chinn did not win the nomination simply by receiving a majority of the votes polled.

THE ORIGINAL
LIVER MEDICINE

A sallow complexion, dizziness, biliousness and a coated tongue are common indications of liver and kidney diseases. Stomach and bowel troubles, severe as they are, give immediate warning by pain, but liver and kidney troubles, though less painful at the start, are much harder to cure. Thedford's Black-Draught never fails to benefit diseased liver and weakened kidneys. It stirs up the torpid liver to throw off the germs of fever and ague. It is a certain preventive of cholera and Bright's disease of the kidneys. With kidneys reinforced by Thedford's Black-Draught thousands of persons have dwelt immune in the midst of yellow fever. Many families live in perfect health and have no other doctor than Thedford's Black-Draught. It is always on hand for use in an emergency and saves many expensive calls of a doctor.

Mullins, S. C., March 10, 1901.
I have used Thedford's Black-Draught for three years and have not had to go to a doctor since I have been taking it. It is the best medicine for me that is on the market for liver and kidney troubles and dyspepsia and other stomach troubles. Rev. A. G. LEWIS.

VOL. XXVIII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, MAY 27, 1903. NO. 32

County Correspondence.

COMMISSARY.

Bert DeHart, of Rising Sun, and his best lady, Miss Bessie K., spent Sunday at Joe West's.

Mr. Parsons and wife came down last Monday evening, from Cincinnati, for a few days visit.

Doll Wells and sister, living back of Rising Sun, Ind., were Sunday guests of Thornton Weir of McVille.

Alvaland Lora Moyer of Ind., were Saturday night and Sunday guests of Columbus Popham and wife.

Bernard Rogers and wife, of Belleview, spent last Saturday night and Sunday with W. T. Ryle and wife, near here.

H. P. Parsons went to Cincinnati last Sunday. Of course he had an excuse for going. It's unnecessary to state that his little grand daughter came back with him.

Quite a number from here went to Aurora, last Saturday, on the Swan. The trade has about all gone to Aurora, since there is no way of getting to Rising Sun, except by skiff.

Contractors, Charles Dolph and Len Stewart, of McVille, just completed a new barn for Pepper Smith, the workmanship of which proves them to be mechanics of no mean ability.

Mrs. Martha Raues, son and daughter, Henry and Ada, spent Saturday and Sunday with Frank Cantwell near Salem church, in Indiana, Mr. Cantwell moved from here early in the spring.

The many friends in and around Commissary of an old neighbor, John Popham, who, for several years was a resident of this vicinity, will be sorry to hear of his recent and almost fatal illness. Heart failure was the cause.

H. P. Parsons, the Middle creek champion rat catcher, caught another batch of rats this week—25 in number. There is no telling how many he might have caught had the trap been larger. He talks of having a larger one built to order.

The cattle of W. I. Rouse got into his wheat field one day last week, and some good Samaritan turned them out into the road. Mr. Rouse takes this mode to thank him for his kind act, for he would not have known they were in the wheat until night.

Blackberry briers were in full bloom this week, and were white and very beautiful. Present indications are that there will be a bountiful crop of them, but it wont be safe to go into the patches near the Commissary. There has been seen a monster snake in each patch.

Bob Akins, of McVille, engineer on the Swan, returned home Sunday morning from a Louisville hospital, where he has been for a few weeks undergoing treatment for some bladder trouble. He looks quite poorly, but it is to be hoped he will soon be able to be at his post of duty.

McVille has always had the reputation of having the readiest, glibbest, and entertaining talking young men that ever sit down by the side of a young lady. Ten minutes was all the time they required to talk a young lady blind, but one of her young men met with his equal last Sunday morning, when he called on a young lady visiting in the town. She met him at the gate, greeted him pleasantly, and gave him a hearty hand shake, and had a dare-you-bautering-look in her eyes. The young man was game, and then and there the ball opened. Each seemed to be determined not to be out done, and talked until the gate fell off of its hinges, and then agreed to call it a draw. Alf said if his brother, John Ed, before his marriage, had been in his place, she would have had to withdraw.

HATHAWAY.

May 25.—John Mason has measles.

Wheat is heading out, and it will not be long until harvest.

Joe Childress, of Union, was in our little burg last Friday.

R. Lee Huey received wool at his barn near Big Bone, last Friday.

James K. Sebree and wife, were in Rising Sun, last Thursday, shopping.

R. O. and M. M. Ryle sold 150 lambs to George Barlow last week at $4 per head.

Irvin Rue and wife, of Bellevue, were visiting Arch O. Rouse and family, of this place Sunday.

J. D. McNeely sold his tobacco, 1901 and 1902 crops, to O. W. Adams, of Rising Sun, and delivered it at 8c round.

Mrs. Robert Sullivan and daughter, Mrs. Minnie Rector, spent Wednesday with Mrs. Lizzie Horton, of Beech Grove.

James W. Ryle and wife and Geo. N. Smith and wife, of Beech Grove, were pleasant guests of James Stephens and family, Sunday.

There was quite a small acreage of tobacco set in this neighborhood, on account of not having all the land prepared for the weed.

Ye humble servant and family called at the hospital home of Mr. and Mrs. James Setters, and spent Sunday and ate strawberries to a finish.

The members of Big Bone church assembled at the [illegible] day for the purpose of giving it its annual renovating, which was dispatched, we guess, in style and up-to-date.

M. M. Ryle and wife extends to their neighbors and friends their thanks for assisting them in saving their household goods from the recent fire.

After the dry spell that we was having there came a fine rain, last Thursday night, to mellow all of the hard clods for the farmers. It was the hardest rain that has fallen here for some time. Gunpowder got out of her banks and swept the corn fields in the low bottoms, which will cause the farmers to plant them over again. Quite a loss of labor to them.

WALTON.

W. S. Moore has moved to his farm in Gallatin county.

Jas. Saunders, revenue official, was here a few days ago.

Wm. Tillman has gone back to work at Newcastle, Indiana.

Miss Edna Johnson was calling on Miss Ida Johnson, of Beaver Lick, last Friday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. John Van Louven were the pleasant guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Moxley, Sunday.

The town was alive with visitors on Sunday and all looked bright and happy under the influence of the pleasant weather.

Mrs. Susau E. Stephenson departed this life May 18th, 1903, age 60 years. She was married to W. M. Stephenson May 7, 1866. She had been a great sufferer for many months, but bore her sufferings with christian fortitude. She leaves six children to mourn her death, Mesdames Bettie Craven, Ruth McCubbin, Lary Farrell, Arthur, Marion and Emma. They have the sympathy of the community in the loss of a kind and loving mother, whose desire was to live for the sake of her family, yet, when the summon came she was ready and willing to go. She was buried by the side of her husband in New Bethel Church cemetery, after fuueral services by her beloved pastor, Rev. Johnson.

The family desires to thank the kind friends and neighbors for their kindness in their sad bereavement.

'Tis hard to break the tender cord,
When love has bound the heart;
'Tis hard, so hard, to speak the word,
Must we forever part?
Dearest loved one we have laid thee,
In the peaceful grave's embrace;
But thy memory will be cherished,
Till we see thy heavenly face.

A FRIEND.

In spite of many difficulties of various kinds the Walton Graded School has, seemingly, passed from its doubtful and experimental state and become an actual fact in the minds of its patrons and friends. The realization of this fact is due primarily to the indomitable determination of the majority of the people to have better educational advantages in Walton. Their determination has been wisely executed by the Board of Trustees who have put forth their best efforts to provide a suitable building and secure competent teachers. Considering the size of the town and area of the district, the general verdict of visitors is that our building is second to none. Perhaps sufficient time has not elapsed for the formulation of a fixed opiuon of the teachers. As is usually the case with reference to teachers, some say one thing and others another, though in this case, there has been iu the main, a general cooperation with the teachers that has encouraged them and caused them to do their best work under the existing circumstances. The peoples interest in the school was shown by the large attendance of the closing exercises. On Wednesday afternoon, when the program was rendered largely by the little folks, a large and appreciative audience was present; Thursday night, though the weather was very inclement, every available seat was taken and standing room was at a premium.

Without any radical changes in the course of study, etc., the work will be continued next year, and we ask greater cooperation of those who wish a greater success.

Total attendance during the contest of 14 Sundays, 1,694, an average 121. The captains, sisters Alice Cook and Clara Smith, conducted the contest with honor and credit to themselves and the school, having more friends than when they commenced, while the pupils were tired of making an effort that would count during the contest, and, best of all, everyone was in a good humor at the close and ready to aid each other in making preparations for the entertainment, which takes place at I. O. O. F. Hall, on Saturday night, June 13. Come one, come all.

The subject of this notice was most worthy of consideration. She lived a beautiful life, and died peacefully and tranquil, Thursday, May 14, 1903. Her maiden name was Beemon, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Saiathiel Beemon. She was born October 29th, 1861, and was a little beyond the half century mark when she died. She married Timothy Sandford December 25th, 1878. To them were born two sons and a daughter, whom she had diligently trained for usefulness in this life. She acknowledged her faith in the Savior eighteen years ago, since which time she had been his consistent follower. Her faith in the Savior, Bible and the church to which she belonged was deep like the mighty ocean, and as immovable as the eternal hills. She left this world happy in the anticipation of the life upon which she was to enter.

May God, out of His grace bless and comforth he bereaved husband and children, and may we cherish the memory of her who was gentle, loving, kind and true, and emulate her walk in this life.

The remains were interred in the new cemetery at Bellevue at 5 p. m., on the 16th inst., in the presence of a large concourse of sorrowing friends and relatives, who were in deep sympathy with those who mourued the death of a daughter, sister, wife and mother.

The funeral of Mrs. Lewis Conner, who died at her home near Hebron, Wednesday, May 13, was held Friday morning, May 15, at 10 o'clock. The deceased had been enjoying the best of health until a few weeks before her death. She was 80 years of age, and been a member of the Lutheran church since her youth. She leaves 2 sons, 3 daughters, 15 grandchildren, 3 great-grandchildren, and a host of relatives and friends, who mourn her death. Rev. Slater, her pastor, conducted the services. He spoke of her in a most excellent manner, but no more so than she deserved. She was a most estimable, christian lady in every respect, and none knew her but to love her. Not only could she count her friends by the hundreds, but she was the best of mothers and the most indulgent of grandmothers. She had been a widow for more than 20 years. It is sad indeed in one sense, in that the family are bereft of two of their loved ones in so short a time, and happy in another, in that the two are together once again, that only four brief months ago, her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Conner, answered to her last summons. It is said that the good die young, but not so in this case, for there was never a better, nobler lady than Mrs. Ketura Conner. May we say with the greatest of poets, "We are of such stuff as dreams are made on, and our little life is rounded with a sleep." And when the final calling for us all comes, may the angels write on the last page of the book of our lives, that one great word, "peace."

Mrs. Pell's Decoration Day

By EMILY S. WINDSOR.

BY THE aid of the calendar hanging on her wall, Mrs. Pell found that there were 14 weeks before Decoration day.

She was not an adept at mental arithmetic, so that it was quite a lengthy and laborious piece of work for her to calculate that if she saved 12 cents each of those 14 weeks, she would have one dollar and 68 cents.
